Arboretum abounds with natural offerings

By Coleen O'Shea

The main entrance to the Arboretum is designated by an auspicious iron gate at Williams Street, followed by the choice of three primary pathways. The area can and should be viewed from different aspects, from time and weather of the day, to the seriousness of the hiker. The Arboretum takes on characteristics unique to the light it is observed under.

A printed bulletin, "A Guided Tour of the Connecticut Arboretum," is an excellent reference if you are interested in some of the specifics of plant life. The booklet leads the reader around the lake, by following an indirect route, that allows one to see the prominent features and identifiable articles. The trail is easily followed by watching for paint markings on trees, rocks or posts, and observation stations are also marked. One must just watch sharply in order to avoid passing the marked areas.

A few of the more notable sections to find are the Red Pine Grove, (take the left hand path upon entering). It takes on an eerie character as fog appears to almost rise from between the tree trunks. It is similar to a still life and the layers of pine needles on the ground muffle every step, and the aroma makes this section a very alluring area for meditation.

The Outdoor Theatre is a popular area for study and general congregation on a Sunday afternoon, (take right hand path). It is surrounded by trees, but the open center draws those who are interested in catching a bit of sun. If you are (Continued On Page 4)

Committee to select new President established

By Nina George

The Chairman of the Board of Trustees has announced that the committee for the selection of Connecticut College's next President is to consist of six trustees, three faculty members, two students, and two alumna members. The first meeting of the Committee will take place Monday night, when it is hoped that there can be presented a new list to the Executive Committee and presidents of each class determined late Wednesday the names of the representatives.

Several members of the Executive Committee discuss the process of selecting the student representatives to the committee to select a new President of the College

Day students eat for free

By Bernie Zeltich

An indeterminable number of non-resident students own resident student ID's and are "misusing" them to obtain free meals. Residence Director Eleanor H. Voorhees said Monday:

She said that day students were to have a punch next to their name when the ID pictures were first taken. However, an unknown number of the first day did not get their ID's punched "because the people issuing them did not realize that we were doing it that way."

Although the director said that there would be no campaign against the offenders, she said the cafeterias have been alerted to look for them. "Soon we expect to have a list of non-resident students," she said. "We're hoping that we can identify the people."
Elitism rules

The following editorial expresses the views of the Co-editors-in-chief and not necessarily those of the entire Editorial Board. Due to time factors, it was not possible to contact the other members.

On the front page of this edition, there is an article which describes the manner employed in selecting the student representatives to the committee to select a new President of the College. Basically, each house executive was asked to suggest names which they thought appropriate. The Executive Committee and class presidents then voted on these names and names which they themselves brought to the meeting.

It appears to the Co-editors-in-chief of Pundit that this random selection is quite elitist and obviously unfair. House presidents were not officially forewarned of the fact that they would be asked to suggest names and could not therefore ask around the dorm as to who would be interested. In addition, if one is not familiar with their house president, (i.e. transfer students, students returning from exchange programs, freshmen, and students who changed their dorm after the elections) they would not possibly be considered. Moreover, if a house president was absent from this meeting, which is a common occurrence, those people in that dorm would not be represented.

After the names have been compiled from this meeting, they were then voted on by the members of the Executive Committee and the class presidents. These people were voting solely on the impressions they had of the candidate via rumors and hearsay. At no point are qualifications submitted by the candidates. The people selected were those who have appeared before and are known to government members, again a bigoted manner of selection.

We feel that this committee is too important to be determined by an elitist few who do not even consider the option of self-nomination and platforms which would come from a general election. Rather than have the candidates explain why they consider themselves to be qualified, the selection is made upon the basis of “who you know.”

We condemn this system entirely and hope that there will be a strong enough student opinion to disregard this selection and demand another manner of selecting new members.

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

To undertake a great task of finding a new president of Connecticut College, I propose that a Selection Committee be appointed constituted of six trustees, three representatives of the faculty, and two each of the students and alumni.

