An anti-homosexual poster was circulated in south campus yesterday that criticized the Society Organized Against Racism and the college's portrayal of homosexuality in society.

Three flyers, authored by freshman Paul Polakowski, were posted in JA dormitory. "Fight the Mass Culture at Conn," they said, instead of converting the entire campus into a bunch of aberrant homosexuals. Let's stand up for traditional values. Boycott the Unify House Gender Bender and send a message to the prevalent radical left that we are not controlled by a few. The miends of society, rather, we are controlled by a rational, traditional majority. Let's have the right to be revered in society. Extinguishing the virtues of not being homosexual. Fight back!

BY JENNIFER LEVAN
Editor in Chief

Recent firing of multicultural admissions recruiter may affect class of 1998 admissions

MSSC and Unity groups express concern

BY NATALIE HILLY
Vice President, SATAN Club

With only two weeks left in the prime recruiting period and no multicultural recruiter in the admissions office, the number of incoming minority students next year is a major concern.

In September of this year Shanda Calhoun, the assistant director of admissions in multicultural recruiting, was relieved of her duties. The Minority Students Steering Committee and Unity groups had no knowledge of this action. Last week La Undad wrote a CONNThought piece to the Voice expressing its concern about the lack of communication by Admissions on this important issue.

The MSSC and the unity groups have all worked closely with the Admissions office in the recruitment of students of color.

"We have two major concerns," said Priya Mathur, chair of the MSSC. "One is that we weren't informed of this decision immediately, and consequently were unable to help search for a replacement. Two, a proper search for a replacement has not been conducted."

According to Claire Matthews, vice president of planning and dean of Admissions, it is too late in the year to find a replacement. "Two, a proper search for a replacement has not been conducted."

"There is a lot of activism on their [homosexuals'] part, through the First Amendment, and I am just exercising my rights. In this case, I'm just attempting to broaden everyone's mind," said Polakowski.

"If they [SOAR] can advocate homosexuality, I should be entitled to say that I feel that homosexuals are okay, but just cannot support the act of homosexuality because of his background and religious upbringing. The act of homosexuality--it's part of society, but according to my upbringing, it's not a normal act in our society," said Polakowski.

Polakowski said he was attempting to educate the rest of the community about his point of view on homosexuality, and call out to others who feel the same way. "There is a lot of activism on their [homosexuals'] part, through the First Amendment, and I am just exercising my rights. In this case, I'm just attempting to broaden everyone's mind," said Polakowski.

"If they [SOAR] can advocate homosexuality, I should be entitled to say that I feel that homosexuals are okay, but just cannot support the act of homosexuality because of his background and religious upbringing. The act of homosexuality--it's part of society, but according to my upbringing, it's not a normal act in our society," said Polakowski.

"If they [SOAR] can advocate homosexuality, I should be entitled to say that I feel that homosexuals are okay, but just cannot support the act of homosexuality because of his background and religious upbringing. The act of homosexuality--it's part of society, but according to my upbringing, it's not a normal act in our society," said Polakowski.

"If they [SOAR] can advocate homosexuality, I should be entitled to say that I feel that homosexuals are okay, but just cannot support the act of homosexuality because of his background and religious upbringing. The act of homosexuality--it's part of society, but according to my upbringing, it's not a normal act in our society," said Polakowski.
Thought a stand for free speech

A letter printed in the Voice last week from a freshman upset about the results of her class elections generated a record-setting amount of response.

The situation closely resembled the fiery scenario that occurred in the fall of 1992, when a freshman referred to students at the college as "dumb and thinking genitalia," and added, "we’ve turned our dorms into common brothels.

"The controversy was kicked off with letters criticizing the author for the inane remarks and generalizations made about the student body.

This week, many students are upset about the content of Sandra Qualls' CONN column in which she asks if the fact that the cover story was feminism in the news on her era.

Though the letter was poorly written and contained personal attacks and insults, the author had every right to express his opinion. To challenge her right to express her opinion, I believe we campus we should have offered her his voice, is bordering on fanaticism.

