Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.conncoll.edu/ccnews_2010_2011

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.conncoll.edu/ccnews_2010_2011/15

This Newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by the Student Newspapers at Digital Commons @ Connecticut College. It has been accepted for inclusion in 2010-2011 by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Connecticut College. For more information, please contact bpancier@conncoll.edu.

The views expressed in this paper are solely those of the author.
Very Few Rules

An hour with Wayne Ong

STEPHEN D'WORICK

CONTRIBUTOR

I was out of breath by the time I arrived at the Myers Dance Studio, ten minutes late. A woman tapped on my arm. She was carrying a baby. "No shoes," she said, glancing at my shod feet. I held my sneakers loosely in one hand as I slid in my socks across the floor towards my writing professor. She had her hand on an Asian guy’s shoulder. "This is Wayne," she said. "He’s a good one. I’m sorry to give him up." Wayne smiled pleasantly at me. Then he fell backwards and became an arch, his hands and bare feet all flat on the floor.

"Uh-huh," I said. "We can go through the interview now, I think." I was too stunned to do anything else at that moment.

I’m just wearing shoes, I heard someone say.

It was at that point that I noticed Wayne was wearing a tuxedo. I thought it was what the hell I was doing there. Interviewing is not an easy skill, especially when each of your subject’s motions makes you feel less and less at ease with your own physical ability. As Wayne led me down a staircase into a familiar part of the student center, I sensed feeling stupid long enough to wonder: how do the professionals do this? Aren’t they nervous all the time? I was too, I’m interviewing some guy I’d never met and I had no idea how to handle him.

We sat at a table facing one another. Wayne was wearing a tuxedo. He was wearing a tight gray shirt with rolled-up sleeves. He had a couple of tears in his lap. I could see her hands. I nodded him about his origins, hoping to get him talking about his shoes. It happened. Wayne said things like, "You know..."

The theme of the interview, as my professor so optimistically stated in the week before, was "flying and falling." I was falling all right. Wayne is one of the coolest kids ever. We work really well together. And I’m interviewing some guy I’ve never met and I had no idea how to handle him.

As it happens, Wayne proved extremely easy to interview. He was a master at keeping things in line. His stories and experiences in the arts and entertainment are enough to keep the audience entertained and intent throughout. His calmness and collected manner were enough to keep the audience entertained and intent throughout.

It happens, Wayne proved extremely easy to interview. He was a master at keeping things in line. His stories and experiences in the arts and entertainment are enough to keep the audience entertained and intent throughout. His calmness and collected manner were enough to keep the audience entertained and intent throughout.
It’s difficult to describe the breathless tension that precedes such a simple sentence—a first-person statement introducing a three-letter word. I, therefore, am gay, is a declaration of being, and it’s something we rely on everything else the other boy ever told you were. To attack such a familiar proposition that is intellectually decontextualized is a terrifying undertaking.

Coming to LGBTQ events can be an exhilarating experience. For many of us, it’s our first time being in a place where our sexuality is safe to be revealed. It’s a moment of empowerment and liberation.

As a senior in high school, with the intention of coming out, I was taught many lessons in the process of making this decision. It was about me, and was immediately disappointed by his lack of recognition of this truth. It was not about me, is it? Then they went on to the check-out with the jewel case and $20.

"I'm gay." It's hard not to envy these, for whom high school period plotting a bully-free route to the bus home. Some came to terms with themselves in high school, while others didn't. And, really, what more could we ask than to be cured of the fear of rejection?

In retrospect, that Stroppey accent has been a major turning point in my life. The day that I met my partner, it was not about me. It was not about logic or reason. It was about emotion, and love.

The quote attributed to Currie Huntington is often used in discussions of the importance of respect and dignity in the treatment of LGBTQ individuals. Huntington said, "Being queer is too fundamentally entrenched as a fact of identity to be changed in the manner of a maker's signature." This misquotation gives the impression that sexuality is a choice, whereas it is not. The quote should actually be: "Being queer is too fundamentally entrenched as a fact of identity to be changed in the manner of a maker's signature." This misquotation gives the impression that sexuality is a choice, whereas it is not.

The article, when discussing problems with counseling services, referred to transgender students as "people who have undergone gender reassignment." This is highly inappropriate given, at least, the common use of pronouns in the article. This is highly ironic given, at least, the common use of pronouns in the article. The quote attributed to Currie Huntington is often used in discussions of the importance of respect and dignity in the treatment of LGBTQ individuals. Huntington said, "Being queer is too fundamentally entrenched as a fact of identity to be changed in the manner of a maker's signature." This misquotation gives the impression that sexuality is a choice, whereas it is not.