The six trustees will constitute a sub-committee of the Selection Committee and will have the primary responsibility for the search and will hold the frequent and extended meetings that will be necessary. The Secretary of the College will serve as the Selection Committee’s administrative office and will provide channels of communication between the sub-committee and the full Committee. Periodic progress reports will be made to the full Committee and, in the later stages of the search, the full Committee will be drawn into active deliberations and the final selection of a candidate for recommendation to the Board of Trustees.

Meanwhile, the entire College community is encouraged to advance names of individuals believed worthy of consideration. To facilitate matters, suggestions should be sent to the respective representatives of the Selection Committee — that is, a suggestion from a faculty member should be given to a faculty member on the Committee, a student suggestion to a student member on the Committee.

I invite the faculty and students to designate their representatives for appointment to the Selection Committee. In the case of alumni, I intend to appoint one of the alumni trustees to the Committee and one other alumni (alumnus).

May I correct two small inaccuracies in last week’s report on my resignation. Miss Nina George is such a competent reporter that she won’t mind these public corrections. I believed I said my decision was not “one of those unimportant decisions such as whether we marry,” but “one of those partly unconscious decisions.” I am also under the strong impression that I did not say “it might be true for some female administrative leadership at Connecticut.” What I said (to my best recollection, as we say these days) was that the College at present enjoyed a strong element of female administrative leadership.

Surprised you may be to read from a foreigner. I am interested in having pen-pals from your college. Please write to me at your country’s embassy, where I got this address. So I shall have a few lines for you to publish in your paper. I am a Nigerian, 22 years old, and I am interested in swimming, cinema, dancing, and playing to funky sounds. More over, my interest is also extended to exchanging ideas with tomatoes.

I wish to end while expecting to hear from some of your students who may be interested.

Thanks in advance for your cooperation.

Hey folks. The benches and sculptures around Cummings Art is going to get only marginally well as bike racks, and when used as bike racks don’t work at all as sculptures and benches.

Please put some pressure on Physical Plant or some other authority. It would be great if you would provide proper racks and instead of meaningless noise we enjoy the works of art and setting.

Mathematical seminar
By Bill Loony
Disavowing any notion that mathematics as a field of scholarly endeavour is "limited by the scientific exactitude inherent in its application," the mathematics department, under the direction of Dr. Stanley Wertheimer, recently began a series of research and discussion sessions into the foundation of mathematics. The seminar has been scheduled to begin at 5 p.m. every Tuesday in the main lecture hall. All interested parties are encouraged to participate. The sessions will cover various aspects of mathematical theory and its applications, with a focus on exploring the role of mathematics as a social science. The seminars will be open to all members of the academic community and are designed to foster a deeper understanding of the subject.

Arboretum beauty abounds

As the rain makes its way through the Arboretum, the beauty of nature remains untouched. The Arboretum beauty abounds, with the rain creating a tranquil atmosphere. The raindrops fall gently on the leaves, adding a soothing sound to the sounds of nature. The trees stand tall, their branches reaching out to the sky, while the flowers bloom in various colors, adding a touch of vibrancy to the scene. The rain makes the Arboretum even more inviting, drawing visitors in to explore the beauty of nature up close. It's a perfect day to take a stroll through the Arboretum and appreciate the beauty of nature in all its splendor.

Dorm parties: Controlled fun

By Walter Palmer

Now that all the orientation is over and we enter into the routine of classes and homework, the weekends offer a welcome relief from academics. One of the more popular weekend diversions is dormitory parties. Although they are largely up to the members of the dormitory, there are a few rules and guidelines for dorm parties. Ms. Voohees, Director of Residence, gives the following suggestions. Basically, the dormitory is responsible for any damages that occur during a party, and the clean-up afterwards. The first responsibility is self-explanatory, but the second needs some clarification. When a dorm decides to have a party, it must schedule it, preferably by mid-week, with the Director of Residence in Harris Refactory. This is so she can arrange for a clean-up crew for the day following the party. This is paid for by the dorm, but it never exceeded fifteen dollars. In addition, the dormitory should arrange for two student committees, one to set up the party and another to rearrange things afterwards.

