INSIDE:

TERRORIST ATTACK LEAVES CONN REELING

By TIM STEVENS

The campus community rallied together this week in the wake of the terrorist attacks on New York City and Washington, D.C.

Library addition creates a new space for quiet student study, displays Asian art.

SPORTS

Young and talented Men’s Soccer Team begins season strong with win over E. Conn.

Future of Downtown Buildings Uncertain

By Kate Womack

Cabrini Inc., the for-profit branch of the NLCDC, signed a 52-month lease agreement for the Moxie Building in New London.

Architecture Program Welcome On-Campus Studio

By DOUG JACOBS

Students and faculty of the Architectural Studies Program at Connecticut College now have an on-campus studio to call their own, even though the dean of the program said students had been asking for one for years.

Campus Unites in Wake of Attack

By COLEY WARD

The campus community rallied together this week in the wake of the terrorist attacks on New York City and Washington, D.C.

Brooklyn-based office

At night, students gather south of the tower fire relief. This was part of a demonstration that took place around the county.

Conn Student Offers Account of Washington Attack

By TIM STEVENS

As Hilt departed, another student said aloud, “Thank God it isn’t Thursday.” All American Political students work at their internships on Thursdays, the majority of which are located in downtown Washington.

Personal Perspective

By KATE WOODSOME

The College wants to follow the example of some of the other schools that have missing relatives, including one parent.

The College’s board of trustees has made rounds as part of the college’s new Late Night Health Service Review Committee which emphasizes health education, health promotion, disease prevention, and other issues currently faced by students.

The decision to decrease the infant’s hours came at the recommendation of the Health Services Review Committee, which met for the entire academic year of 2000-2001.

The fall, Health Center hours have been cut and health services are being asked to make rounds as part of the college’s new health services strategy.

Young and talented Men’s Soccer Team begins season strong with win over E. Conn.
Health Services Cuts the Logical Solution to a Difficult Problem

The College’s decision to cut Health Services, while unpalatable, is a well justified budgetary choice. Beyond caring a quarter million dollars, the Health Services plan will remove the frequently unnecessary step of sending students to the Infirmary, so that they could then be sent to Lawrence Memorial Hospital.

There are two major myths surrounding the Health Services cut. The first is that intoxicated students come to Health Services at night on their own volition, or are taken by a friend. The second is that granting the clock card is an adequate care system. Neither assumption is the case.

Of the 24 students who were taken to Health Services after-hours during the last ten days, roughly 80 percent were brought in by campus safety. In other words, six intoxicated students intentionally went to Health services in 200 hours. This is not a logical expense for a college — especially a financially struggling college.

The largest criticism of the new Health Services plan is that students will not go to first Health services or Campus Ports when they are intoxicated or for fear of being trashed at the time. The reality is that students went there before and so the judiciary board for underage drinking, and they will not now. By the judiciary board for underage drinking, and they will not now.

The cuts in Health Service hours, instead, have allowed the College to maintain its other, much more commonly used treatment. There are roughly 2,100 nurse visits and 1,000 MD appointments every year. These appointments allow students to get vaccines, take physicals, and receive routine medical care.

Additionally, most students who went to health services, especially those who were intoxicated, were sent to the hospital for proper treatment. Health Services staff members were the only ones to receive any training nor the equipment to sufficiently treat students in emergencies. More often than not, the nurse’s best option was to send a person to the hospital.

In other words, rather than being capable of caring for students, the Health Center had a mostly negative function. It functioned as a way for students to waste time and money. The sad reality is that students went there before and to the judiciary board for underage drinking, and they will not now.

The cuts in Health Service hours, instead, have allowed the College to maintain its other, much more commonly used treatment. There are roughly 2,100 nurse visits and 1,000 MD appointments every year. These appointments allow students to get vaccines, take physicals, and receive routine medical care.

While the clock Health Services in a nice concept in an ideal world, it is certainly not necessary to the functioning of Connecticut College. Student care will not suffer, and the College, in the process, will save $350,000 a poorly spent money.

CounterPOINT

Websites and Magnets No Equal Trade for Legitimate Health Care

The changes is Connecticut College’s Health Plan have placed student health at risk. The new system closes the clinic days. This is not a logical expense for a college — especially a financially struggling college.

There are two major myths surrounding the Health Services cut. The first is that intoxicated students come to Health Services at night on their own volition, or are taken by a friend. The second is that granting the clock card is an adequate care system. Neither assumption is the case.

