New Judicial Body Proposed

By Kenneth Lankin

A student smashes seven windows in Harkness. Someone saw him leave Harkness with a baseball bat. Several people confirmed this student was roaring drunk earlier in the evening. The incident is brought before the Judiciary Board (J-Board) and it is ruled the incident is not a J-Board case; the vandal goes unpunished. Why? Because a J-Board case cannot be made on circumstantial evidence.

In order to deal with such cases as the hypothetical one cited above, J-Board and SGA have collaborated on a proposal which recommends that a new administrative—student committee be established to handle those cases that are not under J-Board's jurisdiction. The proposal was brought before the SGA general assembly on October 6th, and will be presented to the dorms for a vote tomorrow night.

The following is the proposal as received from Joe Cooper, chairman of J-Board:

The Administration currently has the power to investigate, discuss, and make decisions on how to handle certain social incidents that do not constitute Judiciary Board cases. The power they hold to assert these three functions cannot be sufficiently utilized because it places both the Administration and the Judiciary Board in awkward positions: if the Administration exercises these powers, they are criticized for not consulting the Judiciary Board. If they fail to act at all, faith is lost in both the Judiciary Board and the Administration, and they both become ineffective.

A joint committee, comprised of both administrators and students, would address these problems and effectively alleviate the strain on either body. The committee should be empowered to investigate incidents, discuss various testimonies, and make appropriate decisions. Because the committee would be serving in an administrative capacity, it would, by definition, have those powers that are currently afforded to the Deans. Student participation on the committee would provide a different perspective on the incident, and would maintain student input in the judicial process. The committee would be comprised of the three class deans, the Dean of Student Affairs, the Chairman of Judiciary Board, the SGA President, and two other students.

The committee would serve primarily as a board of inquiry but would have three options for the incident: sufficient evidence is not obtained, the incident would be dismissed. If evidence is sufficient to make a Judiciary Board case, the committee would refer the incident back to Judiciary Board. If overwhelming evidence exists but is insufficient for Judiciary Board, the new committee would have the authority to make a decision. A decision such as this would be final, subject only to the student's right of appeal to the President of the College.

When the proposal was debated in the SGA assembly, two main positions arose. Some, including Paige Cottingham and Alan Spalter, feared the body would exercise too much power over the students and generally felt the proposal was too vague. Others mentioned that the Administration can now do whatever they want in terms of discipline anyway. According to Herb Holts, President of SGA, "They (the deans) can do whatever they want. It's a private school." Therefore this new committee is a way of having student input involved in the disciplinary decision-making process. Such a body would fill a void created by the cases which the Administration refuses to act upon and those cases that J-Board is legally unable to handle.

Cooper said, however, there would be no faculty campus events:

Oktoberfest: Wunderbar!

By Carolene Hughes

The third annual Oktoberfest, held last weekend, was highlighted by the return of Connecticut alumni, and the great fall weather. It was the first time, that Oktoberfest and Homecoming were organized in conjunction with one another. The festivities began Friday night in the new "ConnCave," with the second "Evening of Enchanting Taste," sponsored by the Social Board. It was a semi-formal, "low-key affair" with classical German music. Those who attended had the opportunity to taste seven different German wines and sample bread and cheeses. The wine and food was served by Social Board members, attired in black and white.

Karl Beeler, Coordinator of Student Activities, commented, "It was a nice get-together for faculty, alumni, and students." He noticed, that "more faculty members attended the evening this year, which was nice." Overall, he said he had received a lot of "positive feedback" regarding the event. Unfortunately, freshmen, and other students under 19 years of age, were not allowed to participate, because of the nature of the event, which emphasized the alcohol itself. Beeler thought it was "disappointing for the freshmen" and that their absence took "a big dent" out of the attendance.

Saturday's Oktoberfest, in the Quad, followed the men's soccer game at 2 p.m., and continued until 6 p.m. The nice weather and the om-pah sounds of the Hartford Bavarian Band, making their second appearance at Conn, attracted a large crowd of students and alumni. German beer was provided by Social Board, while the German Club sold international snacks and other traditional foods. Some dorms also participated by selling sundaes, caramel apples, and popcorn. The theme for the Homecoming banners this year was a German coat of arms. The Social Board was able to incorporate the banners into the festivities.

With new funds Palmer library will hopefully be renovated.

Campaign for Conn College

Nets $9.5 Million Thus Far

By Christopher Boyd

A national campaign to raise $50 million for the future of Connecticut College was officially started last week during the Homecoming festivities. It is known as the "Campaign for Connecticut College" and, according to Jane Bredeoson, Assistant to the President, it has already received widespread support: approximately one-third of the $30 million goal has been realized.