Committee selections

process was employed for the selection and the names of the committee members will appear in next week's issue. Although it appears that all constituencies will be represented in the election of Connecticut's next President, the final decision is left only to the Trustees, as provided in the by-laws of the College in conjunction with the State of Connecticut. The final step in the election process will be ratification of the candidate by the entire Board of Trustees. The College President is appointed for a one-year period, subject to re-appointment at the end of that term. All suggestions concerning possible candidates will be considered by the Presidential Selection Committee, and may be addressed to Warrine Eastburn, Secretary of the College and Administrative Officer for the Selection Committee, care of Fanning Hall.

'Amidsummers nights delight'

By Maxine Olderman

He organized this merry band.
Born of the Royal Shakespeare group
They proved themselves a noble troop.

Most notably, Diana Rigg, an actress
Long of stage and scene
Who played dark Helena well and true,
With moments kind and moments mean.

The film itself was quite unique,
Some have said it was a freak
Of camera work and costume too
Those patent leather books were new.

Methinks perhaps one could have seen
A cheerier visage than olive green
Yet somehow in the end result
Professors and students did entail.

In Shakespeare modern, Shakespeare new
By forces of test, they kept it true.
This was despite September night
A real Midsummer Night's delight.

These things and more one can learn soon
By coming to the Coffee Spoon.

On Wednesday last we kindly treated
The good bard's work, no sex deleted.

With Mr. Seng as Shakespeare scholar
Who thought Titania quite a dame
We sat and talked and laughed and hollered
Should Hall or Zeffirelli gain true fame.

We'll all say it's too extended.
I've tried to keep the bard's true spirit,
And yet deep in my heart I fear it
That this is nothing more than trash.

And much less Shakespeare than Ogden Nash.

Alternative source of nourishment

By Katie Paine

In an attempt to provide students with an alternative to dorm food and retail prices, a food coop has been started. The food is supplied by Erewhon Trading Post. The organizers buy the produce wholesale and thereby save 30% to 50% off the cost.

In order to purchase the food at such low prices, large quantities must be ordered. For this reason a 5 lb. minimum order is required. However, the idea is to combine energy and money. If 5 people get together and each buys a pound of raisins for example, they have the minimum order requirement filled and they save around thirty cents a pound.

Mostly dried foods, nuts and fruits are available. Few perishables are ordered. If one is interested contact Box 556 for the complete eight page price list.

The savings really are tremendous. Downtown almonds can be purchased for $2.25. Through the Conn. College food co-op you can get them for $1.50 a pound. Apple juice retails for $1.15 a quart but through the co-op it is $1.00 a quart.

Besides the usual gains and floors, one can find 'sunrise orange' or 'mellow mint' tea at 50¢ a package. Walnuts and peanuts are $1.00 a pound respectively. If you're tired of the usual wheaters for breakfast, you can get maple granola for 50¢ a pound or sunflower crunch for 40¢ a bag.

Their varieties of dried fruits and juices are extensive. They have dried apricots, apples and raisins for under $1.00 a pound. Peach juice, prune juice and apple juice are also available.

And for those midnight munchies there are organic corn chips, tortilla chips, honey and peanut butter.

Bar blur

The question of when the Cro Bar will officially open is as yet unanswered. The final proposals from the bar committee are being turned over to the administration, according to Barton C. Come, but from that, little progress has been noted.

However, in preparation for the Grand Opening, the pool tables are being moved from the lounge into Room 113 today.

Ms. Gezari to speak

On George Eliot

Javert K. Gezari of the English Department will discuss this afternoon at 3:15 in College House "The Mill on the Floss: George Eliot's Creation of a Sexual Heroine."

Ms. Gezari, the first informal speaker of this semester's English Department "Coffee Spoon Sessions," says that the critics have not understood something that is obvious to many students who read the novel in "The History of Progress" course. Maggie Tulliver, the dark-haired heroine who is in the end rejected, is a deeply sexual being, she said, and this is important for understanding the work.

