On the Waterfront: New London Looks Towards the Sea for Revitalization

Construction Begins on $15 Million Waterfront Park

By ROB KNAKE

EDITOR'S NOTE

With a little help from the NLDC, New London received its first piling for the new $15 million waterfront park.

"I'm excited," said city resident Alan Mospens, "It's long time coming and it's the first item of something happening in New London for the residents." In his speech to the assembled crowd, the piling driving ceremony, New London Development Corporation (NLDC) CEO Bernard Odlin thanked Claire Gaudiani '66, for her courage and leadership since her initial proposal in 1997. "I think we're going to see a lot more of this," he said.

The park, planned more than two years ago in a series of workshops with New London residents, received the backing of New London Mayor Tim West. "I believe this is just a waterfront park; probably be strengthened, " he said.

The NLDC has been in operation since its re-inception under the leadership of Claire Gaudiani '66 in 1997.

"We're looking at creating a waterfront park, probably be strengthened, " he said. "I think we're going to see a lot more of this."

New Magazine Brings menagerie of Talent to Conn

By JAY STEERE

The first issue of the menagerie, a new literary magazine created by students at Sarah Lawrence College, hit the stands this fall with a bang.

The magazine, which went into production last spring, was conceived under visionary editor Abby Carlen as a way to bring students together and to inspire them to combine their creative efforts.

The magazine, which will be published biannually, was born out of the need to showcase the diverse talents of students at the college. It is a platform for students to express themselves and to share their work with others.

The first issue, which was released in September, featured works by students from a variety of disciplines, including fiction, poetry, and visual art.

The magazine is available online at www.menagerieconn.com and in print at the college bookstore.

Coffee Gronds Set to Open on October 11

After a one-month delay, the Coffee Gronds, a new coffee shop, will open on October 11. Problems with renovations in the area of the shops were cited as the reason for the delay, said Alicia Rinaldi, the Office of Student Life's manager. According to Physical Plant manager Thomas Grondal, the shop was held up by delays in the construction process. When renovations were delayed, the shop was moved into the Larrabee study lounge, which was later moved from Fanning into the Coffee Grounds.

"It was very disappointing for us," said Rinaldi, "but we had to do what we did because the shop had to be somewhere." The shop was subsequently moved into the Larrabee study lounge, which is now being used as a temporary storage area for furniture from the adjacent Larrabee study lounge.

The shop was originally scheduled to open in September, but delays in the construction process forced the delay. The shop was then moved into the Larrabee study lounge, which was later moved into the Coffee Grounds.

College Begins Implementing Ten Million Dollar Administrative Software System

By JESSIE VANGROFSKY

The College is currently in the process of implementing a new ten million dollar administrative software system. The purpose of this software is to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the College's administrative offices.

The system, which is called Peoplesoft, will replace the College's current administrative software. Peoplesoft is a leading vendor in the field of administrative software and is used by many colleges and universities.

The implementation of Peoplesoft is being led by a team of IT professionals. The team is working closely with the College's administrative offices to ensure a smooth transition to the new system.

The implementation process is expected to take several months. During this time, the College's administrative offices will be using a transitional system to handle their daily operations.

Once Peoplesoft is fully implemented, the College will have a modern and efficient administrative software system. This will allow the College to better manage its resources and improve the overall student experience.

Peoplesoft includes modules for a variety of administrative tasks, including:

- Financial Services
- Human Resources
- Student Services
- Academic Affairs
- Information Technology

By implementing Peoplesoft, the College is taking a significant step forward in enhancing its administrative capabilities. This will benefit both the College and its students in the long run.

Field Hockey Suffers Tough Loss Against Amherst

By ELIZABETH PAPPAS

A game that Conn's women's field hockey team had been looking forward to all year long ended up being the most disappointing one of the season. After a four-game winning streak, the Lady Camels suffered their first loss of the season against Amherst. The final score was 2-1, in favor of the Mammoths.

Despite being outshot 24-3, Conn's women's field hockey team had their chances. They had 22 shots on goal but were unable to score the game-winning goal. The Lady Camels picked their heads up and left the field proudly as many Conn fans applauded their effort.

This year's season has been one of ups and downs. The Lady Camels fall to 1-3 as Amherst betters themselves against Conn. What makes a great team, and that is why they are fun to watch. The Lady Camels hope to step up their game and return to the form that has made them one of the top teams in the NESCAC.

As with other sports teams on campus, this year's crop: we played with the heart and enthusiasm that they can muster, which frequently resulted in their loss. After all, games are played with all the heart and emotions run high. Teams play with all the heart and as a team. Wve lost a few, but we still have a few games left. We're looking forward to racing more NESCAC schools and coming out on top.

CamelSports

■ Camel Rolls 5 to 1
By MATT SKEELS

The purple machine, or so it seemed, invaded Connecticut College on a beautiful Saturday afternoon last weekend, September 25, and handed the watchful, veteran soccer team their first league defeat. The previously undefeated Conn College Camels, 9-1-6, in front of the near-capacity Alumni Field, took on the powerhouse Coast Guard Academy, 10-0-1, in the annual meeting at New London. "Missed opportunities," explains the team’s inexperience. Early, the team’s transfer, there were several questions as to who we were playing, it was just that we missed a lot of opportunities and was able to convert five unanswered goals after falling behind 1-0. According to Barber, “the new formation gives us a little control in the midfield, but the forwards were able to pressure the ball more on defense, and it worked as a team.”

Pronounced chances nearly every game have probably created some overconfidence, however, for the lightning offense. But for Limehouse, "we really only allow three to four games at peak performance, so all applied pressure for the season." He continues, “the college game is much faster paced than in high school, and the players are learning that you have much less time to make decisions. It’s not as if a freshman comes in and makes a huge impact on the college game, but these guys have done well.”

The team is playing with more unity now, less any disruptive individuality that may have shown early on. According to member Welch, “I felt like the first ten minutes we moved the ball around well, but after that, we had to be really accurate offensively, which we really haven’t done for our past several games. So we’ve had the ball but we really haven’t done much with it.” Welch noticed a noticeable improvement in the midfield “they have a solid defense, I feel like the first ten minutes we moved the ball around well, but after that, we had to be really accurate offensively, which we really haven’t done for our past several games. So we’ve had the ball but we really haven’t done much with it.” Welch noticed a noticeable improvement in the midfield “they have a solid defense, I feel like the first ten minutes we moved the ball around well, but after that, we had to be really accurate offensively, which we really haven’t done for our past several games.
