Maggiore Proposes Change To Removal Process

by Sarah Heatley
The College Voice

In an apparent attempt to look towards the future and away from last week's controversies, John Maggiore, '91, house senator of Lazrus, has drafted a proposal instituting a policy of public impeachment and removal hearings for elected student leaders. Maggiore's proposal, scheduled to appear before the Student Assembly on Thursday, provides separate means for impeachment and removal of an official. An impeachment includes a vote of the Student Assembly on a resolution stating that the official 'has failed or refused to meet his or her responsibilities as a student leader.' Removal requires a vote of the Assembly and the Judicial Board on a resolution stating that the official 'is no longer fit for the position of such an official due to behavior unbecoming of a student leader."

Maggiore considers the Honor Code, confidentiality, and the power of the Judiciary Board essential to the college.

SGA Votes To Have Illegal Keg Deposits Go Towards Dorm Funds

by Alexandra Silos
New Editor

At last Thursday's assembly meeting, the Student Government Association voted to change the former policy regarding the confiscation of illegal kegs. As the policy stood two weeks ago, funds obtained from the deposit of an illegal keg were put into the Student Assembly's campus activities fund. Maggiore proposed that the funds be put into the Honor Code Trust fund, which has been used for student activities. The J-Board voted 18 to 7 in favor of Maggiore's proposal.

Removal Procedure Questioned

Despite campus-wide criticism, select members of the Student Government Association and Joseph Tolliver, dean of student life, stand firmly behind their decision which determined the handling of the removal hearing for Peter Bergstrom, '91, former house governor of Hankert Dormitory.

"I absolutely believe that they [SGA] used the right procedure," said Tolliver. "With all the options we were dealing with, we chose the best one," he said.

The problem of procedure arose when, according to Tolliver, a loophole was found in the "C" book regulations. Two years ago SGA decided to divide the role of house president into two positions. At one time, the house president served as both the dormitory representative on the assembly and was in charge of House Council within the dormitory.

According to the 1986-87 "C" Book, Article IV, Section G, the removal of a house president was handled by a vote of confidence. Although it does not appear in the "C" Book, Tolliver confirmed that, in the case of an assembly infraction, the impeachment of the house president was handled by an assembly removal hearing.

"I think that students figured that a student leader wouldn't break the house code," said Carla Munroe, '90, president of SGA. "This was very naive on their part," she added.

Bergstrom's impeachment was the result of a recommendation by the J-Board after he was found guilty of charges brought against him. The circumstances of the removal hearing became unlike anything the assembly had encountered in the past three years. Both the confidential information used in the J-Board hearing and the public nature of an SGA assembly removal hearing had to be considered.

When Peter Bergstrom, '91, former house governor of Hankert Dormitory, agreed to take his dismissal case to the Student Government Assembly, he did so with assurances of confidentiality.

However, at last Thursday's SGA meeting, Assembly President Jeffrey Berman, '90, house senator of Morrisson, unintentionally revealed Bergstrom's name during open debate. Bergstrom's name is now a matter of public record.

Fariña Stresses Class Unity

by Lauren Kitzkin
The College Voice

Members of the newly elected freshman Class Executive Board stressed unity and participation as major themes of the upcoming year. The board includes President Marisa Farina, Vice President Colleen Shanley, Judiciary Board Representatives Jeffrey Berman and Molly Embree, and Student Activities Council Representatives Tom Arcuri and Ali Nash.

"I'm so proud to represent this class as president," said Farina before assuming her first official duty by representing her class at the Student Government Association Assembly Thursday night.

"I was really surprised about the election results," she added. "All of a sudden it hit me that I was freshman class president." Berman felt that the J-Board election was also a difficult race. "With 11 people running, it's a real surprise...I think that everyone who ran was qualified," he said. "It was important to accentuate the differences between myself and the other candidates—that's the key.

Part One of A Campus Safety Series: Are We Really Safe?

by Craig Timbor
The College Voice

When an unknown man roamed through south campus dormitories on September 14, few students seemed to notice. Strolling into shower areas, rummaging through a room, starting some, going unnoticed by most, he seemed to move about the campus in a sophisticated duck and weave that eluded all security measures.

He was not able to take anything, no one was raped. In fact, he did not act aggressively towards anyone. But as the enormity of his feat became apparent as belated reports kept pouring into Campus Safety, it dazzled, confused, and terrified nearly all who learned of it.

He removed clothing from a shower stall while a female student was showering at 8:30 a.m. on the second floor of Windham dormitory, was seen near a female student in a Knowlton bathroom, and was accidentally interrupted while apparently burglarizing a room in the same dormitory between 9:30 and 10:00 a.m.

Hats Off to the Voice

Letter to the Voice:
First, I'd like to say how impressed I was by the quality and diversity of articles in the latest issues and by the number of freshmen who have contributed to them. It speaks well for the class of 1993 that so many have become involved so quickly with such fine work.

Second, I'd like to commend the production staff for the paper's new look. From the layout to the expanded headlines to the different print types, it all adds up to a much sharper looking paper.