The Coffee Spoon Session talks are usually about a half hour long, and refreshments are available. All members of the community are welcome.

Next Tuesday the English Department sponsors a free screening of T.S. Eliot's "The Triumph of Melancholy" in Dana Hall. The Coffee Spoon Session Wednesday will be a discussion of the film.

Brodkin researches Indian revolution

By Stuart Cohen

"Why the Indians revolted against British rule in the nineteenth century and why that revolution failed," was the double-barreled question Dr. Edward I. Brodkin, Associate Professor of History, was trying to answer when he and his wife visited India from December 1972 to June 1973.

Dr. Brodkin did "research on Indian resistance to the British in the nineteenth century. It's all tied in with the freedom struggle," he explained.

The violent revolution in India against British rule was similar to our own in 1776, except that instead of being followed by independence, it was followed by another 90 years of British rule. A small number of Britons were able to put down the revolution because India was having internal difficulties. The Indians had "one eye on Britain and one on the other Indians," Dr. Brodkin explained. There was infighting between the Muslims and the Hindus, and a great deal of time was spent worrying about how the government would be run after the revolution. Being so divided, the revolution failed.

Although Dr. Brodkin got some material from various archives, much of it came from individual's basements. "I had to do a lot of detective work," he explained, and even after finding suitable research material he frequently had a difficult time persuading its owners to let him use it.

Dr. Brodkin's research was funded by research fellowship grants from the Canada Council and the American Philosophical Society. The topic of his research is a sensitive one, as are U.S.-India relations. Were he Americans, Dr. Brodkin feels the government may not even have let him in the country. However, since he is a Canadian and does not even need a visa for entrance to India, there was little the government could do to keep him out or stifle his research, "the product of which is," he explained, "about 85 pounds of paper" that will be transformed into a book "that I'm now working on."

His travel has affected his ability to teach "absolutely." "You can't examine a society from reading textbooks," he explains, "especially India, because it is a society so different from our own." Reading is important; Dr. Brodkin emphasizes, "India is so different from the U.S. that to go there without reading anything invites misinterpretation." Even so, he concludes, "it's impossible to talk intelligently about India without having been there."

There were about a half dozen Cornell College students in southern Asia last year. "It was really fun being in Allahabad," a city in the central India heartland, which served as a base for Dr. Brodkin's extensive travels within India, "and having these people drop in on me," Dr. Brodkin said.

He logged over 30,000 miles by air alone, even though he admits he has a fear of flying.

Chemistry professors named to chairs

The Connecticut College board of trustees has honored two professors of chemistry by naming them to endowed professorial chairs. Dr. Oliver L. Brown has been awarded the Lucretia L. Allyn professorship, a distinction held in the chemistry department, becomes the first Margaret W. Kelly Professor of Chemistry, an honor made possible through the bequest of the late Miss Kelly who taught chemistry at the college from 1933 to her retirement in 1952.

Dr. Brown is a physical chemist who has been a consultant on air revitalization problems for General Dynamics Electric Boat Division for which he developed procedures for converting exhaled carbon dioxide into oxygen and for the recovery and recycling of all water contained within a closed system at zero gravity. He has been awarded four patents by the U.S. Patent Office.

A graduate of the University of Iowa with a doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley, Dr. Brown is a fellow of the American Institute of Chemists and a member of Sigma Xi, and Phi Beta Kappa. Dr. McKeon is an organic chemist, and the National Science Foundation sponsored research which she has done in electroanalytic chemistry at Harvard. Connecticut College awarded her sabbatical leave during 1971-72 in order that she might further her studies into the electrochemistry of organic compounds.

Miss McKeon has taught at the college since 1952 and was its dean of sophomores from 1963-66. She is a graduate of Albertus Magnus College and earned the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees at Yale University. She is a fellow of the American Institute of Chemists and a member of Sigma XI.