Though the issue of diversity at Conn is by all means a central one, the author’s letter is serious in that it is seen as a direct and instead invoking charges of "reverse discrimination" and "ignorance.

A series disturbing events in this week was the posting of flyers in JA whistle in the South when SCAR and the cartoonist and policies toward homosexuals. The latter claimed, that the mass movement at Conn was retaliating "for converting the entire campus into a bunch of overt homosexuals.

Though initially hiding behind the veil of anonymity, now the author has come out and claimed credit for the letter and can now be engaged in dialogue with people who support or disagree with his opinions.

The question remains as to the author’s responsibility and accountability under the harassment policies as written in The Connecticut College C-Book. This handbook states, "Broadly defined, sexual discrimination includes discrimination or discriminatory hostility against, or against a group, because of sexual identity or sexual orientation." A broad reading of the policies states that the author is guilty of discrimination against the group of anyone who is engaging in offensive or unethical events. I think that those in the college must do the same. As a federal judge wrote during the University of Michigan vs. Board of Regents replacement of the Constitution, the First Amendment protects the press from seeing it as a special safeguard in the university setting where the free and unfettered press is limited.

From expressive ideas are to non-expressive ideas. Lee Rowe, house master of Park and a senior member of the Judiciary Board and the Dean’s Grievance Committee, is trying to push that first step. The concept suggests that all college dormitories have community members who can write whatever they want as long as they can sign their name to it. A public forum for controversial Ideas is the perfect springboard for changing dialogue and changing campuses. The time is now and the place is Croy Student Government and the student body should out this idea slip by.

History has shown that nothing positive comes out of silencing people on opinions. Connecticut College should learn from this lesson. If the administration tries to stop it, I hope the students and the community can come out to take control. As James Chapman said in his last lecture, legislation such as codes does not create an environment that is devoid of hazardous and non-hazardous Ideas. Only by creating a free atmosphere of open Ideas, where open discussion is encouraged and enhanced, can we empower students to throw off the shackles of years of tired prejudice and intolerance.

The COLLEGE VOICE

Jon Finnimore
Editor in Chief (Newspaper)
Jennifer LeVan
Editor in Chief (Magazine)
Christopher Scott
Anchor Publisher
Ethan Brown
Editor in Chief (GCC Review)
Alyc Knight
Managing Editor

EDITORIAL BOARD

April O’Boyle
Carli Schacht
Matt Burcham
Jonathan Stanczyk
Ben Rubin
Yuki Fujisaki
Michelle Bressy
Noah Goldner
Yang Kim

PRODUCTION

Sean Fine
Emily Cobb
Loren Maltza
Alexander Cole
Palge Megfiet
Evan, who has been great to Tura Brand for her extensive graphics, innovation, and inspiration for our illustrious staff.

Tanya Sandberg-Dimito

The College Voice is a non-profit student operated newspaper. Editorial offices are located in the Crossroads building in Room 150. The Voice does not necessarily reflect the views of any one person. Please leave a comment about the story in the comments section at the bottom of the article.

For the last twenty-one years, every year, on the first Monday of November (the day before election day) I’ve spent the day celebrating a National Holiday day that I’ve always believed in. For the years that I’ve been in school I’ve worn black to commemorate the day. Although, it wasn’t too long ago that I spent the day at home with my family instead of at school. As a child, I remember waking up on this day and my mother or father would tell us (my two brothers, sister and I) that we won’t go to school that day because we were spending the day together. Often we’d spend the day at the Schomburg Center for the Vertical and the Schomburg Museum of African Art.

On this day, we celebrate the day that African Americans have on this country. Today we commemorate the struggle for Civil Rights that took place in the ’60’s with Black Solidarity Day. The first Monday in November, and the day before election day.

We will commemorate the struggle for Civil Rights that took place in the ’60’s with Black Solidarity Day. The day, Black Solidarity Day is a day in recognition of Civil Rights Issues. It’s a day that shows the strength and solidarity of Black people. As a rule, we don’t use public transportation, we car pool if we need to get to work or school, although we often try not to go to school or work if necessary. And we Black, from Black ran and worked hard and remind the country of the economic impact that we have upon this nation.