Bredeoson said, that the idea for the campaign actually began in December, 1979. "In February of '82, we decided that our official kick-off would be in the Fall," she said. There are basically of Palmer Library; New London Hall, Cro, and other areas, athletic center): $9.1 million.

— Current Operations: $9.5 million.

Bredeoson explained, that the campaign is being run through "basic campaign organizations," in which research is done to find the "potential large givers (or) donors to the campaign. Usually, they are the first whom you solicit," she said. A brochure, entitled "Facts About Connecticut College," compares the endowment per student to that of comparative colleges. Based on that comparison, Connecticut has one of the lowest en-
A Senior's Nemesis

By MB Christie

Have you noticed a change in the Senior's curriculum lately?

Instead of dealing with books, exams, and papers, they are working on resumes and getting interviews. The dinner table conversation has changed from seminar papers to resume formats and tournament looks. Seniors are anxious about their future career prospects. They all have been pouring into the Career Counseling office at double the rate they did last September, and a record high number of students are taking advantage of the January internship program.

Miss Betsy James, director of Career Counseling, suggests the best way to proceed is through networking, commonly called connections. Knowing someone in the field, or having a referral from someone who knows someone in the field, is the best way to get an interview. These connections may be through Connecticut College alumni, family friends and relatives, and any chance acquaintance. Miss James tells the story of how one alumni got a job by writing to the father of a child who had babysat many years before. She stretched the definition of networking but is now successfully employed.

Perhaps the best advice for seniors is to tap all their resources because most employers will give "courtesy interviews" or "informational interviews" to those who are referred. It is important to get an interview, especially for those not advertised. During and after the interview, the student's qualification must be followed up for future employers. Employers may grant a "courtesy interview" but this does not mean that they are bound to employ the applicant. A strong resume emphasizing good field experience and a solid academic background along with an enthusiastic, interesting personality will be favorable to employers. Even if he has no job offers, he should probably refer a good prospect to other students.

MYSTIC PUBLICATIONS

the finest printing including the college voice

Guilt for How Long?

How far back in history must we, as descendants of victims, seek revenge?

I am an American, and my mother, Sister Gabrielle, was telling me the truth. My forefathers were slaves in Ireland. Their forefathers were Vikings despised whose forefathers were savage huns. Am I an American who lives in a nation that the Ku Klux Klan calls home? I can't let loose the banner of Human Beings, while I look a Jew or a black or a Cambodian in the eye, knowing their ancestral scourge. I am guilty. I need forgiveness. My sin is the Argentinean woman walking the massacre of her family. I ask Robert Mahoney, Why should the IRA turn to humanity?

Carolyn V. Egan

Octoberfest: Wunderbar!

continued from page 1

the decoration of the Quad area by flying them over the crowd in the Main and Blackstone domes. Knowlton House received top honors for their banner and a dorm pizza party, and a second place and a sundae party for its members. A new addition this year was the "beer garden" on the Green. This atmosphere was ideal for Oktoberfest.

"By combining Oktoberfest and Homecoming, we were trying to create a fun event that would attract both students and alumni in a relaxed atmosphere, instead of having alumni-only events," explained Trip Scott, Social Board Chairman. One junior commented, "I had a great time. It was a good idea combining it with Homecoming." Another said, "It was a nice all-day social event to see your friends." The idea for an Oktoberfest at Conn originated with Greg McKeeon, '82. He organized the first Oktoberfest for the German Club three years ago, and helped to coordinate for the German Club.

The idea for an Oktoberfest at Conn originated with Greg McKeeon, '82. He organized the first Oktoberfest for the German Club three years ago, and helped to coordinate for the German Club. The Social Board Chairman, Joe Toor, parent of Joanne Toor Cummings, '90, for a new classroom in Palmer Humanities Center in memory of his wife, Harriet. The Social Board Chairman, Joe Toor, parent of Joanne Toor Cummings, '90, for a new classroom in Palmer Humanities Center in memory of his wife, Harriet. The Social Board Chairman, Joe Toor, parent of Joanne Toor Cummings, '90, for a new classroom in Palmer Humanities Center in memory of his wife, Harriet. The Social Board Chairman, Joe Toor, parent of Joanne Toor Cummings, '90, for a new classroom in Palmer Humanities Center in memory of his wife, Harriet.

Continued from page 1

Campaign for Conn College

Average faculty salary between Conn and several comparable colleges. Again, in both of these categories, Conn College is among the lowest.

Miss James told that, for these and other reasons, including the fact that the Social Board's staff, the first students will be applying to college in the fall. Mr. James was second to "Connecticut College" was just starting.

Bredeson said that the goal is to raise $10 million by the end of the 1986, the 70th anniversary of Connecticut College. A letter to a letter from College President, Oakes Ames, to the Faculty Senate, the campaign has already raised $9,590,500. Recent additions to this figure include:

- A Chemical Bank Higher Education Grant of $10,000 per year for the next three years.
- An addition of $50,000 to CIGNA Corporation's $100,000 scholarship program at Connecticut College.