Sincerely,
Louise S. Brown
Dean of Freshmen

No Smoking in the Library

Letter to the Voice:
I must remind the campus community that smoking is not permitted in Shain Library, except in the 24-hour lounge. Although wall-mounted ashtrays were installed in side stairwells several years ago to try to keep halls and offices free of the smoke, they are not serving that purpose and are to be removed. If you wish to smoke, please do it outside whenever possible, or in the 24-hour lounge. Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,
Brian Rogers
College Librarian

Pennies For AIDS Stolen

Letter to the Voice:
For the second year the Class of 1990 has been the proud sponsor of PENNIES FOR AIDS, and for the second year a cannister of money has disappeared. This drive to raise money for the New London AIDS Center was started by members of our class last year. This event has enabled our community to play a small but significant role in helping in the fight against AIDS.

Cannisters were placed around campus on October 11. As I came across these cannisters, I was very happy to see them slowly fill up with coins and even dollar bills in only a few short days. You can imagine my disappointment when it was brought to my attention that the cannister by the Cro Snack Shop had "mysteriously disappeared." It angers me that this money, which was donated by people in our community to help the New London AIDS Center, has been taken by someone for their own personal use.

I only hope that the individual or individuals who committed this act of selfishness will realize that they have taken from a very worthy cause. I would ask you to please reconsider your actions.

Sincerely,
Tracy Vaillarta, '90
Senior Class President

"American Pictures"

Unattended by Pros.

Letter to the Voice:
On Wednesday, October 11, I attended the showing of "American Pictures" in Palmer Auditorium. I was shocked, saddened and angered by what I saw. I also admit to being ignorant of some of the many terrible things that occurred in this country, especially in the South. However, I feel lucky to have seen this show and to have my eyes opened. Unfortunately, I feel the above emotions during the show for a different reason as well. This was because I did not see one faculty or administration member there. Perhaps I just was not able to see those that did attend.

However, I would have hoped that there would be enough faculty or administration at the show so that I could not help but see them. Regrettably, even after searching the crowd, I saw none. This disheartened me greatly, leading me to believe these people felt they did not have to see it, or did not feel the effort of being at school after class hours was worth it. I think everyone should have benefited from this performance. For a school that boasts so much diversity, it seems we have a long way to go if the faculty and administration feel they know enough.

Sincerely,
Tracy A. Cashman, '92

The B-2 Stealth Bomber Is Useless

by Andrew Schiff, '93

The total cost of the B-2 Stealth bomber program will end up amounting to over $70 billion dollars. This will make it the second most expensive weapons system ever built by any country in the world. What exactly will our $70 billion hard-earned tax dollars buy? Our money will buy a weapons systems with unparalleled capabilities. A plane that can penetrate deep into enemy territory, virtually undetected, to drop nuclear bombs on mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles before they can be launched. At the United States. The moment, no other weapons system available in the world can do into a mission. Mobile missiles are nearly impossible to destroy by conventional means because of their constantly changing emplacement. Hence, the Soviets began to develop and field mobile missiles in the 70s and early 80s, the Pentagon set about finding a way to destroy this new threat, the result being the B-2. The Pentagon sold this concept to the Congress, the White House and the American people as a necessity to protect them from the Soviets new threat to world peace.

A closer look, though, at the realities of modern strategic warfare, show that the whole concept, and therefore justification, behind the B-2s development is incorrect. In a nuclear war between the two superpowers, one would either be an initiator or a retaliator, not both. If one initiates a first-strike, the objective of that strike would be to destroy an enemies warheads to prevent them from retaliating. If the enemies missiles and bombers are eliminated, the enemy is incapable of attacking the initiators homeland. To accomplish this, the initiators would utilize all of the weapons they dispositional to attempt to ensure the complete destruction of the enemies retaliatory capability; basically, he would fire all of his missiles and drop all of his bombs.

If one is in the unfortunate position of having to be the retaliator, the approach is more psychological than tactical. If ones radar screens suddenly shows thousands of inbound nuclear warheads and hundreds of bombers with nuclear payloads racing toward one country, one is going to be a tad bit upset. In an effort to make sure ones enemies pay the price for starting the Final World War, one is going launch every weapon in ones possession. Yes, some of the retaliators weapons will be caught on the ground before they can be launched, but those that are able to be launched, will be as soon as possible; basically, he will launch all of his missiles and bombers.

Now wait a minute. If the whole idea behind the B-2 Stealth bomber is to destroy mobile missiles (and, as I have illustrated in both scenarios, these missiles should already have been launched), what are the B-2s going to do? Command post? Already taken care of by the missiles. Ammunition? Dump trucks. Missiles? Industry? Missiles? What about the cities?

Missiles, as well. What, then, are the B-2s going to bomb? These planes, each costing over $500 million apiece, are going to bomb empty missile silos. The B-2s feet may be able to evade the sophisticated air defenses of the Soviet Union but it will be too late for their targets, the mobile missiles, will be long gone. The Pentagon, as drugs are ripping the heart out of our cities, as AIDS continues its rampage, and as children are living in cardboard boxes on street corners, is pouring enormous sums of money into a program that it knows will have no mission upon it. Is anyone worried about a shortage of drug budgets, wasting $70 billion on a basically useless weapons system is outrageous. The morality of warfare aside, if one is going to spend $70 billion on something, it damn well better have a viable mission. Yes, the B-2 is a truly beautiful aircraft and the very fact that it is costs us a billion dollars to build such a plane is a credit to our technological community, but one must be able to set one's eyes aside and realize the faults behind such a system. We simply cannot afford a $70 billion mistake.

SAFE SEX IN OTHER COUNTRIES MAY NOT MEAN CONDOMS

Matriculation Takes An In-depth Look at the Honor Code

Jen Ammirati, assistant to J-Board

The survey was a key point to the new matriculation.