It’s a commemoration of public transportation boycotts that went on primarily in the south during the 60’s when Blacks car pool to work. The boycotts were a result of the Jim Crow laws that were in effect at the time which among other things meant that if a Black person were sitting at the front of a bus and a White person asked them to move to the back of the bus then they would move. But anyway, we all had fun cel-
Reaction to "Well, hand over your glasses; because mine sure ain't working;"

Freshman piece sparks multicultural debate

Hang in there, Sandra, it's been a four-year journey of frustration

Letter to the Voice:
As two Latinas seniors, we have to agree with the letter, "Well, hand over your glasses; because mine sure ain't working," which appeared in the October 26 issue. For the past three years, we have witnessed the uninformed opinions that were expressed by one of our peers who is beginning her fourth year of journe of frustration. This frustration stems from the lack of diversity—lack of students of color as well as diversity within white students. LOOK AROUND! What do you see? What do you hear? What's the hype on white students? Same old, same old. The answers to these questions are NOT diverse! Conn is not a diverse place in any sense of the word. Are you diverse? We are so surprised that we here people say Conn is so much more diverse than this and that place since we all look alike. We have been confused with more women of color than we know (and we know many people). We realize that diversity includes more than just students of color and white students, however our focus is on our experience as two Latinas on this campus.

Diversity was thrown in our faces. We caught the fever because we had no idea how difficult it could be to be diverse or to diversify a school of 1000 people. We have spent too many hours in meetings organizing social, political and cultural events to increase the awareness of the students and the others. And we want to see one thing straight and that is we students of color/jew provide the very best for Conn. We are not going to just hand over our glasses because you see a few colored faces that this school is diverse. Look amongst your friends—do they all look alike? Do they have similar backgrounds? For example, when (Evelyn) was attending a meeting, a white student said and I quote, "I don't have any friends of color. It is very easy to go your four years and not know a single person of color." What does that say to you? Is it easy for you? NO! We have been Conn because you have a CHOICE! You have a CHANCE! We do not. If we had a choice, we would still interact with white students. We do not limit ourselves because we learn from each other.

I have wondered what it's like to live in two cultural worlds? We always have to explain our experience as two Latinas on this campus. You felt it necessary to publicly insult them; slating for example that "typical Anglo-Saxons" reiterates the ignorance and your claim that, "there is no diversity" here at Conn. Diversity requires in part the understanding, tolerance, and acceptance of cultures and people that are different from yourself. We all need to work together to gain diversity, you are more than most apparently. You can be slashing your class official's because of their racial makeup sounds awfully close to the J-School definition of hate speech. Let's not become a member of a racial minority in no way gives you the liberty to attack members of the majority on the basis of their race. What was the point of your article? All I can tell for sure was that it was an offensive, slanderous, contradictory, poorly written piece about the fact the you disagree with the number of "Anglo-Saxons" that were elected.

While I will readily admit to total ignorance concerning the quality of the elected Freshman class executive board, I have a hard time believing that they completely unqualified. I admit to having wondered myself what the criteria are for being elected to office here at Conn, and after four years I have decided that the most important quality needed to do a good job is having the desire, time, and energy required. You apparently have had a whole new set of criteria, and whatever it is the current freshman class exec board has been found lacking. I wonder how you, after two short months of knowing these people, came to despise them so much that you felt it necessary to publicly insult them; stating for example that Mr. Novicki is not honest, smart, open, intellectual, intuitive, or reputable.

But wait, I must have misunderstood the first two-thirds of your article for you, "have nothing against any of these people." Sorry Quinn, when she said you were the only person clearly not suitable for the job you took it the wrong way.