A gift from Harold O. Torr, parent of Janeen Toor Cummings, '90, for a new classroom in Palmer Humanities Center in memory of his wife, Harriet.

That unrestricted gift of $30,000 over the next three years from SNCTC. This is the largest gift which SNCTC has ever made to an educational institution.

An additional $250,000 from Mr. Nathan Cummings in his planned bequest for Connecticut College.

Bill Cibes

State Representative

39th District

Reports To New London

The Appropriations Committee on Sept. 30 gave final approval to a restructuring of the program which provides financial assistance for heating costs during the winter to Connecticut households. Last year the number of applications tripled and the money available in the Energy Assistance Block Grant. Since the Reagan administration has reduced the federal subsidy, the reason was positive: The position was reduced to the largest amount available to each applicant, that assistance could be given to more families. For 1982-83, the maximum benefit in ordinary circumstances will be $600. If money is available at the end of the heating season, additions up to $300 per family may be granted.

In families receiving assistance under the AFDC program or the Social programs for the aged, blind, or disabled, are automatically eligible for the fuel assistance grants, but they must still apply for them at offices of the Department of Income Services. Other households whose annual income is below 150 percent of federal poverty guidelines ($13,950 for a family of 4) are also eligible; they should apply at offices which will be established by TVCCA.

Because funds are limited, there is no guarantee that eligible families will receive assistance. Grants are only available on a first-come, first-served basis. Persons should accordingly apply for aid as soon after November 1, 1982, as possible, and bring in your heating bills as soon as they are received.

DUKE THE FUQUA SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

A representative of the Fuqua School of Business at Duke University will be on campus Wednesday, November 10, to discuss the MBA Program. Interested students may obtain further information by contacting the Career Counseling and Placement Office.

the WAYFARER bike and hike

SALE

SALE

bike and hike

corner of broad and williams

now $149.00

203

$443.8250

394.8250

06320

Closed Sun. and Mon. Tues. Sat. 10-6
Ecology, Recycling, and Dr. Niering

By Michael Schoenwald

"Human Ecology, H says Professor William A. Niering at Connecticut College," is one of the few examples of private student enterprises for 14 dollars.

Dr. William Niering: Ecologist at large.

It is one of the few examples of private student enterprises for 14 dollars.

Happy Birthday to You

By Jennifer Lee Price

Marc Baylin and Steve Jacobson, two sophomores, have founded Happy Birthdays LTD, a company that provides "cake, candles, and singing by the Shwiffs" to Connecticut College students and their parents. It is one of the few examples of private student enterprises for 14 dollars.

According to Swanson, there are several explanations for the low number of women in politics. He feels, that it is "vitally important" to women to get involved politics, but so women must work "within the system" instead of attacking it from the outside. However, just getting into the "system" can be rather difficult.

Swanson feels that politics has traditionally been a "man's field," and that men are frequently the active participants in government. One reason for this dominance is what Mr. Swanson calls "political socialization," one of the ways in which political opinions are impressed on other people. Such "political socialization" occurs, for instance, when a parent's views on women in politics are adopted, in turn, by a child. Swanson also feels that, because fewer women than men hold jobs outside the home, men are more likely to become involved in how the "real world" is governed.

Women who run for office are at an advantage. He said, that a woman is "better able to cope with the daily challenges today. There are not many corrupt female politicians; therefore, women may attract voters who want to "clean up" the political system.

Swanson is supportive of the need for women in politics. Studies have shown that women tend to be more in favor of reduced arms buildup and also more attentive to the care of the environment and social programs than men. He feels that, if more women get involved in politics, there will be an increase in attention to these two issues.

Although women have been attacking the political system "from the outside," Swanson feels that such an attack is necessary before one from the inside of the political system is possible. He said, that the women's movement was the outside force needed to "shake the political system up.

Women now have greater political power to get into politics and have begun to have more of an influence in the political system.