The board took the ethical choices survey during leadership training this past summer. “It generated a lot of discussion among the eight of us. We hadn’t had the opportunity to discuss our opinions about the issues raised prior to it,” says Ammirati. The survey had tried another means of containing the spread of AIDS: needle exchange centers. The government has set up 15 centers where drug users can get needles, counseling and medical care. The group which has been established to monitor the centers' successes reports none of the busiest centers have 20-50 clients a day. One of their main concerns is an inability to reach enough people, and they are presently implementing a program to bus supplies to housing projects, and they have employed someone to make home deliveries.

As Liverpool's drug and AIDS coordinator, Allan Parry points out: “AIDS is the classic preventable disease. New York as a whole has already died or are HIV-positive...That is what you get if you don't take steps early,” (World Press Review, June 1989)

This IV drug using community is one of the fastest growing portions of the AIDS people.
"Safe Sex" is a Problem in Foreign Countries

It is one of the most difficult to reach or treat. Needle exchange programs in the U.S., though, are very limited and have been met with great opposition from many angles. They have also been largely ineffective, again not reaching the people who need it most.

In contrast to Sweden’s and Great Britain’s apparently up-front handing of the AIDS epidemic, the Soviet Union denied the threat of AIDS for a long time. It has been reported from a follower of the Soviet Union’s attitude towards AIDS that at one time AIDS was held up as another demonstration of the capitalist structure and “an energetic Soviet misinformation campaign asserted the AIDS virus was a product of U.S. biological warfare research” (New Republic, April 17, 1989). The official party line in the Soviet Union is that AIDS has retreated from its initial strict denial of the epidemic, however, their far less advanced medical system may prove troublesome in handling the testing and treatment of AIDS victims. For example, in America it is known that AIDS is often spread by sharing contaminated needles for injecting illegal drugs, but it has been reported in the Soviet Union that needle sharing in hospitals is common because of the lack of disposable supplies.

The situation with condoms is a similar predicament, since they are largely unavailable or of very poor quality in the Soviet Union, so can’t be promoted as preventing the spread of the AIDS epidemic. The area hardest hit by the AIDS epidemic is Africa, where it is most spread through heterosexual contact, and increasingly by unsterilized medical procedures and infected blood transfusions. A report to the World Health Organization estimated that in some areas up to 20% of the sexually active age groups have been infected. The United States, with its wealth of resources has not been able to contain. The virus, it becomes evident that they are facing an epidemic that even America, with its wealth of resources has not been able to contain. The international perspective on AIDS is not optimistic, researchers suggest that the devastating effects of AIDS will probably get worse before they get better.

Editor’s Note: On Monday, October 23, senior dormitory representatives will be collecting donations for the Pennies for AIDS campaign. Consensers can find around the campus.

Rand Cooper Reads "From Work in Progress"

by Lisa M. Alligretto
Editor-in-Chief

"Remember the good parts because they will be included in the final version and forget all the bad parts because they will not." With these final instructions, Rand Cooper, author of "The Last to Go," read three sections from what he calls a novel "very much a work in progress" on Thursday night in Dana Auditorium.

Currently entitled "A Dream at the End of the World," the novel focuses on an American girl in her early twenties who goes to Africa as a volunteer and a black African university professor who is jailed because of his political views. The novel is set in an unnamed African country in 1980. Cooper spent almost two years in Africa as a volunteer after he graduated from college.

A native New Londoner, Cooper came to Connecticut College as part of a Writing Workshop sponsored by the English Department. The series was created so that New London high school students interested in creative writing would have the opportunity to talk with published authors. Blanche Boyd, who is writer-in-residence at Connecticut College and who helped initiate the series, said, "Books aren’t born in the library or the bookstore. It’s very comforting and demystifying to have a chance to talk to writer’s." Cooper met with New London area high school students and their teachers, along with Connecticut College students and members of the English department, in a private session on Thursday afternoon. Here he talked about his first ideas about what it meant to be a writer. "My idea of a writer was someone who had all of these tremendous experiences...and wrote about them," said Cooper.

For his own fiction, Cooper relies on inspiration. "Often something will happen to me or someone else or that won’t go away. I begin to think, ‘What is this thing, this situation between two people?’"

In the end, however, it is not inspiration but language which gives him depth according to Cooper. "What is the most powerful way I have of propelling me into a story is the way I have of saying something."

An informational meeting on the Teacher Certification Programs will be held by the Education Department on October 26th, 4:30 p.m. in Stanwood Harris College House. Refreshments will be served.
Impeachment Process Proposal

To Be Presented Next Week

The board of the J-Board was essential to the college.

Impeachment hearings for charges that are "more serious than an Honor Code violation," said Maggiore, would be assessed by the SGA. The accused would be responsible for submitting a petition of impeachment, signed by 40 percent of the branch of SGA upon which the questioned serves. In such a case, all charges, discussions, and votes will be open to the campus. A majority will be necessary for impeachment.

If the official fails to resign despite a petition from the J-Board or SGA impeachment, a special Removal Hearing Committee comprised of student leaders and the J-Board will decide the necessity of the student's removal.

The committee outlined in Maggiore's proposal would consist of three SGA members, three house governors, one student at-large, the SGA president and the chair of the Judiciary Board. The committee would be elected early in the academic year, but would only assemble if such a need arises.