Wait, now we go to your criteria necessary for a qualified exec board member: they have to be a racial minority and not your typical Anglo-Saxon. Oh where to begin responding to your blatantly racist remarks? A good place to start would be with your term Anglo-Saxon. While I do not know the complete ethnic backgrounds of the board members I am quite sure that Novicki is not an Anglo-Saxon name. But hey, you probably figure that "they all look the same." Try telling that to the "Anglo-Saxons" in the former country of Yugoslavia. Racism is a two-way street Sandra, I’ve heard many whites called racist and ignorant for grouping Puerto Ricans and Cubans with Mexicans. Which brings us to ignorance and your claim that, "there is no diversity" here at Conn. Diversity requires in part the understanding, tolerance, and acceptance of cultures and people that are different from yourself. We all need to work together to gain diversity, you are more than most apparently. You can be slashingly class official’s because of their racial makeup sounds awfully close to the J-School definition of hate speech. Let’s not become a member of a racial minority in no way gives you the liberty to attack members of the majority on the basis of their race. What was the point of your article? All I can tell for sure was that it was an offensive, slanderous, contradictory, poorly written piece about the fact the you disagree with the number of "Anglo-Saxons" that were elected.

The next time you chose to address the college community, try to at least appear educated. While there are numerous inconsistencies and flaws with your article I will focus on your closing sentence and then disagree. I will raise hell but this is going to change. What is going to change, you raising hell or the number of whites elected? I will give you the benefit of the doubt (something you might try some time) and assume you mean the number of whites elected. How exactly are you going to bring about this revolution of your vocal minority of one? Will you continue to slander whites elected to office? Will you institute a quota system? Or maybe create a gerrymandered electoral system at Conn that promotes minority representation.

I’m sure the Government department and SGA would love to hear ideas. But keep your ignorant, racist cutes out of the paper.

Sincerely,
Joshua Fairbank
Class of 1994

Freshman class president responds to letter in Voice about Executive Board

Letter to the Voice:
After reading the letter, "Well, hand over your glasses; because mine sure ain't working." I was dismayed by the ignorance displayed by the author. The author's wild opinions and baseless comments were both unnecessary and unwarranted.

The author clearly noted her dissatisfaction with the 1997 Executive Board, yet I failed to see her name on any of the ballots. One would think that somebody with such high standards would run for office. Maybe that's why she didn't try. The author can ask herself what she did to help elect the "qualified" people she now requests.

I am looking forward to working with you and I know this year will be a successful one.

Sincerely,
Matt Hoots
Class of 1997
Freshman letter controversy continued:

Reader stresses the need to relieve racial tensions within community

Letter to the Voice,

By now I am sure you have all "felt the presence" of the editorial in last week's voice entitled "Well, hand over your glasses; because mine sure ain't working" written by Sandra Quiles class of 95. I am choosing to respond to her, both as an elected representative myself, and as a member of the college community we all live in, a community I believe was greatly damaged by her remarks. Beyond the simple thoughtlessness involved in this particular "presence," the opinions expressed and printed were obviously made with little to no knowledge of either the persons slandered or the issues raised. Thus, not only do I disagree with Ms. Quiles personal assessments of the few elected representatives of her class, but I strongly question the judgment which would allow her to slander any one of any sort, based on the contents of a three minute speech and the color of their skin.

An article as Ms. Quiles critique several times, I was still unable to determine what, if anything, she wished to accomplish with such an editorial. In it she raised several important and pertinent issues, however she took them nowhere, and if anything she only succeeded in degrading the importance of what are otherwise central issues within our community.

Mr. Quiles identity as a minority does not give her any right to hide malicious remarks behind a veil of racial issues. By choosing such a path, she goes beyond pioneering change, and becomes part of the problem herself.