Of the 24 students who were taken to Health Services after-hours during the last ten days, roughly 80 percent were brought in by campus safety. In other words, six intoxicated students intentionally went to Health services in 200 hours. This is not a logical expense for a college — especially a financially struggling college.

The College’s decision to cut Health Services, while unpalatable, is a well justified budgetary choice. Beyond caring a quarter million dollars, the Health Services plan will remove the frequently unnecessary step of sending students to the Infirmary, so that they could then be sent to Lawrence Memorial Hospital.

There are two major myths surrounding the Health Services cut. The first is that intoxicated students come to Health Services at night on their own volition, or are taken by a friend. The second is that granting the clock card is an adequate care system. Neither assumption is the case.

Of the 24 students who were taken to Health Services after-hours during the last ten days, roughly 80 percent were brought in by campus safety. In other words, six intoxicated students intentionally went to Health services in 200 hours. This is not a logical expense for a college — especially a financially struggling college.

The largest criticism of the new Health Services plan is that students will not go to first Health services or Campus Ports when they are intoxicated or for fear of being trashed at the time. The reality is that students went there before and so the judiciary board for underage drinking, and they will not now.

The cuts in Health Service hours, instead, have allowed the College to maintain its other, much more commonly used treatment. There are roughly 2,100 nurse visits and 1,000 MD appointments every year. These appointments allow students to get vaccines, take physicals, and receive routine medical care.

Additionally, most students who went to health services, especially those who were intoxicated, were sent to the hospital for proper treatment. Health Services staff members were the only ones to receive any training nor the equipment to sufficiently treat students in emergencies. More often than not, the nurse’s best option was to send a person to the hospital.

In other words, rather than being capable of caring for students, the Health Center had a mostly negative function. It functioned as a way for students to waste time and money. The sad reality is that students went there before and to the judiciary board for underage drinking, and they will not now.

The cuts in Health Service hours, instead, have allowed the College to maintain its other, much more commonly used treatment. There are roughly 2,100 nurse visits and 1,000 MD appointments every year. These appointments allow students to get vaccines, take physicals, and receive routine medical care.

While the clock Health Services in a nice concept in an ideal world, it is certainly not necessary to the functioning of Connecticut College. Student care will not suffer, and the College, in the process, will save $350,000 a poorly spent money.

CounterPOINT

Websites and Magnets No Equal Trade for Legitimate Health Care

The changes is Connecticut College’s Health Plan have placed student health at risk. The new system closes the clinic days. This is not a logical expense for a college — especially a financially struggling college.

There are two major myths surrounding the Health Services cut. The first is that intoxicated students come to Health Services at night on their own volition, or are taken by a friend. The second is that granting the clock card is an adequate care system. Neither assumption is the case.

Of the 24 students who were taken to Health Services after-hours during the last ten days, roughly 80 percent were brought in by campus safety. In other words, six intoxicated students intentionally went to Health services in 200 hours. This is not a logical expense for a college — especially a financially struggling college.

The College’s decision to cut Health Services, while unpalatable, is a well justified budgetary choice. Beyond caring a quarter million dollars, the Health Services plan will remove the frequently unnecessary step of sending students to the Infirmary, so that they could then be sent to Lawrence Memorial Hospital.

There are two major myths surrounding the Health Services cut. The first is that intoxicated students come to Health Services at night on their own volition, or are taken by a friend. The second is that granting the clock card is an adequate care system. Neither assumption is the case.

Of the 24 students who were taken to Health Services after-hours during the last ten days, roughly 80 percent were brought in by campus safety. In other words, six intoxicated students intentionally went to Health services in 200 hours. This is not a logical expense for a college — especially a financially struggling college.

The largest criticism of the new Health Services plan is that students will not go to first Health services or Campus Ports when they are intoxicated or for fear of being trashed at the time. The reality is that students went there before and so the judiciary board for underage drinking, and they will not now.

The cuts in Health Service hours, instead, have allowed the College to maintain its other, much more commonly used treatment. There are roughly 2,100 nurse visits and 1,000 MD appointments every year. These appointments allow students to get vaccines, take physicals, and receive routine medical care.

Additionally, most students who went to health services, especially those who were intoxicated, were sent to the hospital for proper treatment. Health Services staff members were the only ones to receive any training nor the equipment to sufficiently treat students in emergencies. More often than not, the nurse’s best option was to send a person to the hospital.