OCEAN PIZZA PALACE
88 Ocean Ave 443-6870
Featuring:
American, Italian and Greek Cuisine
Mousaka - Souvlaki Dinner - Eggplant Parmesan
All Kinds of Pizzas and Subs
EVERY 4 PIZZAS WE GIVE 1 FREE
-Serving Beer and Wine-
DELIVERY TO CONN COLLEGE $10 MINIMUM ORDER

OCEAN PIZZA PALACE
88 Ocean Ave 443-6870
Featuring:
American, Italian and Greek Cuisine
Mousaka - Souvlaki Dinner - Eggplant Parmesan
All Kinds of Pizzas and Subs
EVERY 4 PIZZAS WE GIVE 1 FREE
-Serving Beer and Wine-
DELIVERY TO CONN COLLEGE $10 MINIMUM ORDER

A&N SPIRITS SHOPPE
We Keep Your Spirits Alive
DOMESTIC & IMPORTED BEERS
KEG BEER AVAILABLE
LIQUORS AND WINES FOR MOST APPETITTS
FREE DELIVERY
RIGHT DOWN THE HILL
469 WILLIAMS STREET
NEW LONDON, CONNECTICUT 06320
443-6371
No Peace with PLOT error

To the Editor:

I was most pleased by the appearance of Patrick Kennedy's piece on the Middle East. It is good to see issues of the moment discussed thoughtfully in THE VOICE. Moreover, I find myself in agreement with many of your points. However, in two or three places, I find different conclusions from common points. I agree that "newspaper" actions are a model for diplomacy in the area. I do not agree that the important lesson he teaches is one of "diplomatic success upon military action." Rather, I think the lesson to be learned from Mr. Sadat's diplomacy is that Arab nations, which recognize the State of Israel, will benefit greatly. Secondarily, we agree that it is most important to get "Saudi Arabia and Jordan involved in the peace process.

However, I do not conclude from that the "ball is now in Mr. Begin's court." Quite the contrary, it is now in the Saudi and/or the Jordan court. If either or both were to follow Sadat's lead and recognize Israel, peace would follow in due course.

Ireland: A Conquered Land

To the Editor:

Fascism has become one of those awful words people use in response to unpleasant issues and events. I believe we do not agree with them. Use it is perfectly legitimate and quite unique. The shame is that it is getting people to agree with them, not because they are right, but because they are wrong.

During moments in which I am waiting for the native Americans of New England to come to their senses, I am waiting for the black people of this country to come to their senses, or so students and that which prompted me to write these lines are: I am waiting for the IRA's cause as a just one, however, I will claim that... continued on page 7
By Sally Peters

Have you ever really thought about the many uses of your Connecticut College ID? Well, start. This valuable piece of plastic guarantees you special rates at movies, exclusive admission to campus parties. It is also a very helpful in getting into your friends’ rooms. The steel-spined sourpusses behind the plexiglass to cash a check at the cashier without it. The ID is very helpful in getting into your friends’ rooms. It’s a true comic strip aficionado knows the increasingly popular “Bloom County” will doubt grab the top spot and claim to the King of the Comics. “Boo,” featuring Skyler, the Professor, and Sho is not far behind. Then, of course, there are the old favorites - “Garfield” and “Peanuts.” Conversely, why shouldn’t we get “Maus” and “Bloom County” as extended vacation? Why couldn’t “American Splendor” be the victim of an arsonist? Even in the comic strips, there is truly no justice in this world. One question, though, is what will Garry Trudeau do for the next two months? Will he watch his wife, Jane Pauley, on the “Today” show or will she be silly till noon? Perhaps he’ll start an herb garden, fix that leaky roof over the den, or hop on a political bandwagon. There is the possibility of doing some substantial laundry. One could realistically take up and abandon hang-gliding in eighteen months. Besides, you can only watch so many episodes of “Family Feud” and “The Price is Right” before something starts to snap!

By Perry Karrington

There were times when you didn’t read it because it had too many words. You may also have criticized it for tackling a subject that “too close to home.” You may have said the characters looked too much alike. You didn’t really appreciate it until you got the college. “It” is Doonesbury, and it’s creator, Garry Trudeau, is going to take an eighteen month sabbatical from the comic strip near the end of this year.

This means no more Zonker Harris, B.D., Duke, Roland Hedley, or Mike Doonesbury. The ironic fact is that while Zonker is out on job interviews, his creator is taking a walk from his job.

Naturally, there are some comic strips that will take up the slack during Doonesbury’s absence. The true comic strip aficionado knows the increasingly popular “Bloom County” will doubt grab the top spot and claim to the King of the Comics. “Boo,” featuring Skyler, the Professor, and Sho is not far behind. Then, of course, there are the old favorites - “Garfield” and “Peanuts.” Conversely, why couldn’t we get “Maus” and “Bloom County” as extended vacation? Why couldn’t “American Splendor” be the victim of an arsonist? Even in the comic strips, there is truly no justice in this world.

One question, though, is: What will Garry Trudeau do for the next two months? Will he watch his wife, Jane Pauley, on the “Today” show or will she be silly till noon? Perhaps he’ll start an herb garden, fix that leaky roof over the den, or hop on a political bandwagon. There is the possibility of doing some substantial laundry. One could realistically take up and abandon hang-gliding in eighteen months. Besides, you can only watch so many episodes of “Family Feud” and “The Price is Right” before something starts to snap!