Within 15 days of impeachment, a public removal hearing would be scheduled. A 2/3 majority vote could remove the official.

The only options for a private executive session are the voting and discussion of evidence deemed confidential by the Judiciary Board.

Maggiore has introduced this proposal because "an elected official has to be answerable to his/her actions." He added that it seemed contradictory to allow public scrutiny of an elected leader in normal circumstances, but provide a protective veil of secrecy upon allegations of wrongdoing.

"I have encountered some criticism last week with the silence upheld concerning the impeachment of a house govern- for Honor Code violations," said Carla Munroe, '90, SGA president.

"Maggiore's proposal is reasonable," said Munroe. "I strongly support Maggiore's proposal in its drafting.'

- Carla Munroe, President of SGA

'I have no serious problem [with the policy] as long as student leaders know they will be held accountable'

- Tod Preston, J-Board Chair

Meet Students: The Campus Daily

"I have no serious problem [with the policy] as long as student leaders know they will be held accountable." Tod Preston, J-Board Chair, reiterated that the "actions of the Assembly" were valid; however, he hopes his proposal will reduce confusion in the future.

Tod Preston, '91, chair of the Judiciary Board, supports the policy of public removal hearings, although not without some reservations. He said, "I have no serious problem [with the policy] as long as student leaders know they will be held accountable." He thinks that a proposal, such as Maggiore's, would strengthen the whole judicial process on campus. "It's time we had a clear impeachment process on the books."

His reservations pertain to the rights of the accused official. He is cautious of a procedure with "odds so stacked against the person who has been asked to resign that he will not get through the process of impeachment." He is working closely with Maggiore and Munroe to ensure that this is not the case in Maggiore's proposal.

Preston also expressed concern that confidentiality of charges in a public forum could be inadvertently breached. "It would be very hard to open an impeachment hearing and get apart from de- tails." Preston and the J-Board fear they might have themselves been questioned over the fact that they informed SGA mem- bers of the impeached governor's charges.

The board feels that the impeachment trial should have been handled by the Board of Governors.

"Tolliver disagrees. According to Tolliver, because the SGA Assembly is the only legislative body at Connecticut College, they are the only body capable of handling the removal process. "The Assembly is the first among equals," he said.

"Maggiore's proposal is reasonable," said Carla Munroe, President of SGA. "I strongly support Maggiore's proposal in its drafting.'

- Carla Munroe, President of SGA

'I have no serious problem [with the policy] as long as student leaders know they will be held accountable'

- Tod Preston, J-Board Chair

"We had to come up with a compromise that dealt with the public and dealt with the private," said Tolliver.

"The SGAs Assembly does not determine guilt and that SGA cannot impose any punishments. "What should be decided is whether or not the offense which has been proven guilty of committing warrants his removal from the SGA," said Maggiore.

To help rectify the lack of procedure, Maggiore, along with Munroe and Preston, are drafting a proposal which will address the impeachment of a SGA officer. The proposal, which will be presented to the full committee at the next Thursday meeting, calls for a Removal Hearing Committee comprised of members of the assembly, house governors and one student at large. The president of the SGA and the J-Board chair would also be a part of this committee.

"What I am concerned about is that this never happens again," said Maggiore.

Mike Sandner, '91, chair of the Board of Governors, is unhappy with both the procedure used to handle Bregman's removal and Maggiore's proposal. "We are upset as a Board about the way it [the impeachment] was handled," said Sandner.

The Board feels that the impeachment trial should have been handled by the Board of \[with the policy\] as long as student leaders know they will be held accountable'.

College Receive Mixed Reviews in National Publications

by Alexandra Sile
News Editor

In two recent national publications, American colleges were assessed as being "the best" and the "choosiest." Connecticut College, however, managed only to make one of the lists. In its October 11 issue, "USA Today" added Connecticut College to its "USA's Choosiest Colleges" list. The article, named the United States Coast Guard Academy as the most selective school in the nation accepting only nine percent of its applicants. It continued by noting that "Connecticut College, coincidentally also in New London, Conn., also joins the choosiest list for the first time."

"I think it ratifies the direction that the College has taken over the last several years," said Claire Gaudiani, president of the college. The College was forty-fourth on a list of fifty-two schools, accepting 43 percent of its applicants with an enrollment of 1,700. The average Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) score at Connecticut College was 1200 and the cost was $18,450. It also listed the percentage of men was slightly more than 45 percent.

"It's a real credit to the work of the dean of admissions and the college relations office that worked extremely hard to place more than fifty articles in the national press last year about the college and I think it's... sending out strong messages about the quality of education here... people who have choices choose to be here," Gaudiani added.

That national recognition, however, did not help Connecticut College in the 1989 edition of the "U.S. News and World Report" list as a primary source from which high school students draw. "This publication isn't the biggest decision maker for students. Most look at the rankings in Baron's [Guide to Colleges]," said Munroe.

Munroe added that the "U.S. News and World Report" list is as "biased. The presidents of other colleges have lists of other schools and decide on the basis of the five criterion... most Ivy league schools are going to grade themselves highly to keep them at the top," she said.

The category for academic reputation was determined by surveying 3,879 college presidents, academic deans and admissions officers at 1,294 schools. Responding to the report, Gaudiani said "we now meet the qualifications from the admissions standpoint so the dean of admissions has done her job... I think we need to work the community a much more basic question 'do we want to be on that list,' should we be in that group?" "That's a question the community was asked in the course of strategic planning. There's been a real controversy about that which surprised me."