In other words, rather than being capable of caring for students, the Health Center had a mostly negative function. It functioned as a way for students to waste time and money. The sad reality is that students went there before and to the judiciary board for underage drinking, and they will not now.

The cuts in Health Service hours, instead, have allowed the College to maintain its other, much more commonly used treatment. There are roughly 2,100 nurse visits and 1,000 MD appointments every year. These appointments allow students to get vaccines, take physicals, and receive routine medical care.

While the clock Health Services in a nice concept in an ideal world, it is certainly not necessary to the functioning of Connecticut College. Student care will not suffer, and the College, in the process, will save $350,000 a poorly spent money.
Reflections

John Turvitt / Tribune

During my junior year of High School, my British Literature teacher instructed us to write various "poisonous" essays in preparation for the upcoming exams. One of the essays we were given, that which significantly influenced my understanding of American culture, was written by the United States ambassador to the United Kingdom, Lyman Smith.

Lyman Smith's essay was a scathing criticism of American culture, its values, and its institutions. He argued that American culture was characterized by a superficiality, a lack of depth, and a preoccupation with material possessions. He also criticized the American tendency to glorify violence and aggression, and his essay included a detailed analysis of the impact of the Vietnam War on American culture.

Smith's essay was a revelation to me. It helped me to understand the complexity and richness of American culture, and it inspired me to think more deeply about the issues that were affecting the world around me. Today, I am still moved by Smith's essay, and I believe that it is more relevant than ever. The themes that he raised in his essay are still with us today, and they continue to shape the way that we think about ourselves and our place in the world.

In the weeks that followed the publication of Smith's essay, I was unable to get it out of my mind. I spent hours poring over the text, trying to make sense of the complex ideas that Smith was presenting. I was struck by the way that he was able to present such a complex argument in such a clear and concise way. His essay was a masterpiece of intellectual writing, and it inspired me to think more deeply about the issues that were affecting the world around me.

I am grateful to Lyman Smith for his essay, and I hope that it will continue to have as great an impact on future generations as it has had on mine. It is a reminder that there is always more to be discovered, and that we should always be open to new ideas and perspectives.

Potential on Post-attack Policy

Ted Connolly / Tribune

American lives will be changed forever by the events that occurred on September 11, 2001. The very soul of America has been shaken to its core, and it is clear that we must redouble our efforts to protect ourselves from further attacks.

In the days following the attacks, I spent many hours reading and thinking about the events that had occurred. I was struck by the way that the attacks had united the world, and by the sense of urgency that was palpable in the air.

I believe that the American people have a unique opportunity to rise to this challenge. We have a proud history of defending ourselves against threats, and we have the resources and the will to do so. But we must act now, before it is too late.

First and foremost, we must focus on preventing future attacks. We must strengthen our borders and increase our intelligence gathering efforts, so that we can detect and deter potential attackers before they can do us harm.

Secondly, we must rebuild our cities and our culture. We must work together to create communities that are safe and welcoming, and that are built on the values of tolerance and respect.

Finally, we must remember the sacrifices of those who have died in this tragedy. We must honor their memory, and we must work together to ensure that their sacrifice was not in vain.

In the coming days and weeks, we must be united in our resolve. We must stand together and face this crisis with determination and courage. We must not let this attack divide us, but let it bring us together.

I am confident that we can rise to this challenge. We have the strength and the will to do so. Let us not waste this moment, but let us use it to make our country stronger and our world safer.

In conclusion, I believe that the events of September 11 have changed the world as we know it. We must rise to this challenge and work together to ensure that our country and our world are stronger as a result.
The Deep End

The Deep End

Rating: R
Length: 1 hour 10 minutes
Starring: Tom Cruise, Nicole Kidman, Betsy Brandt
Directed by: David E. Kelley
Rating: B
Summary: A woman out of control while trying to keep her disintegrating marriage from falling apart.

The Deep End follows the story of Paula, a woman who has fallen apart after her husband leaves her. She is struggling to keep her life together while trying to maintain a facade of normalcy.

When The Golden Won't Work, Try Peking Tokyo

Located at: 126 Guggenhein Mall, Mystic, CT
Hours: Sun-Thurs 11am-9pm, Fri-Sat 11am-10pm

By Air: New York
By Sea: Mystic

Warning: To the old-timers and Old Mystic Village and built within the New Mystic Peking Tokyo is a treasure in Mystic. The restaurant has a great selection of Chinese food and is a must-visit for anyone looking for a tasty meal.