By Patrick Kennedy

Millions of football fans across the country are being deprived of NFL action to feed the ego of one man: Players’ Association Director Ed Garvey. His relentless drive to make more sport and, effectively to become its star, will continue to lose owners money, players, owners, and fans alike, and threatens the survival of the NFL.

The key issue in the NFL Players’ Strike is not whether the players should get more money. Almost everybody, including those on both sides of the bargaining table, agrees that they should. Instead, the main question is how this should be done. Rather than pay the players a liberalized free agency, the players’ union is trying to appropriate 55 percent of the league’s gross receipts, and use that money to pay players according to a wage scale determined by the union. Of course, the league would make more money by cutting the players in half and abandoning hang-gliding in eighteen months.

Garvey argues this system, known as the “Bloom County” rule, is necessary to guarantee the players a fair share of the money, because he says that owners would not bid for free agents regardless of compensation. This is pure self-serving garbage. Tom Cousineau, a star linebacker, who became a free agent without compensation via a quick in the rules, was much better off and brought down big bucks when he put his services on the market. Garvey’s system is because it would give him tremendous power over the game.

Garvey said how much money the players would get. By re-distributing all the players’ money, he would guarantee himself the best players and definitely not take into account intangibles, like blocking, that help a team.

Garvey’s system is characterized by Garry Trudeau’s pattern of behavior. By negotiating the restrictive compensation rule after the old Rozelle Rule was struck down in court in return for a significant management concession. And what concession was that? Better disability protection? Better retirement benefits? No. Garvey traded free agency for a “closed shop,” in essence wiping out their freedom of movement and the players’ right to join the union in one fell swoop but expanding his own power. Who would benefit, the players or Garvey?

Garvey’s attitude toward the players was demonstrated in a recent incident involving the New Orleans Saints. Player representative George Rogers cast an expropriate poll of his teammates, and found, that they were unanimously opposed to the union’s demand. Whereupon, Garvey promptly telephoned Earl Bankhead to chastise him for taking such a poll. Is the union the servant of the players or is it the other way around?
ARTS AND ENTERTAINMENT

hinese Song and Dance: Mystical

By Sarah Butler

Last Friday night in Palmer Auditorium, Connecticut College celebrated the advent of Chinese Song and Dance Week with a program that introduced two distinct styles of colorful dances representing both the traditional and modern aspects of life in the Orient. It was a fascinating and exciting evening of cultural exchange, and the presence of these works from two ancient peoples was welcomed by all.

The program was divided into three parts. The first, entitled "On the Ancient Silk Road," demonstrated dances of the ethnic groups that lived in the area along the ancient silk route during the Tang dynasty. The dances were musically insistent and extremely ceremonial. They featured drumming and a diverse Chinese style marked by delicate hand gestures, music of Chineseness, and swirling of the feet. The costumes were made of silk, decked with precious stones and gold, and illustrated the gracefulness and subtlety of the ladies of the Tang Dynasty.

The second part of the program was entitled "Celebration," displayed the legends, beliefs, and ceremonies in folk activities. The dances were fast and full of vitality, and an emphasis was put on pantomime. Here the performers re-enacted courtling and marriage ceremony of a young couple, hunting expedition on horseback, and the Spring and Lantern Festivals which both contain symbolic steps in the wedding number involving a man and a sash. The men who were married symbolize the audience cheering and clapping in time to the story, as the bride and groom dance.

One of the most attractive aspects of the program was the incredible variety of dances. Many pieces were done in traditional full and full of pagentry, while others were danced with gaiety and vitality. In the latter case, the audience was involved in dramatics, as in the prologue where dancers demonstrated the eternal winds that blow across the desert. Others were light-hearted and humorous as in the dance called the "Blossoms in the Full Moon," that dealt with love at first sight. There was also an incredible array of costumes. Each one was of a vibrant colored silk or satin, and they glowed against the bare black background and exposed the captivating features, the program held the interest of every age group in the audience.

There were a number of small problems however. A few cues were off in the lighting and in the scratchy recording of an American narrator who introduced each piece. Several accessories in the costumes fell off during the performance, and although few lines that the dancers formed were askew, but all these minor problems were insignificant to the audience and even to the performers. The evening was filled with such a warm spirit of mutual appreciation that the audience couldn't resist giving a standing ovation, which was definitely well deserved.

Conn Singing Groups: In Tune

By Chris Rempler

After their performances at Parent's Weekend, Connecticut College's singing groups are becoming quite obvious that Connecticut College's close harmony singing groups, The Shwiffs, the Conn Chords, and The Whiffs, are stronger and more versatile than ever. Over the past few weekends, they have been enthusiastically received by large audiences both on and off campus. Their appearances are adult and professional, yet they entertain with a flair that is both astonishing and refreshing.