The issue of our diversity, or lack thereof, remains as one of the greatest challenges facing the future of Connecticut College. Simply put as a campus and as individuals we can no longer afford to ignore the multicultural world in which we live, moreover we must strive to fight any forces made in opposition to this diversity, and thus reach equality. However, Ms. Quiles identity as a minority does not give her any right to hide malicious remarks behind a veil of racial issues. By choosing such a path, she goes beyond pioneering change, and becomes part of the problem herself. If her most important motivation in this endeavor was to address the lack of minority representation on this campus, why didn't she run herself? From her own statements I can only conclude she has made the decision to write off our entire electoral process as a popularity contest, challenging us all for our lack of care in our choice of community leaders. Of course this is her right, however Ms. Quiles makes it clear she wishes to make her presence felt; to instigate change. I can only assume she too would strive to live in a community in which everyone, of all backgrounds, can feel comfortable and productive. To create such a community, everyone, of every race, must work for mutual acceptance. In attempting to clothe useless, harmful and slanderous remarks behind an issue of race, Ms. Quiles only succeeds in building up the very barriers she so vehemently purports to despise.

To conclude, I regret that an article containing so little of substance and made with so little thought could succeed in arouses so much attention. I hope that the college community took Ms. Quiles opinions with the same lack of respect they were made, and so obviously deserve. To defeat the very real problems she has raised, we must all learn to work together for awareness and acceptance. I hope that in the future if Ms. Quiles continues to wish to make her presence felt, she chooses to work in a more productive manner to inspire the changes we need. Her energy is obviously great; hopefully she can mature to the point where it can be focused towards healing, rather than divisive and destructive anger.

Sincerely,
Dana Sheldt
Class of 1996

Voice's discretion in editorial policy questioned

Printing controversial remark in keg review irresponsible move

Letter to the voice:

I am writing in response to the October 25 article titled "The lure of the keg is revealed; a typical night at Connecticut College." This article contained a quote from Sal Sigleski '95 that I found offensive and unnecessary. The manner in which the quote was used left me to the point where it can be focused towards healing, rather than divisive and destructive anger.

Ms. Quiles' identity as a minority does not give her any right to hide malicious remarks behind a veil of racial issues. By choosing such a path, she goes beyond pioneering change, and becomes part of the problem herself.

The lack of quality articles and writing in this paper angry that the typical night at Connecticut College. This article contained a quote from Sal Sigleski '95 that was made with little to no knowledge of either the persons slandered or the issues raised. Thus, not only do I disagree with Ms. Quiles personal assessments of the few elected representatives of her class, but I strongly question the judgment which would allow her to slander any one of any sort, based on the contents of a three minute speech and the color of their skin.

An article as Ms. Quiles critique several times, I was still unable to determine what, if anything, she wished to accomplish with such an editorial. In it she raised several important and pertinent issues, however she took them nowhere, and if anything she only succeeded in degrading the importance of what are otherwise central issues within our community.

Mr. Quiles identity as a minority does not give her any right to hide malicious remarks behind a veil of racial issues. By choosing such a path, she goes beyond pioneering change, and becomes part of the problem herself. If her most important motivation in this endeavor was to address the lack of minority representation on this campus, why didn't she run herself? From her own statements I can only conclude she has made the decision to write off our entire electoral process as a popularity contest, challenging us all for our lack of care in our choice of community leaders. Of course this is her right, however Ms. Quiles makes it clear she wishes to make her presence felt; to instigate change. I can only assume she too would strive to live in a community in which everyone, of all backgrounds, can feel comfortable and productive. To create such a community, everyone, of every race, must work for mutual acceptance. In attempting to clothe useless, harmful and slanderous remarks behind an issue of race, Ms. Quiles only succeeds in building up the very barriers she so vehemently purports to despise.

To conclude, I regret that an article containing so little of substance and made with so little thought could succeed in arousing so much attention. I hope that the college community took Ms. Quiles opinions with the same lack of respect they were made, and so obviously deserve. To defeat the very real problems she has raised, we must all learn to work together for awareness and acceptance. I hope that in the future if Ms. Quiles continues to wish to make her presence felt, she chooses to work in a more productive manner to inspire the changes we need. Her energy is obviously great; hopefully she can mature to the point where it can be focused towards healing, rather than divisive and destructive anger.

Sincerely,
Dana Sheldt
Class of 1996

Voice wrong in printing "Well, hand over your glasses..."