Most surprising and disappointing, however, is that Connecticut College did not make the article's "Up-And-Comers" list. Schools such as Colorado College and Macalister College in Minnesota were "most often named as 'up-and-comers' by college presidents, deans and admissions officers" in the "U.S. News and World Report" reputational survey.

Joseph Tolliver, dean of student life, having worked as two schools on the list, Trinity and Barnard Colleges, was "blown away by the report...it missed Conn altogether...even in the up and coming schools," he said.

"We're right below the tier of schools that are listed," said Munroe. "We're just not making yet," she added.

Illegal Keg Deposit Belongs To Dorm

Vallarta argued that the loss of the deposit was simply one of the risks of having an illegal keg. You know it's illegal and you're obviously taking a risk. you're going to lose the deposit on it...it's an added deterrent," she said. This amendment failed 26 to 5. Maggiore, '91, house senator of Lazarus, proposed to have the money obtained from the illegal keg deposit go to non-alcoholic dorm functions. "I think it's ironic that the money received from an illegal keg could very well go right back to an alcoholic event," said Maggiore. His "friendly amendment", however, also failed with a vote of 24-3-2.

Fisfis was disturbed by the result. "The assembly can't go out and be its own crusader in the name of the students," he said.

Are Students At Connecticut College Really Safe?

National Campus Crime Problem

- In a survey of 698 colleges, 31 students were killed on college campuses in the USA last year.
- Among other crimes reported: 653 rapes, 22,170 burglaries, 13,079 assaults, 1,874 armed robberies.
- One in four current students has been a crime victim at college - mirroring the rate for the whole USA population.
- A violent crime - among them rape, robbery, assault - occurs on campus once for every 500 students. The ratio varies little if the school is in a city, suburb or small town.
- There was a five percent increase in campus crime from 1986 to 1987.

Since their daughter's rape and murder in April of 1986 at Lehigh University, Howard and Constance Clery have dedicated themselves to improving safety on college campuses.

Using the money from the settlement of a lawsuit against Lehigh University, reported to amount to more than $2 million, they founded Security on Campus, Inc.

One area that the Clerys have focused attention on is forcing colleges to release statistics about crime on their campuses. Their state representative initiated a bill to require all Pennsylvania colleges and universities to report the number of serious crimes to the state police and make the information available to students, faculty, and employees.

Areas are evaluated on a regular basis and, due to special equipment requirements, lighting is restored after a number is gathered that warrants use of the special equipment. A dark area may be responded to immediately.

Shrubbery is even more difficult to evaluate without expert consultation, but Tollaher noted that some plant growth was cut back behind Cozier-Williams Student Center.

"It's safer there because that shrubbery is gone," he said.

Tollaher, who has played an active role in improving security, believes that this and other issues need more extensive investigation by the administration.

This intruder thing has pointed out to me that the status quo is unacceptable," he said.

Next Week: Are We At Fault? How Students Jeopardize Their Own Safety.
Renee Soulis, for the third consecutive year, spoke about alcohol and drug abuse for National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week. Soulis, who works for the Freedom From Chemical Dependency Foundation, urged students to be careful with alcohol and drugs and to try to help peers with substance abuse problems.

Soulis explained that marijuana remains in your system for days after you have smoked it. She said that she has trouble reading and remembering numbers because of the THC that has built up in her brain. "I would test positive for marijuana use today, and I haven't smoked in years," she said.

"I had always heard it was organic, non-addicting and safe. That's a lie. Of all the drugs that have hurt my body, I see marijuana as the drug that has caused the most destruction, even over cocaine and LSD," Soulis said.

When Soulis asked how many students felt they knew someone who was a substance abuser, only two of the approximately fifty students present responded in the negative. When she asked how many students felt there were substance abusers in their immediate family, about half of the students present responded in the affirmative.

Soulis encouraged students to confront friends that they think might have a substance abuse problem. She explained that helping a friend can be a long process of intervention that should begin with genuine concern, not yelling or accusing the person. She recommends these steps:

1. Don't wait - if you think there might be a problem, confront the person now.
2. Try saying something like, "I just wanted to let you know I'm a little concerned about your drinking."
3. Get more friends involved in helping the person.
4. Stick to the facts of how the person is abusing drugs, avoid arguments that can confuse the issue.

Despite delays in the tabulation of dorm votes held on October 28, the Finance Committee's proposed student organization budget passed with 669 in favor and 334 opposed.

The official release of results was prolonged because off-campus votes had to be returned and Windham Dormitory failed to receive quorum.

Betsy Grenier, '91, SGA vice-president and chair of the Finance Committee, conducted a re-vote in Windham by placing formal ballots on each door. When the ballots were returned, the election board tabulated the results.

Budget Passes Campus-Wide: Monies May Now Be Allocated

The Student Government Association Assembly began with the announcement by Nicole Beck, '90, director of public relations, of recent elections for the class of 1993. Maria Faraia was voted 1993 president, Colleen Shanley vice-president, Jeffery Berman and Molly Embree as Judiciary Board representatives, and Tom Arcuri and Ali Nasbas as SGA representatives.

In the end, she asked the student seniors to remember that there was an alcohol problem at Connecticut College. Of all the students present, only three of the students thought it was not a problem.