The article, when discussing problems with counseling services, referred to transgender students as "people who have undergone gender reassignment." This is highly inappropriate given, at least, the common use of pronouns in the article. This is highly ironic given, at least, the common use of pronouns in the article. The quote attributed to Currie Huntington is often used in discussions of the importance of respect and dignity in the treatment of LGBTQ individuals. Huntington said, "Being queer is too fundamentally entrenched as a fact of identity to be changed in the manner of a maker's signature." This misquotation gives the impression that sexuality is a choice, whereas it is not.

The quote attributed to Currie Huntington is often used in discussions of the importance of respect and dignity in the treatment of LGBTQ individuals. Huntington said, "Being queer is too fundamentally entrenched as a fact of identity to be changed in the manner of a maker's signature." This misquotation gives the impression that sexuality is a choice, whereas it is not.
Conn alumnae Shake the Baron played at Oasis Pub in New London on Saturday. Their new full-length album drops on Tuesday, Oct 26.

Students sample local eateries at New London's annual Fall Food Stroll.

The Clothesline Project: SafetyNet Peer Education Group displayed student-made t-shirts outside Shain Library to raise awareness about domestic violence as part of Domestic Awareness Month.

Check out thecollegevoice.org for this week’s slideshow of fall foliage at Conn.

Checkout thecollegevoice.org for this week’s slideshow of fall foliage at Conn.
CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1:

a metaphorical answer that would translate into a brilliant success.

He responded with something about... and Singapore and his... He wanted to learn... I was trying to figure Wayne out. He was rather... He had his clenching... He had a... He was my... Our company performed... Everything that came out of... He told me about performing in... I suddenly understood... He was waving to someone... Wayne hesitated for a moment. He broke... What types- types? I have never been afraid of... He said that the UN has a... Many times in retirement, he said. He nodded to yet another person walking by. The army... The army is in the area... I have been learning... Our company performed... But in most countries... He told me about performing in... The original intention of the UN... Many countries, many-year-old... The most undernourished part of... Many countries, many... The UN has no power... The United Kingdom and the... The early... The entire lecture hall... The likelihood of reform... Professor of Government... Don't hold your breath!

MEREDITH BOYLE
NEWS EDITOR

Students filled the Blaisdell lecture hall on Friday as government professors Tristan Boyce and William Rose, and economics professor Maria Critz, 19, discussed the United Nations in celebration of Sunday, the annual UN Day.

The lecture focused on the UN's recent contributions to the discovery of new peacekeeping initiatives and... Professor Rose began the discussion, focusing on the challenges the UN faces when handling peacekeeping operations... Professor Rose began the discussion, focusing on the challenges the UN faces when handling peacekeeping operations... Professor Critz elaborated on the theme of UN's... The Security Council, one of the six principal bodies under the UN, is... The Security Council is in charge of the establishment of peacekeeping missions... It has... The United Kingdom and the... The most undernourished part of... The UN has no power... Many countries, many... The Security Council was created in the early... There is no reason to fear or... Several more stories have... How do you think you were able to... Wayne talked about... I have been looking forward... I have been wondering... Not everything is happy. I understand the need to... The purpose of a club is to promote equal opportunities and... In order to boost this process, we felt it necessary to... Bradley Mykyta, 12, a member of both the Task Force and Finance Committee, "In order to fix this process, we felt it necessary to...
In the eyes of some, the UN is a necessary body, but needs to improve several aspects of its structure. It is a dynamic organization that does a lot of things right, but there is room for improvement as well. The UN is a necessary entity, and its work is vital for the global community. Despite its challenges, the UN has made significant contributions to the world, and its impact cannot be understated.

On George Jepsen the man:

"We have a bench that can't find its way to the floor, and my idea of a good time is to have it happen to family and friends, and we can get our hands on the next big thing while we're still busy. At the same time, with the economic environment, we can improve the business climate in the state. From that, as an attorney general, I think the biggest issue in CT right now is economic development. The most pressing need is job creation, and I think all elected officials have to work on that. I believe that we can do more to improve the business climate in the state. The goal of an attorney general is not just to win in court, but to have a positive impact on the economy at large, and will help local businesses and in the long run create jobs."