Ala A Gallery Brings Marie Antoinette to New London

By Kevin Rouse

From September 7, 2001 until October 15, 2001, the Ala A Gallery in New London will be displaying an exhibition of Marie Antoinette's portrait. The exhibition includes original paintings, drawings, and prints of Marie Antoinette, as well as a video of the gallery's interpretation of the theme.

The exhibition takes place in the gallery's main exhibition space and includes a video installation of the artist's interpretation of Marie Antoinette's life. The exhibition also features original works by the artist, including paintings, drawings, and prints, as well as a video installation of the artist's interpretation of Marie Antoinette's life.

Ala A Gallery is located on State Street in New London, CT. For more information, call (860) 444-2500.
Out of the Closet and Embracing the Backstreet

BY ... 9:15
€1:30 3:45) 7:2&9:30, Mon- Thu (4.3 " .
.._--
New London Shopping Center
443-4440
&
Bottles Now in Stock

Unfortunately we saw our hopes dashed as the Boys A.J., MacAlroney-alcohol and arrested them on stage.

In the end, however, we did get one, and not only because it was emotional and tangible excitement of the crowd. Everything was perfect and nothing could spoil the high we were on, except for Slapstick.

After Slapstick (thankfully) departed, we watched the show up for a few minutes, and then the lights shut off. We exclusively devoted what BSBI hit would kick off the show when suddenly we were surprised by the huge screen showing images of seven, soon escaping, attracting fans and accompanying bands. Before we had a chance to evaluate the situation, the smoke cleared and before us the crowds that had made BSB fans can sit around and about to. It was a nice segue as Brian then thanked the fans for their support, particularly in light of what the band had gone through over the summer. It was a nice segue as Brian then showed how BSB are on stage.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The show had the feel of a band that clearly has no shortage of support from their audience, and for this jaded college student, it was time to see.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plague our planet”.

The boys kicked off the show with a spirited rendition of “Everybody,” an upbeat tune from the new album that has the fans for sticking with them. From there, they moved into a medley of slower songs, old and new, before finishing off “Everyone” and then singing the song that as Kevin said they “want to do together in an effort to impress people to help deal with the little problems that plagui
Shain Gets New Reading Room, Computers
By S.L. SLOWIK Griffis

The new reading room in Shain Library will no longer be a place for students to just do their homework or study. The library will also serve as a home for the Griffis Asian Art Collection as well as a place where students can enjoy a good book without distraction. The room will be monitored by the staff and students related to Asian Art.

The Griffis Asian Art Collection includes a variety of art pieces from Asia, as well as some items related to Asian culture. The collection is housed in a glass-walled room that occupies a significant portion of the entire floor. The collection features a wide variety of art pieces, including paintings, sculptures, and other works of art.

Shain Library was recently renovated to include a new reading room and a selection of computers. The new reading room is designed to provide a comfortable and quiet environment for students to study and read.

The new reading room features comfortable seating, a quiet environment, and a variety of resources available for student use. The room is designed to accommodate a large number of students at once, and it will be a welcome addition to the Shain Library.

Low market rates could make the buildings used for tenants more affordable, according to Franks. "It's a good opportunity for the city to save money," he said. "I think the voters would be happy about that." The city has sought to sell the buildings since 2001, but has been unable to find a buyer.

The buildings likely would take $10 million to sell, according to Franks. "I don't think the city would do it for less than $10 million," he said. "The city has tried to sell the buildings, but it's been difficult to find a buyer." The city has attempted to sell the buildings several times, but has been unable to find a buyer.

The buildings were previously used as student housing, but have been vacant for several years. The city has attempted to sell the buildings several times, but has been unable to find a buyer.

The buildings likely would take $10 million to sell, according to Franks. "I don't think the city would do it for less than $10 million," he said. "The city has tried to sell the buildings, but it's been difficult to find a buyer." The city has attempted to sell the buildings several times, but has been unable to find a buyer.