Why is everything working out so well? The answer is usually found in leadership, and these groups are no exception. As "pitches" for the three groups, Bet Miller, Laurie Anderson, and Alan Cohen are largely responsible for each group's success, and they have been the focal points of their growth.

Bet Miller, '83, of the fourteen member Shwiffs, is apparently upon blend, a high pitch while creating the beautiful and compact sound typified by the group. Her goals for the year are to make the group as versatile as possible, and to further develop a style of performing that is "showy" and entertaining for the audience. Also, coming up this year, there will be an album, which has been in the works for the past several months.

Laurie Anderson, sophomore, by junior, Laurie Anderson. Recently, the group displayed its prowess by performing during Parent's Weekend with the new coed singing group from Yale, Mixed Company. Laurie believes that the group's sound is constantly improving and her goals include more singing on campus, fundraising through performances at local restaurants and night spots, and increasing the group's current concert circuit to include more universities and colleges. Laurie is particularly impressed with the fact that all the groups have with the college community.

The Co Beaux have been in existence for four years, the last of its founding members having graduated last year. They posses all of the fine qualities men a close harmony singing group should have. Alan Cohen, the Conn Chords' pitch, can be credited for its continuing success. Particularly pleasing to Alan is the fraternal feeling that runs through the group: "All of us have always been brought up to make friends, but the singing groups are now serving that purpose as well." His major goal for the group is to travel more frequently and more extensively, but to let the college and its organizations know that the Conn Chords is always willing to perform on campus.

All three groups pride themselves in the fact that they are helping Connecticut College maintain its outstanding reputation in the arts. By traveling to other universities and colleges, they hope to further the Connecticut College College and its organizations know that the Conn Chords is always willing to perform on campus.

The Co Beaux have been in existence for four years, the last of its founding members having graduated last year. They posses all of the fine qualities men a close harmony singing group should have. Alan Cohen, the Conn Chords' pitch, can be credited for its continuing success. Particularly pleasing to Alan is the fraternal feeling that runs through the group: "All of us have always been brought up to make friends, but the singing groups are now serving that purpose as well." His major goal for the group is to travel more frequently and more extensively, but to let the college and its organizations know that the Conn Chords is always willing to perform on campus.

All three groups pride themselves in the fact that they are helping Connecticut College maintain its outstanding reputation in the arts. By traveling to other universities and colleges, they hope to further the Connecticut College College and its organizations know that the Conn Chords is always willing to perform on campus.

Moses Pfeiffer

Watercolor Artist on Exhibit at the Lyman Allyn

Moses Pfeiffer, an artist who died last year, worked on exhibit at the Lyman Allyn Art Museum until October third. Pfeiffer's works are displayed in a small portion of his many watercolors painted throughout his life. They are small paintings, usually of abstract and various flowers, that have a certain glimmer and elegance to them. They are very simple, but so simple that it is almost boring to look at. He was a close friend of Marin for the summer of '39, and although there is some reflection of Marin's influence, Pfeiffer lacks the viciousness and allusive force that are so predominant in John Marin's work, however, reflects an understanding and love of nature.

One of the reasons for the calm, tranquil attitude reflected by the works was explained by Pfeiffer's daughters, Dorrit Castle and Martha Pfeiffer, who present at the opening of the exhibit on October third. "Even as children," they said, "he would paint in the early mornings between five and seven o'clock. He was the dawn light that created such placidity in his work." His daughters explained many other things as well. They explained that although he was really an architect, he was painting in watercolors that he loved most, and for this reason he would take vacations and paint every summer, in order to be a true painter, one of the few who take vacations. His vacations were often spent at the seashore, consequently making a strong impression on the ocean. He described the technique involved in most of the paintings. He preferred television over oil painting, and in so doing he created a slight, soft appearance, very effective in his paintings of water or the sea. Some of his paintings look haystacked, fortuitous, as if they were done in only twenty minutes. According to his daughters, he felt he would ruin his paintings, if he spent any more than twenty minutes on one painting.

One of his paintings entitled "Marsh Grasses," is a Greek olive tree, but of course anyone can interpret it as they please."
A Conquered Land
continued from page 4
Power Grab
continued from page 5

not be denied. I truly lament the fact that the use of force lies at the core of both Western and Eastern men’s conception of power. Our fate may ultimately turn on this. As far as the Irish question is concerned and the point of my last article, the Irish are a conquered people. The English are their conquerors. If you conquer a people, subjugate them, and time after time attempt to destroy their culture, you had bloody well better expect more than a few bombs to be tossed in your direction. And when they do come, do not play the role of the innocent, holier-than-thou victim. It is nauseating.

Mr. Robidoux also mentioned innocent people. The twentieth century has brutally shown us more than once, that there is no such thing as an innocent person. Conflict between societies and people in this century recognizes no distinction between civilian and soldier. Simply look across the river to Electric Boat.