"If all of you agree that you won't drink at the next party, you'd be surprised at the ramifications that can have," Soulis said.
Jerome Robbins Brightens Broadway

Jerome Robbins off their feet and takes them to places that they've never been. Shapiro leaves no question as to why she earned it. The reason is plain: She is a master of her craft.

Debbie Shapiro

Charlotte d'Ambrose

The woman defies the laws of Robbins' ballet. She has been able to put her stamp on the choreography, to create a role that is uniquely her own.

The show is a triumph of Robbins' vision, a testament to his ability to tell a story through dance.

While there are elements of the show that could be improved, the overall impact is undeniable. "Sea of Love" is a show that should not be missed. It is a work of art, a celebration of the human spirit.
"The Fabulous Baker Boys" Fizzles... Jeff Bridges and Michelle Pfeiffer Sizzle

Women Invade British Pop Music Scene

The British music scene has been witness to a variety of trends in the past year, ranging from the phenomena of Acid House to the current ska revival. One of the most interesting developments of the past year is the sudden significance of several girl-fronted pop groups major labels.

The trend started off with the success of the Primitives, who had emerged out of the independent British music scene with their hit single, "Crash," last year. Fronted by blonde lead singer Tracy Tormé, the Primitives, in "Crash," combined the energy of punk with poppy lyrics. Clearly displaying the influence of the Buzzcocks' best love songs, the Velvet Underground at their most poppiest, and Blondie in its early days of hook-laden and simple perfection, the Primitives heralded the return of power-pop.

Subsequently, other bands of a similare nature were signed by major labels and have since found mainstream success. Like the Primitives, these bands are fronted by female singers and specialize in pop music.

With song titles like "There's a Barbarian in the Back of My Car," Andrea Lewis' "Love and Revolution," allusions to the original Primitives and Buzzcocks, with less impressive results. This film that went from only marginal success in the theatres to video immortality. "Fletch," starring former Saturday Night Live favorite Chevy Chase, offers a previously unheard of mix of deadpan humor with an extremely effective action/romantic storyline. Despite the risk of having the two elements competing, the humor/mystery chemistry proves so strong that both aspects actually helps the movie maintain an entertaining pace which, instead of being distracting, only makes it succeed in two ways rather than one.

The BOTTOM LINE: Either way, this one certainly does not rival the chemistry between Jeff Bridges and Michelle Pfeiffer. The empty, smoke-filled lobby of some inn, one of the most sensual scenes of the movie takes place. I believe I shall merely call it the Massage Scene and let you imagine the rest. The movie does briskly but completely unravel the mystery and, as I have mentioned, it also features some of film's most memorable one-liners as well as several hilarious chase sequences.

For the first movie rental pick of the week, it seems only appropriate to start with a feature film that went from only marginal success in the theatres to video immortality. "Fletch," starring former Saturday Night Live favorite Chevy Chase, offers a previously unheard of mix of deadpan humor with an extremely effective action/romantic storyline. Despite the risk of having the two elements competing, the humor/mystery chemistry proves so strong that both aspects actually helps the movie maintain a quick, highly entertaining pace which, instead of being distracting, only makes it succeed in two ways rather than one.

"Fletch" begins with L. A. reporter Irwin (Chevy Chase) posing as a bum at the beach to investigate drug traffic he suspects is taking place there. One afternoon a well-dressed businessman (Tim Matheson—"Otter" in "Animal House") approaches him and offers him a thousand dollars just to hear a proposal—a proposal, it turns out, to have Fletch actually kill him.

I don't want to ruin it for those of you who have not seen it, or those of you who have, so suffice it to say the movie does briskly but completely unravel the mystery and, as I have mentioned, it also features some of film's most memorable one-liners as well as several hilarious chase sequences.

Because "Fletch" may be one of the most frequently seen video rentals ever, this week I am going to mention an alternative especially for those die-hards that can almost quote the whole picture, portraying the stereotypic deep-voice-whose-dreams-have-never-come-true.

The Rental Review will~Come a regular feature of the Arts & Entertainment Section.

Volleyball: Conn Wins Two in One Day.

by John Carey
The College Voice

Sure, the Women’s Volleyball team has had a tough season and had many close matches, but more importantly, they have not quit nor assumed a poor attitude. Says one player, “It’s difficult to remain excited about the team when we lose, thank God we’re still positive about it.”

On Saturday, October 7th, while the larger part of us enjoyed the first day of vacation, the women in blue had two consecutive victorious matches. The first was against Albertus Magnus, a school not quite at Conn’s usual playing level. Coach Tod Cochran said, “We should have beat them, and we did.” In fact, Conn had a very convincing win before going on to play Trinity in the next match. The game against Albertus Magnus helped Conn work their positioning and their plays.

Already having lost a close match to rival Trinity earlier in this season, the Camels entered their second match that day with great confidence. Winning their first game of the match, Conn soundly battled then defeated the Trinity team to capture its second victory of the day.

Coach Cochran spoke briefly of the future of the team in the coming years. He expressed his appreciation for the fact that the up-and-comers on this team have really helped influence the incoming freshmen. “There is a lot of raw talent in terms of new players and I firmly say that in the future it can’t become anything else but better.”

Camels Defeats Trinity

By Tim Armstrong and John Bernstein
The College Voice

The Connecticut College Field Hockey team has had an action packed week with four games scheduled on the calendar. The Camels currently hold a record of 5-4-1.