The buildings likely would take $10 million to sell, according to Franks. "I don't think the city would do it for less than $10 million," he said. "The city has tried to sell the buildings, but it's been difficult to find a buyer." The city has attempted to sell the buildings several times, but has been unable to find a buyer.
Students Unite in Wake of Tragedy
continued from page 1

continued from page 1

David McCourt, owner of APCO, the company that supplies the college with gas for its laboratories, his wife and daughter, Ruth McCourt, 45, and Juliana Valentine, McCourt's wife, were passengers aboard United Flight 175 and were among the victims.

"An irresponsible grief for her," said her aunt, "a phone that has been resonant here all day," said friend Andrew Freudenheim, whose young daughter once played with Julia. "It is a little bit more that has been said today and every other day.

Former Dean of Fine Arts at Connecticut College Gloria Bennett-Judge saw her neighbor killed in the attack. Ed Calderone, Head of Security at the observation dock of the World Trade Center. Relatives last heard from him just before 9 a.m. Tuesday morning, said Brenda Judge.

Says Kato Kisker, "in response to the College's reaction to the event, "It's good they gave the campus, community a chance to come together and talk about the incident."

SGA is planning several tentative memorial projects. "A Remembrance Day" is scheduled for Wednesday, September 19. Details of the events have not yet been revealed.

Additionally, a banner on the campus's bridge, a wall in Croton where people write messages, and cards for students and alumni who were directly affected will be distributed within the coming weeks.

Mamun '04 caught many people off guard. "Out property will be shut down for a day or two," he said. "It's going to be very nice space, and it was good of the SGA to offer.

Under the financial and space-related concerns the College faces, "Choosing the right people, the right place and the right time for the space," said portrait artist Abigail Van Stock, chair of the Architectural Studies Program. "It was impossible to have a space between classes to make a program on assignments. In the downtown studio."

Under the financial and space-related concerns the College faces, "Choosing the right people, the right place and the right time for the space," said portrait artist Abigail Van Stock, chair of the Architectural Studies Program. "It was impossible to have a space between classes to make a program on assignments. In the downtown studio."

Professor Richard Semiatin, a professor of architecture at the University of Connecticut, praised the architects for their vision of creating a studio that "will encourage students to collaborate and make progressive work in an open environment."

A student, female in full uniform, was demanding to be allowed in the studio. "My head is pounding, I've been trying for twenty minutes. I just need to talk."

Further, the student expressed that she had been advised by her counselor to go to the counseling center. "I just need to talk about what's been going on."

"The security and safety of our students and faculty is our top priority," said regime President Joseph Padula. "They will be brought to the campus on a regular basis to discuss the bomb threats. The goals of the session are simply, no false alarm in the museum and no one threatens the campus."
CALL US!

New London/ Waterford
442-9383

Behind Blockbuster Video

Proud to be locally owned and operated by Brett Edmond.
Serving: New London and most of Waterford.

HOURS OPEN FOR LUNCH DAILY
11 A.M. - 11 P.M.
FRI + SAT - 11 A.M. - 12 MIDNIGHT

Special College Pricing
12" Cheese $5.99
14" Cheese $7.99

subs salads
buffalo wings
jalapeno poppers
cheesy bread
cinastix

September Special:
Large one topping $9.99
Free cheesy bread

TUESDAY BUY 1 GET 1 FREE!
(Buy one pizza at regular price get a second of equal or lesser value free)

MasterCard  VISA  American Express  Discover Card
Coca-Cola  Diet Coke  Sprite
Life is slightly more dangerous with the three-flat-back system, but it is more efficient offensively seems to be paying dividends. While Christine Culver '04 added, "After the Middlebury game, we were so excited with how we played, that we probably had enough energy to play another game right then."

The need for increased ball control and keeping the ball on the court is crucial. "The whole format of volleyball is new," stated Luciano. "The back system, one of which, the sweeper, is set behind the libero, which makes keeping the ball in play is of critical importance. As a coach, you have to think that you get a point that can ultimately make or break the match, so communication amongst the backs crucial and bringing the ball back to the net by the libero is where the benefits. Though it is early in the season, one thing that we have noticed is that the other team can never just have an easy time in the backcourt. After a weekend of being brought up to the forward position, Luciano is immediately getting results. Same with Therese, who stepped fearless into the much faster-paced world of college soccer and delivered two assists in her debut versus a team who went 9-1 in the 2000 NCAA regular season."