But as for the bouquets, they only wait for the late Autumn breeze to bow them to the earth and so with each wrinkled leaf sustain itself through loss. High on the fork of a slender limb lay a shallow nest of twisted twigs. A blue jay, fresh from snatching red berries off of a flowering dogwood tree, alights near by the deserted nest. leaping flutter, sidles up to the edge of it and warily twists its neck from side to side before, like lightening pecks at an ashen twig. Cocking its head and twirling its feathers, it boldly pecks again.

With a determined wrench, he wreaths the twig from the abandoned nest. His pull is so strong that it falls hurtling down from its perch on the crook of the limb. In its wake it ignites a cascade of russet colored leaves which accompanies it as ghostly trail of mourners. The commotion causes the jay to screech and so lose its plunder; and the squirrel to stalk to the nearest tree like a child to its mother. It spirals up the massive trunk searching for a haven in which to continue its seasonal gluttony in peace.

The sun casts its shadows over the leaves where they shifted to the rhythm of the swaying bouquets.

Freshmen Faces

Volleyball

This year we are again fortunate enough to have a Freshmen Face Book. Connecticut College has a tradition of producing a Face Book. This year contains the pictures of the members of the freshman class and, of course, the members’ names. The books is designed to help all of the college community get to know the freshmen. As a matter of fact several upperclassmen have commented that they enjoy looking back to their face book to see just how much people have (or have not) changed.

To be truthful, “Pig Books” have not been selling as well as anticipated, the house-presidents of every dorm have an ample supply and another convenient source is the Crodesk. The books sell for a meager dollar and it seems that they’re well worth the investment.

Pigskin peril

By Stuart Meyers

For the continuing public interest and concern, we are more than pleased to announce that Conn. College has opted to stay an amateur in the realm of furious flag football; but sometimes they overdo. All prime time sponsors have been scared off, enforcements for surgical tape and crutches are down, and Chris Schonfeld has finally admitted that there's something better to do than put up a Saturday afternoon. Though the scouts have scurried and Wayne Newton has declined to do that there's something better to do with the tie but it was only in the last 4 min.

Some zealots do stay to view the nuggets in the history of the game. He was a certain lackluster against a no-reserves defense. It is incredible, but one of the most dangerous things you can do is to have a few bottles of wine with friends and drive home.

Connn bat's wings clipped by Coasties

Brian Figgerbaum, star left fielder for the C.C. Team, Saturday became the first left fielder in the history of the game to see a baseball go floating down the Thames River. He was playing out there when a Coastie Guardian hit the ball about 400 feet, out of the park, across the road and into the Thames. With hitting like that Conn. was in for a tough time. It was a very close game, with the C.G. winning a squeaker 2.9-2.

Actually the game wasn't as close as the score indicates. The C.G. jumped out to an 8 run lead with only 1 out in the first inning and the game was lost. The team started to chip away at the 8 run deficit scoring one run in the first, 3 in the third and six in the fifth inning. After 5 innings the score stood at 15-9, but from there on in it was the guardsman game. The team won't quit though. They are going back to the academy this Sunday to try it again. There was a certain lack of crowd enthusiasm. Due no doubt to the fact that there wasn't anybody in sight last week, but hopefully it will be different this Sunday. Come on down and help the team.

THE NUMBER ONE KILLER
OF YOUNG AMERICANS
IS YOUNG AMERICANS.

You march against war. You fight for clean air and clean water. You eat natural foods. You practice yoga. You are so much for life. And you are so much against killing.

It would be unthinkable for you to kill another human being on purpose.

So then, why is this happening?

You don't mean to be. But you are. The numbers are simple. Latest available figures show that 8,000 American people between the ages of 15 and 25 died in alcohol related crashes. And almost all the drunk drivers who caused those crashes were also under 25. 1,380 died in combat. 3,420 committed suicide. 2,731 died of cancer.

It's incredible, but one of the most dangerous things you can do is to have a few bottles of wine with friends and drive home.

You can change it. You have to.
