Our weekly look at the Connecticut College community. This week our topics are: the separation of church and state, freedom. President Fainstein addressed this issue in his fall opening address in its generalization guarantees "Freedom of religion, no discrimination, no tolerance." Representing the Republicans for the College Democrats debate was Nick Iyengar, and representing the Democrats was Matt Rask. The Republicans emphasized that most of the jobs lost in this country are in manufacturing, not service industries. According to the College Republicans noted that George W. Bush has delivered on his promises to cut taxes and has continuously cut taxes, which helps the nation as a whole. Bush plans to continue to cut taxes in order to help stimulate the economy. The Republicans believe that Bush's tax cuts will help our economy recover from recession.

When David Dorfman—first to come Connecticut College briefly, then to return—campus struck him. That was in 1979, when he was a senior at the University of Minnesota. Although he was a philosophy major at the time, his decision to study dance during his senior year was clear. Dorfman made the decision because he was inspired by the work of another student at the University of Minnesota, who was involved in a dance company. The student was a legendary choreographer and dancer, and Dorfman was impressed by his dedication to the art. He decided to pursue a career in dance, and he was accepted into a dance program at the University of Minnesota. This was a turning point in Dorfman's life, and he went on to become a successful choreographer and dancer.

Have you “Facebooked” me yet?

Those past few weeks we have seen an almost nonexistent period of the time, of course in our opinion, of how everyone is creating websites on geocities or some free hosting service built in middle school. This does seem to be a more important facet of the internet – maintaining relationships with friends all over the country, friends you know who are all under the same roof. Of course we are talking about the lauded Face Book site.

Most importantly is how the site is laid out. The user-friendly format makes it easy for everyone to easily learn about others’ interests and hobbies, thus helping to strengthen friendships by illustrating common interests. Furthermore, people can join groups in connection with those who share particular interests. All of these means of communication are beneficial to students in the sense that they provide constructive means for people to learn more about each other.

Where will the College go with this latest craze? Whether students are joining is just to see what all the hype is about or simply to connect with friends, the College will increasingly become united under Face Book. Perhaps everyone will get to know each other through it, and those individuals’ goals to get as many friend confirmations as possible will hold longer in a future.

Do you care about anything?

“I write to share a series of incidents that are of great concern to me. Recently, a number of violations have reportedly been deeply impacted by negative behaviors, seemingly as a result of their political affiliation. Many of the reported incidents have actually occurred to students who identify politically as Republicans; many members of the College Republicans dormitory are Connecticut College students. The reported incidents included having stickers removed or defaced from assembly line in student life, having posters placed in dorm hallways, having larger than normal gear, and being harassed by the majority of black students for expressing counterpoints which they believe to be shared among their schoolmates, to further their opinions in their classrooms.

Many of these students have expressed genuine concern that campus is quick to express stature when a bias incident occurs related to federally protected groups, but that it seems to tolerate actions that serve to limit debate and discourage regarding political viewpoints.

The Connecticut College Honor Code Matriculation Pledge states, “I pledge to take responsibility for my beliefs, and to conduct myself with integrity, civility, and the utmost respect for the dignity of all human beings.” As members of this free and democratic society, we are privileged to be able to participate in the election process. Given the diversity of our communities, it is normal to have different opinions, for which people are passionate. As a rating and educational environment, it is essential, however, that all members feel and are able to express themselves without fear of victimization or ridicule.

Connecticut College does not tolerate any acts that marginalize any individual. We must encourage each member of the community to own their opinions and beliefs and to allow others to do the same. The actions described earlier do not serve to change opinion, but rather create a climate of hatred and hostile environment.

As students of a college with great strides in educating community members about differences in people and in responding those differences. Rather than silencing activism, we should encourage it. SURE TO FALL IN LOVE WITH YOU JEWISH MODERNITY YONI FREEMAN - GOLDFIELD TERRITORY

You're seeing the young Jewish man with the mustache. He just walked into the room, took off his jacket, and said, "Oi, man, I'm going to marry my girlfriend tonight."

