A NEW TRADITION:
LEGITIMIZING THE AUTHORITY OF THE TOKUGAWA THROUGH THE HANDS OF JAPANESE NEO-CONFUCIANS

An Honors Thesis
Presented by
Daniel Solomon Keiser

To
The Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures in partial fulfillment of the requirements for Honors in the Major Field

Prepared under the direction of:

Professor Sarah A. Queen, Ph.D., Advisor
Department of History, Connecticut College

Professor Mark H. Silver, Ph.D.
Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures, Connecticut College

Professor Takeshi Watanabe, Ph.D.
Department of History, Connecticut College

Connecticut College
New London, Connecticut
May 2, 2008

Acknowledgments

I would like to extend a warm appreciation to everyone who helped make this project possible. First, I would like to thank Professor Sarah Queen for not only suggesting the idea of the project, but also for agreeing to work with me as my thesis advisor. Thank you for taking on this project with me, despite time being against us, and for your immeasurable support in hashing out something that started as an idea and became a thesis that I believe is truly special.

Next, I would also like to thank Professors Mark Silver and Takeshi Watanabe for their contribution and support. Without their guidance and personal insight, this paper could not have been written. Also, I would like to thank Professor Amy Dooling and the East Asian Studies department at Connecticut College for approving my thesis and allowing me to pursue this personal endeavor.

A special thank you to the Toor Cummings Center for International Study in the Liberal Arts for their contribution and support.

Also, I would like to thank my parents and all of my friends, for their support and patience. Despite having been incognito for almost a semester, everyone has been encouraging and helpful. Whether you read my drafts and offered your advice, or just heard me complain, thank you for being there when I needed you.

Contents

---

1. Introduction: 1

An Overview

I. A Brief Overview of Confucianism in Japan.....2
II. The Tokugawa Conquer the Lands…….....4
III. Why Does Neo-Confucianism Come to Dominate?.....7
IV. Disputing and Diversifying Orthodoxy: The Rise of the Three Schools……..10
V. The Great Learning and the Japanese Neo-Confucian Scholars……...12
VI. Problems of Concern……...15

2. Fujiwara Seika 藤原惺窩: 19

Understanding the Great Learning through the Daigaku Yôryaku 大学要略

I. Introduction…….20
II. Zhu Xi and the rise of Neo-Confucianism in Japan.....22
III. Seika and Sameness…….....25
IV. Deviating from Zhu Xi in favor of Lin Zhao-en…….27
V. Seika on the Great Learning: The Three Cardinal Principles…….28
VI. Seika's understanding of Gewu 格物.....40
VII. Conclusion……...43

3. Hayashi Razan 林羅山: 44

Defining Political Authority and the Neo-Confucian Religious School in Japan

I. Introduction…….45
II. Laying the Foundation: Correspondence with the Shogun….…….....47
III. Razan revises the Master…….58
IV. The Three Cardinal Principles…….63
V. Ideological Struggle: The Nature of Good versus Evil...67
VI. Conclusion……...69

4. Kaibara Ekken 貝原益軒: 72
Making Confucianism Accessible to All through the Great Learning

I. Introduction……..73
II. Contributions to the Tokugawa…….....75
III. Understanding Heart-and-Mind tradition
shingaku 心学.....78
IV. The Evolution of Neo-Confucian Education through the Yamato Zokkun 大和俗訓.....80
V. Ekken Challenges Zhu Xi in the Taigiroku 大義録.....87
VI. Ekken's Works as a Controlling Force for the Bakufu.....92
VII. Conclusion……96

5. Conclusion: 98
The Tokugawa Legacy

6. Bibliography 106