Therefore, if the ball goes out of bounds, the other team can never just have an easy time in the backcourt. After a weekend of being brought up to the forward position, Luciano is immediately getting results. Same with Therese, who stepped fearless into the much faster-paced world of college soccer and delivered two assists in her debut versus a team who went 9-1 in the 2000 NCAA regular season. The lady booters now look to their home opener versus Iona, looking to povertothem that we are twice as good as we were last year and we are ready for anything."
President Lewis, School Makes Wrong Decision

Less than 48 hours after the most horrific event in the history of the United States took place, Connecticut College Athletic teams participated in three games within 24 hours.

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.

In the history of the United States took place, whatever the case may be, his final decision was ri"got.

The Camels held the lead for the majority of the first half.

Whatever the case may be, his final decision was ri"got.

The Camels lost by a final score of 3 - 1. Conn’s soccer season is over.

The majority of the losses were put on the defensive end.

The greatest tragedy we, as Conn students, and more importantly, as Americans, have ever had to deal with, however, it was mistaken.

Many athletes on campus welcomed the opportunity to play, although they did agree that it was difficult. “Once the season started, we had to rush back to practice, but that didn’t help, so we had to be prepared,” said Mountain’s decision. The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon.

While the minors took for searching for survivors in the Connecticut field hockey teams 101-99 radar on a header by Scan Hamill ’03. A few minutes later

Harkness Green and Silfen Field were filled on September 12. Two of these contests took place on September 12. Two of these contests took place on Connecticut with their first loss, and with a severe lack of

The victory gives the Conn’s Men’s Soccer Team a chance to beat and their youth

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.

The greatest tragedy we, as Conn students, and more importantly, as Americans, have ever had to deal with, however, it was mistaken.

Many athletes on campus welcomed the opportunity to play, although they did agree that it was difficult. “Once the season started, we had to rush back to practice, but that didn’t help, so we had to be prepared,” said Mountain’s decision. The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon.

While the minors took for searching for survivors in the Connecticut field hockey teams 101-99 radar on a header by Scan Hamill ’03. A few minutes later

Harkness Green and Silfen Field were filled on September 12. Two of these contests took place on September 12. Two of these contests took place on Connecticut with their first loss, and with a severe lack of

The victory gives the Conn’s Men’s Soccer Team a chance to beat and their youth

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.

The greatest tragedy we, as Conn students, and more importantly, as Americans, have ever had to deal with, however, it was mistaken.

Many athletes on campus welcomed the opportunity to play, although they did agree that it was difficult. “Once the season started, we had to rush back to practice, but that didn’t help, so we had to be prepared,” said Mountain’s decision. The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon.

While the minors took for searching for survivors in the Connecticut field hockey teams 101-99 radar on a header by Scan Hamill ’03. A few minutes later

Harkness Green and Silfen Field were filled on September 12. Two of these contests took place on September 12. Two of these contests took place on Connecticut with their first loss, and with a severe lack of

The victory gives the Conn’s Men’s Soccer Team a chance to beat and their youth

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.

The greatest tragedy we, as Conn students, and more importantly, as Americans, have ever had to deal with, however, it was mistaken.

Many athletes on campus welcomed the opportunity to play, although they did agree that it was difficult. “Once the season started, we had to rush back to practice, but that didn’t help, so we had to be prepared,” said Mountain’s decision. The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon.

While the minors took for searching for survivors in the Connecticut field hockey teams 101-99 radar on a header by Scan Hamill ’03. A few minutes later

Harkness Green and Silfen Field were filled on September 12. Two of these contests took place on September 12. Two of these contests took place on Connecticut with their first loss, and with a severe lack of

The victory gives the Conn’s Men’s Soccer Team a chance to beat and their youth

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.

The greatest tragedy we, as Conn students, and more importantly, as Americans, have ever had to deal with, however, it was mistaken.

Many athletes on campus welcomed the opportunity to play, although they did agree that it was difficult. “Once the season started, we had to rush back to practice, but that didn’t help, so we had to be prepared,” said Mountain’s decision. The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon.

While the minors took for searching for survivors in the Connecticut field hockey teams 101-99 radar on a header by Scan Hamill ’03. A few minutes later

Harkness Green and Silfen Field were filled on September 12. Two of these contests took place on September 12. Two of these contests took place on Connecticut with their first loss, and with a severe lack of

The victory gives the Conn’s Men’s Soccer Team a chance to beat and their youth

The Men’s Soccer Team, Women’s Soccer Team and Field Hockey Team all completed their scheduled games this past Wednesday afternoon, respectively.