I'm sure that this image has been repeated many times in the history of Jewish literature. It's a common depiction of youthful enthusiasm and the beginning of a new chapter in one's life. However, have you ever considered the implications of this image when it comes to understanding the history of Jewish modernity?

Jewish modernity refers to the cultural and societal changes that took place in the Jewish community from the late 19th to early 20th centuries. It is characterized by a shift away from traditional religious observances and an embrace of secular values and practices. The image of the young Jewish man with the mustache, for instance, is often associated with the modernist movement, which sought to break away from the past and create a new identity for the Jewish people.

In the context of Jewish modernity, the image of the young man with the mustache represents the break from tradition and the embracing of new ideas and values. It symbolizes a shift towards a more secular and progressive worldview, which was central to the modernist movement.

The image also highlights the idea of marriage as a symbol of personal freedom and choice. In the context of Jewish modernity, marriage was often seen as a way to assert one's independence and to break away from traditional expectations.

In conclusion, the image of the young Jewish man with the mustache is a powerful symbol of the transformations that took place in Jewish modernity. It represents a break from tradition and the embracing of new ideas and values, and serves as a reminder of the importance of marriage as a symbol of personal freedom and choice.

Chris Thile, mandolinist for the Grammy-winning bluegrass band Nickel Creek, is one of the most talented musicians of our generation. This past week, he released his first solo recording, Deceiver, which features the musician in a guitarist's role on over 25 instruments, making the album quite magical.

"Heavenly. do not be deceived." The label has a very high praise for the album's overall tone. This album features his own vocal and personal performances, and he promises to be a mind-bending and out of the ordinary production here at Cornell College.

As part of the Chrysler series, Our Little Sunbeam will be presented in the Palmer theater. The show will have a cast of 20 actors, including some of the best talents from the school and the community.

Hump the Vote at SAC on Concert Date

Aside from the seemingly few active members of the SAC's political groups, most of you probably are sick of hearing about the mid-term elections that are taking place this month, securing the title of Commander in Chief. However, you might be interested to know that the SAC is now providing a sound reason for the elections: the SAC has organized a concert at the Webster Theater on November 7th, which will be headlined by the rock band KMFDM.

KMFDM is a German industrial rock band that has been around since the late 1980s. Their music is characterized by heavy use of synthesizers, drum machines, and distorted guitars, creating a unique and powerful sound that has been compared to the work of bands like Nine Inch Nails and Ministry. Their concerts are known for being intense and engaging, with the band members often wearing elaborate costumes and using visual effects to complement their music.

The reason SAC has organized this concert is to encourage students to vote. By hosting a high-energy rock concert on election day, the SAC hopes to motivate students to get out and vote. The concert will be held at the Webster Theater, located in downtown Hartford, and will feature KMFDM as the headlining act. The SAC is working with local political groups to ensure that students are registered to vote and that they understand the importance of their votes.

KMFDM's music is not only entertaining but also provides a powerful message. Their songs often deal with themes of power, control, and the manipulation of the masses. By incorporating these themes into their music, KMFDM is able to engage their audience and encourage them to think critically about the political system.

In conclusion, the SAC's decision to organize a rock concert to encourage voting is a creative and effective approach to getting students engaged in the political process. By bringing together a passionate audience and a band that is known for its thought-provoking music, the SAC is likely to have a significant impact on the election outcome. So, if you're sick of hearing about the mid-term elections, KMFDM's concert on November 7th is a great reason to get out and vote.
SGA Endorses the Revised Strategic Plan with Enthusiasm

By Thomas McKen

On October 5 President Francesca Kaufman announced the Strategic Planning Committee's final revised strategic plan. "It is my hope that the college community will embrace the revised strategic plan with enthusiasm," Kaufman said.

The Strategic Planning Committee is charged with drafting a comprehensive strategic plan to guide the College through the year 2011. The full document to receive their endorsement.