Mr. Robidoux also claimed that the Irish people do not want the IRA. I strongly dispute this. The concept of the IRA is based on one issue of The Irish Times. However it should be noted, the Irish people upon, threw garbage and kicked the survivors of the Easter Rising in 1916, as they were being lead away by the British. The next week the British began executing the leaders of the Rising and suddenly those same monsters being spit at became martyrs, and heroes to be forever remembered in stories and poetry.

The IRA is no more a terrorist organization than the Royal Marines. They have every right to wage war against the British state. It is their right as a conquered and oppressed people to rebel against the conquering power just as the British are ruled by the rights of the conquerors. There is, however, a Gaelic poem from the 19th century written to the conquerors. Translated it reads:

The world hath conquered, the wind hath scattered like dust.
Alexander, Caesar, and all that have followed in their way.
Tara is grass and Troy lieth low, and even the English perenchance, their hour will come.

Power Grab
continued from page 5

Although the NFL has a similar compensation system in place, they do not extend high compensation to free agents and make it meaningful. If the league were to use the same compensation system in favor of only the right of first refusal, the players would be back in court one day no matter what the union said. The result would be good for everyone—players, owners, and fans. Everyone, that is, except Ed Garvey.

LSAT Blues
continued from page 4

students later, I am perhaps thankful I will not see the abandoned to strive to help completion of the fieldhouse. Connecticut College has been my home, and it saddened me greatly to have that sense of belonging and privacy abandoned to strive to help completion of the fieldhouse.
Men's Crew off on Strong Stroke with New Coach

By Alan WelD

Conn College faces another challenging opponent.

Sophomores, however, which should be indicative of a strong future team.

Conn College faces another challenging opponent.

OPTIMISM OVER THE CREW These same players display a quite a professional attitude toward the game, and provide an excellent example for the new Conn College players.

Homecoming weekend the Camels hosted the State Tournament. Citi Kossman, '84 and Mary-Ann Somers, '86 represented the team in the singles play, and the doubles teams of Blair Nicholson, Leslie Leeming and Taryl Johnson - Cathy Leeming also represented the team.

Cici Kossman lost to a player from Southern in the consolation round, and ended by losing to a player from Bridgeport. Mary-Ann Somers first lost to a player from Trinity, then won on to defeat players from Wesleyan and Central. She made it to the finals of the consolation round, and then lost to the same Bridgeport player as Cici. A freshman from Trinity won the singles. In the doubles, Nicholas Leeming lost to a team from Trinity. They defeated a team from Central in the consolation, and then lost to a team from U. Conn. Johnson-Leeming beat teams from Central and Wesleyan, and then lost to a team from U. Conn in the semi-finals. A team from UConn won the doubles play overall.

Tom Boyer is a welcome edition to the Conn College coaching staff, coaching all of men's crew. At 35, he already has 17 years coaching experience, including coaching the West Side rowing club to first place at the 1980 National Championship in the women's flyweight four division. He brings to Conn a winning attitude and a strong love for crew. Boyer also brings a strict training program that the crew team must follow. It is more rigorous than any in the past at Conn College. The workout consist of five days a week the water for 1 1/2 hours, optional Sunday, and seven days a week land training for one hour. This year new equipment for indoor conditioning was placed in the gym.

The team has a new rowing machine and other machines, in addition to the equipment at the Inside Rotunda rowing center. Although Boyer's program includes an only person has dropped off the team and that was due to scheduling problems. All of this hard work should help the crew team in its fall races - the Head of Charles and the Head of the Connecticut.

The varsity and freshman crews are looking forward to next Sunday's head of the Connecticut in Middletown, CT. The most prestigious race of the fall season, this fall, Charles, takes place at the Boston Yacht Club. The varsity crew will be competing in this event along with such teams as Harvard, Yale, and Brown.

Boyer said, "When the new rowing machine is out, the team will have the edge. We need it for the Head of Charles.' The new freshest player, Boyer has high hopes that the varsity heavy weight team will finish among the top 15 out of 40 teams. On the other hand, he is not overly concerned where the freshman crews finish, only that they gain experience. Overall, he expects all of his crews to fare well, and to perform better in the spring.

Still, the coach realizes that "It's a tough year for most of the crew team, and to the issue. Boyer feels that he has never coached any place where athletes are so concerned toward academics as well as athletics.

SPORTS

V-Ball Moves up a League

By Mari Smulies

"It was the season playing the tougher teams in the league, and with the turn out now by playing teams that were fully " said Conn's volleyball coach of four years, Marilyn Davis. As of October 5 the Camels' league record is 1-3, proceeded to win.

Traveling to Clark October 2, the team was defeated by in 4-6, 4-13, 5-15 and Tuffs 1-7, 15-13, 13-15.