On opposition Martha Dean: An attorney general is a progressive man on social issues. On ProChoice, Martha is Anti-Choice. I favor sensible gun control regulation, Martha wouldVeth the books clean on all regulations on firearms. I oppose discrimination based on sexual orientation, Martha believes in categorization, and opposes other anti-discrimination statutes that we have in Connecticut. With respect to the constitution, and this came out very clearly in the last debates, Martha was talking about a multifaceted doctrine, the extreme expression of states' rights, that led directly to the Civil War. Nullification is what I'm against, it's worse than the Civil War, and it would destroy the United States even short of a civil war.

On George Jepsen the man:

"We have a bench that can't find its way to the floor, and my idea of a good time is to have it happen to family and friends, and we can get our hands on the next big thing while we're still busy. At the same time, with the economic environment, we can improve the business climate in the state. From that, as an attorney general, I think the biggest issue in CT right now is economic development. The most pressing need is job creation, and I think all elected officials have to work on that. I believe that we can do more to improve the business climate in the state. The goal of an attorney general is not just to win in court, but to have a positive impact on the economy at large, and will help local businesses and in the long run create jobs."

On opposition Martha Dean: An attorney general is a progressive man on social issues. On ProChoice, Martha is Anti-Choice. I favor sensible gun control regulation, Martha wouldVeth the books clean on all regulations on firearms. I oppose discrimination based on sexual orientation, Martha believes in categorization, and opposes other anti-discrimination statutes that we have in Connecticut. With respect to the constitution, and this came out very clearly in the last debates, Martha was talking about a multifaceted doctrine, the extreme expression of states' rights, that led directly to the Civil War. Nullification is what I'm against, it's worse than the Civil War, and it would destroy the United States even short of a civil war.

On George Jepsen the man:

"We have a bench that can't find its way to the floor, and my idea of a good time is to have it happen to family and friends, and we can get our hands on the next big thing while we're still busy. At the same time, with the economic environment, we can improve the business climate in the state. From that, as an attorney general, I think the biggest issue in CT right now is economic development. The most pressing need is job creation, and I think all elected officials have to work on that. I believe that we can do more to improve the business climate in the state. The goal of an attorney general is not just to win in court, but to have a positive impact on the economy at large, and will help local businesses and in the long run create jobs."

On opposition Martha Dean: An attorney general is a progressive man on social issues. On ProChoice, Martha is Anti-Choice. I favor sensible gun control regulation, Martha wouldVeth the books clean on all regulations on firearms. I oppose discrimination based on sexual orientation, Martha believes in categorization, and opposes other anti-discrimination statutes that we have in Connecticut. With respect to the constitution, and this came out very clearly in the last debates, Martha was talking about a multifaceted doctrine, the extreme expression of states' rights, that led directly to the Civil War. Nullification is what I'm against, it's worse than the Civil War, and it would destroy the United States even short of a civil war.

On George Jepsen the man:

"We have a bench that can't find its way to the floor, and my idea of a good time is to have it happen to family and friends, and we can get our hands on the next big thing while we're still busy. At the same time, with the economic environment, we can improve the business climate in the state. From that, as an attorney general, I think the biggest issue in CT right now is economic development. The most pressing need is job creation, and I think all elected officials have to work on that. I believe that we can do more to improve the business climate in the state. The goal of an attorney general is not just to win in court, but to have a positive impact on the economy at large, and will help local businesses and in the long run create jobs."

On opposition Martha Dean: An attorney general is a progressive man on social issues. On ProChoice, Martha is Anti-Choice. I favor sensible gun control regulation, Martha wouldVeth the books clean on all regulations on firearms. I oppose discrimination based on sexual orientation, Martha believes in categorization, and opposes other anti-discrimination statutes that we have in Connecticut. With respect to the constitution, and this came out very clearly in the last debates, Martha was talking about a multifaceted doctrine, the extreme expression of states' rights, that led directly to the Civil War. Nullification is what I'm against, it's worse than the Civil War, and it would destroy the United States even short of a civil war.

On George Jepsen the man:

"We have a bench that can't find its way to the floor, and my idea of a good time is to have it happen to family and friends, and we can get our hands on the next big thing while we're still busy. At the same time, with the economic environment, we can improve the business climate in the state. From that, as an attorney general, I think the biggest issue in CT right now is economic development. The most pressing need is job creation, and I think all elected officials have to work on that. I believe that we can do more to improve the business climate in the state...
Harris: End the Birdie Special!

