President Speaks Of College Size

Advantages Of Various Sized Institutions Stated In Chapel

"I, myself, think strongly that the present size of the college is good," said President Blunt in her chapel talk yesterday morning, "as do most of the members of the administration.

She continued to say that although there may be a very few more, she has concluded for a number of years that between seven and eight hundred students constitute the maximum number that must be considered at this time before the composition of the school is such, for it is impossible to hold the future, and it is, of course, unknown what the successors of the present administration will do.

This year Remington College held a modern dance symposium to which students were invited. Martha Graham gave on the following day a lecture-demonstration on the construction of the modern dancer's costume, and the movement of the best modern dancer. She spoke on modern dance in general and boldly of what not to look for in the modern reader demands a personal experience, picturing men and women as they have lived. It will be recalled that Mr. Chamberlin conducted two conferences at Connecticut College in 1924-25; the second under the sponsorship of the Student Government, to be held at Westhampton College, University of Connecticut. The conference will open its activities on December 5th, with a general theme of "Streamline your college newspaper".

Students to Act—At Last!

For years you have probably come away from lectures, discussions, feeling how terrifically inadequate are we as students to do anything about the events going on in the world at the present time. Always we go home with a feeling of the futility of those discussions. They are definite resentments in each of us, yet we feel powerless to do anything about them. We feel alone and ineffective as a group. Students who have talked with members of the administration and have reliable information to the effect that no such increase in anticipated. You all know Palgrave's "Gold-meyer's two volumes, "Modern British Poetry" and "Modern American Poetry" are invaluable, particularly in the latest edition, which includes many more poets and their works. Another fine book is Leslie Stephen's "Hours in a Library", which is a series of very readable Fairly generous marks are given to those who have any interest in the literature of past and present, and who own many of the books that have been written that are so greatly helpful and pleasurable. I hope to cover but a few of the many that have been done, so let me call your attention to some of those which have proved inviable.

To consider the point of this rambling notice is to set your minds at ease. There is no truth to the rumor which has shown signs of upsetting the student body. Thanks for the chance to explain.

Dear Students:

You said in your last letter you were sure you would get Psi Beta Kappa. You won't if that's your attitude. It is because you don't study, or because you don't know how to study? I went through college not knowing how, but in my graduate study I found out that this is the way to get good grades:

1. Be prompt to classes.
2. Cut no classes.
3. Sit in the front row, this is extremely important.
4. Always go to class fully prepared. Study each lesson as if you were the only one in the class and were sure of being called on to recite the whole of it.
5. Keep a note book. Write out everything the teacher emphasizes but don't take too many notes.
6. When you study an assignment take notes on it. Then clinch it by reviewing the notes. You can get more out of reading it once and taking notes than by reading it five times without taking notes.
7. Make your written assignments neat. Use ink.
8. Before a quiz or examination make an out-

Mr. Marsh Discusses Merit System For Civil Service

Speaking on the subject of the Merit System in civil service, Mr. Harry Marsh, Personnel Director of Connecticut's Civil Service Commission, gave an exposition of its divisions and how it should be treated, at Convocation in the college. Mr. Marsh explained that the Merit System of the Civil Service Commission of the United States was established in 1883. It was a step towards the elimination of political corruption in public offices. The Merit System was designed to be meritocratic, with appointments based on qualifications and performance. Mr. Marsh emphasized the fact that the government protects people against the misuse of public power. The Merit System of the Civil Service Commission of the United States was adopted as it now exists.

The moving pictures started with pictures of Quebec and then by way of the St. Lawrence, east of Quebec made by John B. May, authority on Massachusetts birds and author of Hawks of North America. Dr. May gave an illustrated lecture before the Ornithology Club last Wednesday evening on the scenery and birds of the Gaspe Peninsula.

Among the shots of herring gulls, cockeyed puffins, and acadian chiceps he had others portraying the life of the gannet from the egg in the nest to the full grown bird. The gannet was shown at rest, diving gracefully for its dinner, and carrying on courtship. Bonaventure, a rocky island with a natural archway, is the home of some six hundred gannets.