Traveling to Clark October 2, the team was defeated by in 4-6, 4-13, 5-15 and Tuffs 1-7, 15-13, 13-15.

"We're really together and it feels good," said starting sophomore Ach. "It's been awhile since we've played so well together." The toughest competition will be the volleyball team in Gelish's opinion will be the Eastern Connecticut state tournament October 22 and 23.

Like many of the women's teams at Conn, the volleyball team lacks a supportive home audience. "We need more support at home," Gelish said. "An audience really makes things better." The Camels' next home game is October 26 versus Brown.

Tonight, October 12, the team travels to Amherst, and Sunday October 14 at Eastern Connecticut .

WOMEN'S TENNIS TEAM poses State Tournament

By Tracy Shipman

Women's tennis at Con- necticut College enjoys the reputation of one of the College's strongest teams and this fall the tradition continues.

There are fifteen young women on the team, coached by Sherry Yesar. This year the team has sight returning seniors, juniors and sopho- mores, with seven new recruits. Thus far their record is 5-1, with wins over Clark 9-6, Mount Holyoke 7-2, Southern 7-2, Salve Regina 7-2, University of Hartford 5-2, and a loss to Trinity 2-7.

The entire team exhibits great skill and depth. Coach Yesar attributes this to the fact that many of the players have grown together over a three or four year period.

These same players display quite a professional attitude toward the game, and provide an excellent example for the new Conn College players.

The team has a new rowing machine and other machines, in addition to the equipment at the Inside Rotunda rowing center. Although Boyer's program includes an only person has dropped off the team and that was due to scheduling problems. All of this hard work should help the crew team in its fall races - the Head of Charles and the Head of the Connecticut.

The varsity and freshman crews are looking forward to next Sunday's head of the Connecticut in Middletown, CT. The most prestigious race of the fall season, this fall, Charles, takes place at the Boston Yacht Club. The varsity crew will be competing in this event along with such teams as Harvard, Yale, and Brown.

Boyer said, "When the new rowing machine is out, the team will have the edge. We need it for the Head of Charles.' The new freshest player, Boyer has high hopes that the varsity heavy weight team will finish among the top 15 out of 40 teams. On the other hand, he is not overly concerned where the freshman crews finish, only that they gain experience. Overall, he expects all of his crews to fare well, and to perform better in the spring.

Still, the coach realizes that "It's a tough year for most of the crew team, and to the issue. Boyer feels that he has never coached any place where athletes are so concerned toward academics as well as athletics.

Soccer Team Loses to Wesleyan

By Robert Kanahle

Two early second half goals provided all the scoring as Wesleyan defeated the Camels 2-0 in Saturday's soccer rivalry, disappointing an eager Octoberfest crowd of Camels'roots.

After an intense start, the place changed noticeably shortly thereafter. The Camels held a slight advantage in the second half, the bigger Wesleyan squad, and gained an advantage of the scoring opportunities. Bert Czchra, Tom Liptack, and Dave Dougherty provided the Camels with their scoring opportunities, while James Crowley and Jason Tatum of Wesleyan, outstandingly on the defensive end. However, after controlling most of the first half, the Camels went into halftime leading 0-0, making for a scoreless tie at halftime.

Wesleyan's early second half goals killed the Camels' momentum, and forced them into a catch-up situation. The first goal was scored out of a scramble in front of the goal, immediately followed by a 2nd goal. The second goal was scored out of a corner kick. Only a few minutes later, the second goal was scored out of a corner kick. The third goal was scored out of a corner kick. The fourth goal was scored out of a corner kick.

As it was, the Camels had never scored at all points. The Camels had never scored any place where athletes are so concerned toward academics as well as athletics.

Litoff Sets Record

Cross Country Running Well

By Ned Bishop

The Camels' Men's Cross Country program has had a good performance on October 2, at the Pop. competitive event held at Worthington College.

Dave Litoff, went in as the pre-meet favorite and showed everyone what they're made of. Litoff took the early lead, passing the mile mark near the second place runner. Litoff covered the 6.2 mile course in 30:18, six seconds faster than the old course record which he set a year ago. Litoff and the second place runner, Alm. went to Babson's Jason Kossman, who ran with the Camels placed 19th in the twelve team field, giving them their first two victories of the season. The Camels' team score of 312 points was earned by Litoff (1st), Geoff Farrell (4th), Peter Foley (5th), Ken Caidigan (31st) and Ned Bishop (62nd).

The Camels' records now stand at 4-4 (dual meets) and 213 (overall). The team is looking forward to the Fish Bowl and the NE.S.C.A.C championships. The team won the Cod Fish trophy two seasons ago, and many of the same runners are still with the team. This will be the first year for the team in the NE.S.C.A.C.