The Camels defeated the Bantams from Trinity last Saturday on Harkness Green by a score of 4-1. This was the Camels first ever victory over the Bantams. Although Trinity’s defense was strong, the Camels managed to score four goals. Carter Wood, ’93, scored two goals and had an assist. Abby Tyson, ’92, scored as did Jenny Gar-

Field Hockey Action

The field hockey team next had a game scheduled against Western Connecticut State on Tuesday but due to heavy rain the game was canceled. Officials are trying to reschedule the game but no date has been set as of yet.

The Camels then traveled to Boston where they were shut out by Tufts 3-0. The weather was terrible as it was cold and it rained for the game’s duration but it had little to do with the outcome. Conn did not lose because of bad play but rather due to outstanding play by the Jumbos. “Tufts has a good, strong team. We played well but were dragged down by the conditions,” said Tyson.

Jennifer Schumacher, ’91, describes this year’s squad as “a very unified team, both on and off the field, which has helped us.” Tyson agrees and also adds, “this team is a very young team that is improving with every game. The freshmen have been outstanding; they are very experienced and don’t play like freshmen.” They have indeed had an impact on the program in which three freshmen made it to the varsity team and they all agree that it is much different from high school.

Wood, ’93, whose high school team, Kentucky Country Day School won the state championship last year, describes the collegiate game as “having a lot more ball control and passing than in high school.” Sarah Ball, ’93, who attended Pomfret, describes the game as “much more intense.” Suzanne Walker, ’93, agrees, describing the game she played at Miss Porter’s School and the game she plays at Conn as “two completely different worlds. The college game is much faster.” She added that she’s not used to being a winner team.

Nikki Hennessy, ’93, out of North Branford High School describes the game as “being different all around.”

Congratulations to Rand Pecknold, ’90, who answered all of last week’s questions correctly. Special thanks to Fran Shields for contributions to this week’s column. Send correct answers to box 3370 by Friday.

This week’s questions:

1. How many times did Johnny Unitas lead the NFL in passing yards?
2. There are six team names that are used by more than one professional team. Name them. (Example: San Francisco Giants and New York Giants)
3. Who is the third all-time leading scorer in NHL history?
4. Who caught the “immortal reception”?
5. Who won college basketball’s player of the year in 1985?

Last week’s answers:

1. Wayne Gretzky, Phil Esposito, Jari Kurri, Bernie Nichols, and Mario Lemieux
2. Marcus Allen
3. Patrick Roy
4. Bobby Carpenter
5. Sometime last year

Conn Sails Well at the Naval Academy

by Andy Vietor
The College Voice

This past weekend the Conn Sailing team found its way to the Naval Academy for its annual Fall Intersectional Regatta. It is always difficult sailing at Navy because of the light air and the incredible amount of power boat chop on the Chesapeake Bay. The Conn sailors in these tough conditions pulled off an excellent finish of eighth out of twenty teams from the East Coast and Midwest. Sailing to an unimpressive sixth place in A Division were Peter Quinn, '90, and Lissette Suarez, '91. Finishing in an amazing tie for fourth in B Division were Karl Zeigler, '92, and Atlantic Page, '93. Sailing lasers in Can D Division were Keith Kramer, '90, and Justin Palm, '92. They finished twelfth and tenth respectively rounding out a very good performance by the Conn sailors at this large and competitive event.

Also this past weekend, the Sloop team sailed a hard fought regatta for the right to represent New England at the sloop nationals in Charleston, N.C. The sloop team of Tony Rey, '90, Charlie Pendleton, '90, and Devon Coughlin, '90, finished fourth at this very competitive regatta. The team's former were never more than a few points apart, and with only the top two teams able to go on to the next round everybody was sailing very well. The Conn sailors got some unlucky breaks, but held in there and were only a few points behind at the end of the first day of competition. The second day brought on tougher conditions and it ended up with there being more drag racing than sailing. The sloop team put in a tremendous effort and unfortunately things did not work out.

The women sailed an intersectional regatta at Yale this past weekend in 420's. They finished second. Carolyn Ulander, '92, and Louise Van Order, '90, sailed B Division and finished low point for their division and the regatta. An amazing effort was also turned in by Jen Coolidge, '91, and Elizabeth Edge, '90, sailing in A Division. Sailing a southern series regatta at the Coast Guard Academy this past weekend were Andy Vietor, '91, and Layra Rice, '92, in A Division, and Ben Marden, '93, and Nara Kapost, '93, in B Division. In the morning it was light with a lot of current which made the sailing difficult. The wind picked up in the afternoon and the Conn team finished second four points behind Brown who won the regatta. Marden had a string of firsts, but late in the day began to sail no-rig as fast as he had been. Victor finally got going and the Conn sailors almost held on for the victory. Better luck next week as the southern series draws to an end.

The Conn sailing team also sailed the Sharpie Trophy at Brown. It was a team racing event and the team of Victor, Laura Ric, '92, Dave Friedman, '92, Leslie Goodwin, '90, Ben Marden, '91, and Kapost, finished an unimpressive sixth out of eight schools. The Conn team had a problem with starts and were never really in the three races it sailed. The Camels did get lucky against Coast Guard when the Academy's first place boat's mainsail fell down, but other than that the team put in a lack lustre performance.

Intramural Update

In flag football action this week Steve Petit, '91, threw for L.W.O.T.D's second touchdown of the season for the match-up between David and the Big Dawgs. The teams are both unbeaten and tied for Ames Division lead at 2-0. David's team speed versus the Big Dawgs imposing size makes this a literal David and Goliath contest.