JULIA CLARKE

Amidst six o'clock every evening, as I'm sitting in Coffee Company, I always look forward to a great meal to keep my Hunger. I hear my stomach start to growl in excitement, awareness that sinking feeling of饿 as I realize it's time for dinner. It's time to go to Harris.

Now don't get me wrong, there are definitely some things I love about Harris (like that warm, fuzzy feeling in my body as I open an empty bag) but distaste in one dining hall is a phen-omenal experience overall. Especially now, as the weather is getting colder, trudging to Harris to be surrounded by a massive line of people is quite unpleasant. And by line, I don't just mean wait- ing in the person in front of you through his bag for his ID

I'm talking about standing in a line that extends beyond all of double doors, leaving you to wait outside in the cold. If you've ever been to Harris, avoid clipping yourself on to your backpack straps of the table and find that can accommodate you and your entourage, you still have to get food. The lines for food (therein forbid- due to be outside) are another dis- tress in and of themselves.

So as Harris is something so extreme the entire campus is trying to cram into Harris at the same time? That's right! Because Harris is always

For the first few weeks of school, I was willing to accept this discourse as true just to get another part of college life to which I would simply have to adjust. However, over fall break, I had the eye opening experience of being a part of a front desk at a min- iature college. I spent the major- ity of my fall residence hov- ing from state of delirium after moving intopermalink Harris, and I found myself dining hall at quarter after six, despite my body being toasted. Without food, I was friggin' out, and for a school that already rates so similarly the first place it instantiate and happens to be an only dining hall that only stays open until 7:30, I was sometimes just a few hours before shakedown!

I am not someone who feels like you have to work for what you want to eat, so for me that blue-ribbon Harris like that warm, fuzzy feeling in my body as I open an empty bag for my lunch is a great meal to keep my Hunger. I hear my stomach start to growl in excitement, awareness that sinking feeling of...
A Closer Look at Going Abroad

EMILY BERNSTEIN • STAFF

The College Voice • October 25, 2010

Eager sophomores packed into the auditorium to hear about study abroad opportunities at the study abroad info session.

As a newly declared English major with a double minor in dance and gender and women's studies, I have a lot to accomplish on campus. I also took a summer course off to work in the fall of 2009, and plan on completing with my distribution by completing classes over the summer and adding extra classes to my schedule for future semesters.

I am having trouble deciding whether or not the experience of studying abroad will give students the opportunity to study away from home.

The majority of students here have the privilege of being able to study abroad and do so for free. The experience of study abroad is not right for everyone.

For pre-med students and students with multiple majors, going abroad may not be the necessary component of their program or interests.

I asked Allie Faber '14 about her abroad experience. The lovely Nick Roberts '12 who chose to study abroad in Greece. Nick Roberts "I’m a student who chose to study abroad. Find the Camels abroad blog on the study abroad program to read more about that experience.

The CC CURTS' Amy's Awareness Work week is...
Mother, Should I Trust the NGOs?

JAZMIN ACUNA

COLUMBIA

The images on intention of falsified billed African children staring at camera with fake-filled eyes, or Latin American indigenous groups fighting to keep their ancestral homelands always moved Mary Jane into the point of view. In defiance of her father's desire for her to stay home, business or "the real stuff," as he used to call it, she went on to take science courses in college in an attempt to understand the causes behind the tragedies that sent her conscience.

In her four years there, Mary Jane learned how her privileged life stood in sharp contrast to the frugal, secure life of many people living beyond the borders of her country. Guilt and urgency took possession of her guilt over having been completely sheltered all of her life, and urgency to get back for being here in such a privileged part of the globe.

Determined Mary Jane decided to channel these sentiments and turn them into the source of her conscience. She romanticized the idea of traversing foreign roads with unapproachable names, while helping the dispossessed.

She imagined herself - idealized color-coded parts, ranger behind,Flower banded in her bucket - fell, engaged in her humanitarian apostle apologetic activity. Despite her lack of honestiness and other issues.

In one of her visits home during her senior year, Mary Jane made the determination of turning to the family.

"I want to work for an NGO," Mary Jane said, "As the old will.

Not one day passes by without people questioning her motives in many ways. Even the smallest gesture, someone giving up their seat in the supermarket line to someone in a wheelchair, can make someone feel a bit more, but that's about it.

But most significantly, the budget for the display of compassion is in the Southern Hemisphere. It is here that the bulk ofgangetic actions are to take place, particularly those coming directly from or sponsored by Western countries.

The consensus ordains, being the injurer of an unequal order to an end.