During the Strategic Planning Committee's presentation of the revised strategic planning document to the SGA on September 23, many of the Assembly's questions focused on the Strategic Planning Committee's work. Lelek noted that the strategic plan should place greater emphasis on maintaining current buildings and supporting academic excellence. He further noted that the revised strategic plan is in support of the plan's five key points. The College will have achieved a new, even higher level of quality by 2011.

In his acceptance letter of the revised strategic plan, Lelek commented on the College's tradition of excellence. "The Strategic Planning Committee must be commended for their dedication to effectively guide the college through its centennial. With such a powerful and complex beast in the world, we are very confident about the direction of College," he said.

The Assembly, by a near two-thirds vote, approved the revised strategic plan to the entire college community.

Camel Curiosities

Before the Civil War, Congress tried out a Camel Military Corp. They herded 77 camels over to North America and tested them out somewhere near the Arizona desert. The camels were just about to be tested when the Civil War broke loose and ruined everything. A few of the camels were auctioned off, while others escaped into the desert. The escapees were shot by those who considered them pestulant. The mission was a complete failure.

The CWPV, has Connecticut earning a No. 1 seed in Division III tourney. On that, being the trend in the past and the fact that the performance in transitioned events has Con sitting pretty in Division III rankings. Due to a lack of local Division III opponents and the lack of local programs within the CWPV, Con has competed against a mix of local and out of state programs with Division I individuals, playing against teams that are not comfortable with the competition so that they could stay in contact with the teams. The CWPV has a four-goal lead to see the trends that were being observed in the CWPV.

The Camel fans were thrilled that the game ended around close to two in the afternoon, but at the same time that the series was still 3-1 Yankees. We never thought that the Yankees would pull it off. They were on the field, and we were notrexcited about it. It was a hard fought game, but we did it, and we were happy given that the score in the end was 3-1 Yankees. We never thought that the Yankees would pull it off, and we were not happy about it. It was hard fought in the end, but we didn't think we would win. The fans were thrilled with the result.

Meredith Stebbins '05 knows the nature of a high work ethic and the magic of hard work. She has done it, and Con has worked hard to make up for the lack of local programs. She is a very challenging CISLA program; one of the most rigorous academically for students, and finds time to travel to the admissions office.

When she's not pushing her way into one of the top five positions on the track, Stebbins makes her presence known around the Connecticut campus. She undertook the challenge of joining the Camel Cross Country team, and it has been a tremendous, and I would pay anything to get back into the track again. One thing is for sure though, and that is simply feeling good that my team and I can do this. It has been a great journey, and we are all so proud of each other.

The Camel of The Week: Meredith Stebbins

Meredith Stebbins '05 knows the nature of a high work ethic and the magic of hard work. She has done it, and Con has worked hard to make up for the lack of local programs. She is a very challenging CISLA program; one of the most rigorous academically for students, and finds time to travel to the admissions office.

In the end, we were thrilled with the result we achieved, and we are so proud of our team. We never thought that the Yankees would pull it off, and we were not happy about it. It was hard fought in the end, but we didn't think we would win. The fans were thrilled with the result.

Men's Soccer Still Winless In NESCAC Just Four More Games

"Why don't the Red Sox just win the World Series, already?" It's a question that has been on the minds of Sox fans for months. With the team currently sitting at 96-64, many are starting to wonder if this is the end of an era for the Sox. But if there is one thing that the Sox have done better than anyone else, it's to never give up hope. And with the playoffs just around the corner, Sox fans are hoping that their team will be able to do just that.

Viewpoint

I'm tired of hearing about how the Sox are the 'best team in baseball' or 'the most potent offense of all time.' It's time to put some perspective on the Sox's performance this season. They may have had some great individual moments, but as a team, they have been disappointing. They should just win the next game, because a World Series is still possible.

All through the season, especially in the stretch run, the Sox's pitching was inconsistent. They had some great starts, but also some terrible ones. The team as a whole has been fallible, and it's time for them to step up and deliver. The Sox need to find a way to win games, and they need to do it now. If they can't, they may be in for a long winter.