In six-on-six soccer action, Why? beat Soul Train 2-0 in up their record to 2-0 remaining unscorced. Mike Elster, '90, put away a pass from Greg Dyer, '90, in the first half, while Rafael Vueraka, '90, scored an unassisted goal to round out the scoring for Why? Two of the leagues strongest teams battled on Sunday, the Contras and the X-Conns, resulting with a 2-1 Contras victory. The teams traded goals in the first half with Dave Jones, '91, scoring an unassisted goal for the X-Conns, while Ricky Prahl's, '90, fourth goal of the season on an assist from Marc-Doo-Kingue, '91, tied the game at 1-1. Fausto Huell, '91, broke the tie with the game winner on a feed from Enrique Baracado, '90, late in the second half. The Contras stay undefeated at 3-0-0 while The Team drops to 2-1-0. In the Tolliver Division, The New Kids on the Block (Hamiltion) knocked off Windham's well established The Team 3-2, after being down 2-0 in the second half. Alex Zouzas, '92, two second half tallies from the foot of Henry Rogan, '93, had evened the scores at two apiece when Craig Johnson's, '93, unassisted blast ended the stalemate. The "New Kids" are now 3-0-0 while The Team drops to 2-1-0.

Men's Soccer:
Camels Crush Rhode Island College

by Day Post
Associate Graphic Editor

This week, the Men's Soccer Team improved its record to 5-4-1 by destroying Rhode Island College 6-2. The Camels were never really threatened by their 3-7-2 opponents, who came out and played as if they had never performed in the rain before. From the start of the game, played in cold, light drizzle, the Camels had the upper hand. Four and a half minutes into the game (Xidi Zangui, '93, brought the ball forward on a solo run. After beating a lone defender eighteen yards out, Zangui faced the keeper in a one-on-one situation. With cool precision, Zangui struck the ball into the six yard box. Smith headed the ball into the back of the net to put the Camels up 1-0. One and a half minutes later Tim Cheney, '93, scored an unassisted goal to put the Camels up 1-0. The clincher came 23 minutes into the half, when Tri-Captain Joe Carbe, '90, scored the third goal, extending the Camels lead. His goal came off a free-kick from 40 yards out, at the top right hand corner of the box. The ball floated, aided somewhat by the wind, and, fooling everybody, over the keeper into the top left hand corner of the goal. The Camels led a comfortable 3-1 at halftime. The only Rhode Island College goal came when Peter Stanev scored after 28 minutes to bring his team within two goals.

Women's Soccer:
Conn Ranked Third in New England

by Dobby Gibson
Associate Sports Editor

The Women's Soccer Team improved its record this past week with two wins over Clark and Bowdoin, and a tie with Wesleyan. Conn's continued success moved them from eight up to third in the New England Women's Soccer Ratings of October 19 behind Plymouth State and Eastern Connecticut State. The new rankings are questionable when taking into consideration that Conn defeated second ranked Eastern Connecticut State already this year. Individually, Conn's Katy Bing, '90, is ranked first in New England offensively with a 2.2 points-per-match average.

Conn began the week with a 5-0 rout against Clark to up their record to 5-1-2. This game was categorized as "surprisingly easy" by Coach Ken Kline who considers Clark "a good team." The match began with a quick goal by Caroline Poole, '91, just 43 seconds into the match. From then on, Conn peppered Clark goalstretcher Marie Stainer with eighteen shots while holding Clark to only four. Kristin Sapko, '92, and Ann Cathey, '90, scored goals seven minutes apart to build a 3-0 Conn lead. Bing, added her seventh goal of the year followed by Melissa Parker's, '92, first goal of the year. The Camels then moved on to face Bowdoin at home. This match looked tough as Bowdoin was ranked second in New England and Conn was only ranked eighth. However, the Camels rose to the occasion defeating Bowdoin 2-0. The match was scoreless until midway through the first half, at 13:20, when Maria Mitchell, '91, crossed the ball in front of Bowdoin's net. Bing, knocked it in for her team leading eight goal of the year. The final nail was pounded into Bowdoin's coffin at 73:06 of the match when Dianne Cianeros, '92, netted her first goal on the year. The final game of the week for Conn was filled with perhaps the most adversity the team has had to face yet this season. The Camels were scheduled to play Wesleyan on Tuesday, October 18th. Horrid weather had plagued the Middle-town area that day and the Wesleyan field was mostly standing water. Wesleyan insisted on playing despite the conditions and what resulted was an ugly match. Conn had to abandon passing and resorted to just kicking the ball downfield as the puddled playing surface made controlled play virtually impossible.

That was a travesty" noted Ken Kline somberly. "The weather was outrageous. I don't mind playing in the rain, but their field is a flat field on a clay sub-surface, and the water doesn't drain. The water just sat. Sixty percent of their field was covered with about an inch of water. We couldn't play soccer. The ball got into a puddle and you couldn't get it out. You couldn't dribble it out. You couldn't pass it out."

The Camels play Williams at home on the 27th. Their current record now is 6-1-3.

Athlete of the Week

This week's award goes to the WOMEN'S SOCCER TEAM. The Camels are now ranked third in New England Division III due to victories over Eastern Connecticut State University and Clark. Conn is currently 6-1-3. WHS