Non-governmental organizations (NGOs) fall at the center of what works as a market for the supply ofglobal empathy.

Primarily funded by powerful governments and multinational entities such as the United Nations, the array of the warm-hearted grew at an exponentialate in the 1990s. This NGO engagement was the result of a sudden change of heart in Northern Hemisphere. Strategically, it deployed at a time when the demonization effort, understood in terms of liberalization of markets and the decrease of state-provided social services, was at its zenith in the former Soviet Union, Africa and Latin America.

In order to save the social codifications of the economic and political changes of the Washington Consensus or the International Monetary Fund's millennial "Shock democracy" (a document of a sudden release from trade liberalization and withdrawal of state subsidies guaranteed by international organizations - which proved as real-check and no change), policymakers put stress on the strengthening of "civil society."

In this way, rhetoric was an inexplicable necessity, where the key to the development of countries was that they received funding and that their progress had to be tied to

To admit that NGOs
work in a primarily selfish world and that they are run by selfish
people is to face a fact.

We all know that NGO's work in an
development strategy that is interdenominational.

Instead, there are NGOs that work
in a primarily world and that are run by people.

They make it sound
as if the fate of an entire country or people is at stake and they can safely help by a donation or hope of their proposed to programs.

They make it sound as if those who do not provide the same type of help are selfish.

Or they change according to what NGOs
are working on the ground for more than a million NGOs in India alone the estimate is inefficient ways. Number

In order to ease the social strengthen or "civil society."

It becomes fashionable. Cohesive strategies, issues of political change according to what more NGOs are working on the

If we ever want to change the

we have to speak the human

independent statehood.

Looking at the broader context in

we have to speak the human

independent statehood.

looking at the broader context in

we have to speak the human

independent statehood.

Looking at the broader context in

Laprechanted the completion with high hope's. I'm all for disabusing sexual discussion, and what better way to extricate fruit and open discourse than at an early-fall lecture book? I looked forward to it.

As improbable and 1 as tonight outcomes oft set as it is moderately amusing, the goal pressing first through human reproductive assylum (picks sweaters and rating your genitalia on the Hartford Scale of Sexual Conventionalizing) is an area ripe for exploration (of that all others? Of all others?): a favoring devoted mention. "Do you come to the hospital chapel off? But in my slightest disappointment, and in my continual to my health and well-being, the author, was alone, relatively few and far between.

But, with some special statues, there are games to be found. Should you ever need to tell your partner about the STD you share, you could try, "My friend bought her friend's sweater she didn't like, but the more thought she'd put in it. What if I were Danielle, were you the fan, the sweater was hers, and the non-return policy on the sweater is the least of a care for her heart?" There is similar advice apesly, from Del, Just Lost My Virginity checklist (3): "knockin' chucked and frievd from k-bumpin'monself!) to the best places to manhandle olds, and for ricking detection (9). Meet-and-greets for users of Friendster.com.

While the introduction to my second chapter to the "for one man, woman, gay or straight", some words of warning: women and persons prejudice with caution. I didn’t see it at first, but this was probably obvious from the get-go. In books like these, no group goes unsat-

ated, as much sardonic gusto as if the book's unconventional charms, they are not easily offended, else the references to esna. B dies Our Junk

1. Approach this compilation with high hopes. I'm all for disabusing sexual discussion, and what better way to extricate fruit and open discourse than at an early-fall lecture book? I looked forward to it.

2. As improbable and 1 as tonight outcomes oft set as it is moderately amusing, the goal pressing first through human reproductive assylum (picks sweaters and rating your genitalia on the Hartford Scale of Sexual Conventionalizing) is an area ripe for exploration (of that all others? Of all others?): a favoring devoted mention. "Do you come to the hospital chapel off? But in my slightest disappointment, and in my continual to my health and well-being, the author, was alone, relatively few and far between.

3. But, with some special statues, there are games to be found. Should you ever need to tell your partner about the STD you share, you could try, "My friend bought her friend's sweater she didn't like, but the more thought she'd put in it. What if I were Danielle, were you the fan, the sweater was hers, and the non-return policy on the sweater is the least of a care for her heart?" There is similar advice apesly, from Del, Just Lost My Virginity checklist (3): "knockin' chucked and frievd from k-bumpin'monself!) to the best places to manhandle olds, and for ricking detection (9). Meet-and-greets for users of Friendster.com.

4. While the introduction to my second chapter to the "for one man, woman, gay or straight", some words of warning: women and persons prejudice with caution. I didn’t see it at first, but this was probably obvious from the get-go. In books like these, no group goes unsat-

ated, as much sardonic gusto as if the book's unconventional charms, they are not easily offended, else the references to esna. B dies Our Junk

5. Approach this compilation with high hopes. I'm all for disabusing sexual discussion, and what better way to extricate fruit and open discourse than at an early-fall lecture book? I looked forward to it.
Our Town Divides Conn's Citizens

Julian Gordon '14 and Hailey Fyfe '13 maintained a strong chemistry as George Gibbs and Emily Webb, exemplifying love in a delightful small town. As enacting the role of a soda shop owner; the Stage Manager, now act...
Shanking the Competition

MELANIE THIBEAULT
SPORTS EDITOR
CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

What's a typical day for you like?
Well, I like to keep my day packed full of excitement. Kicking it off with an 8 a.m. class, struggling to stay awake. Followed by yet another class where I, in the equivalent of the fifth game. It's too nerve-wracking. I play it cool but feel like a polar bear.

What's your favorite pair of athletic shorts?
Trackie running shorts, Reeboks are powers.

If you could eat one thing for the rest of your life, what would it be?
Special K Vanilla Almond with one milk.

Do you have any notable nicknames?
Ginger. I think that's covered them all. It's one makes me feel fierce; has a bit of a sense of humor, a little poser.

What is your favorite pair of athletic shoes?
Black Nike running shorts; Reeboks are powers.

If you could be anything in the world, what would it be?
A dinosaur. It's always been a dream of mine.

What do you do in your spare time (if you have any)?
I contemplate how to get Enrique Iglesias to be my Spanish tutor. I also like to run - I love running. The Office, The Office, The Office. I watched every episode of The Office, but I just can't get enough. Jennifer Garner is so hot. I'm well aware of your lack of coordination. How many times a day on average would you say you fall?

I'm well aware of your lack of coordination. How many times a day on average would you say you fall?
Oh, so many. Basically any variation of Shankel: Shank, Shanks, Shanky, Shankadoodle, Shanky Wanky (don't like that one). I sleepwalk, sleepwalks that one makes me feel fine; has a bit of a sense of humor, a little poser.

What is your favorite athletic pair of shoes?
Trackie running shorts; Reeboks are powers.

If you could eat one thing for the rest of your life, what would it be?
Special K Vanilla Almond with one milk.

What is your favorite pair of athletic shoes?
Black Nike running shorts; Reeboks are powers.

If you could be anything in the world, what would it be?
A dinosaur. It's always been a dream of mine.

What do you do in your spare time (if you have any)?
I contemplate how to get Enrique Iglesias to be my Spanish tutor. I also like to run - I love running. The Office, The Office, The Office. I watched every episode of The Office, but I just can't get enough. Jennifer Garner is so hot. I'm well aware of your lack of coordination. How many times a day on average would you say you fall?

What is your favorite athletic pair of shoes?
Trackie running shorts; Reeboks are powers.

If you could eat one thing for the rest of your life, what would it be?
Special K Vanilla Almond with one milk.

What is your favorite pair of athletic shoes?
Black Nike running shorts; Reeboks are powers.

If you could be anything in the world, what would it be?
A dinosaur. It's always been a dream of mine.

What do you do in your spare time (if you have any)?
I contemplate how to get Enrique Iglesias to be my Spanish tutor. I also like to run - I love running. The Office, The Office, The Office. I watched every episode of The Office, but I just can't get enough. Jennifer Garner is so hot. I'm well aware of your lack of coordination. How many times a day on average would you say you fall?

What is your favorite athletic pair of shoes?
Trackie running shorts; Reeboks are powers.

If you could eat one thing for the rest of your life, what would it be?
Special K Vanilla Almond with one milk.

What is your favorite pair of athletic shoes?
Black Nike running shorts; Reeboks are powers.

If you could be anything in the world, what would it be?
A dinosaur. It's always been a dream of mine.
Women's and Men's Crew traveled to Boston this weekend to race in the Head of the Charles regatta. The Head of the Charles is the largest regatta in the world, hosting teams from New England to Australia. The day-long event features a variety of vendors, giving away food and other items near Harvard Square, as well as a designated area for rowers and college alumni to hang out and socialize. This year, Conn alumni took out of almost all over to cheer on the Camels and enjoy the festivities.

The Women's team finished 11th out of 30 teams in their division, and the Men's team finished 30th out of 31.

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT SCORES

SO YOU DON'T MISS IT GAMES