Letter to the Voice:

While I do not believe in editing others' opinions nor censorship, last week's "Well, hand over your glasses; because mine sure ain't working" should not have been printed. The standards of a print-worthy piece should be higher than simply being turned in on disk by the deadline. The College Voice should not be used as a tool for slander, unfounded insults, nor random attacks.

The damage caused by the publication of this unfortunate article is irreparable. It goes beyond the embarrassment of the individual members of the new Executive Board, but any loss of legitimacy the Board experienced as well. Let's also not forget that the author will most likely be haunted by this mistake for the rest of her time here. That's a not small price to pay when we're talking about 4 years. Many of us were hurt by this letter throughout faulted their own (except the author). There must be facts behind news and there must be reasons behind opinions to make either newsworthy. Do not let this disaster

Sincerely,
Deirdre Hennessy
Vice President
Class of 1995

Editor's note:
The College Voice's editorial policy is to print all letters that are received by the established deadline. While we strive to give equal weight for charity and length, we do not edit on the basis of content; that onus falls upon the author. Opinions expressed on the CONNThought/Viewpoint page are not necessarily those of The College Voice Publishing Group.

Sincerely,
Benjamin J. Tyrell
Class of 1995
Alcohol policy: Proposal aiming to reduce drunk driving passes

SAC-sponsored events to last an extra hour

BY BERENDA R. JONES
The College Voice

You may have noticed that the Halloween event last weekend lasted from 11 p.m. to 2 a.m. and from 1 a.m. to 3 a.m. Would you?

In an attempt to reduce the risk of drunk driving and to enhance the Connecticut College social scene, SAC and the Student Government Association have come up with a solution to keep all campus parties open one hour longer.

A proposal to allow SAC-sponsored all-campus parties to continue until 2 a.m., provided they stop serving alcoholic beverages by 1 a.m., was passed by the SGA assembly last Thursday night.

Food and alcoholic beverages are permitted to be served in the last hour of all-campus parties. According to Jennifer Scott, SAC chair, and Matt Hyotte, president of the Class of 1997, and Neil Maniar, one of the proposal's sponsors, one of the main reasons for the proposal was to increase the safety of the student body.

As all parties, both private and SAC-sponsored, officially end at 1 a.m., a potentially large number of students who had been drinking would suddenly be left with little to do on campus. Assembly members discussed the fact that students may then try to leave campus to get food, perhaps driving when drunk.

An SGA member pointed out that having a SAC party shut down at one o'clock, when the liquor ran out, makes it seem drinking alcohol, rather than socializing, is the main focus of parties. Some assembly members suggested that serving non-alcoholic beverages and food would show that the party has another reason to exist.

Claudine Johnson, house senator of Burdick, said that Campus Safety looked into the College Center at Crozier Williams at one o'clock, when the liquor ran out, and found that students were drinking alcohol at the SAC sponsored, officially end events.

"As a student at Connecticut College, I personally believe the liquor could be construed as a violation of the school's policies, such as the harassment policies of Connecticut College. It is my firm belief that these speech codes violate the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and the Constitution of the state of Connecticut," said Johnson.

According to Jennifer Scott, SAC chair of admissions, "If we're a diversity school, why aren't minority students coming here, accepting? Why are those students who are economically disadvantaged going to other schools?" and "minority students here happy?"

"At this point in time, finding a replacement [Assistant Director of Admissions and Multicultural Recruitment] is the highest priority to bring in sufficient numbers of students of color in the class of 1998," said Matthews.

Several colleges including Wesleyan and the University of Connecticut have either eliminated their speech codes or are in the process of reviewing them. According to the United States Supreme Court, public universities are too broad and violate the First Amendment rights of students, faculty and staff.

"Whether Connecticut College is a private institution, it does not obviate the College of its ethical responsibilities to the First Amendment," said Hyotte.

Member of Dean's Grievance believes students' rights under first amendment threatened by speech codes

The College Voice

A compilation of news from other schools...

UNIVERSITY OF NEW ENGLAND: The president of the university was arrested for drunk driving after his car hit a light post and crashed into a bridge. His blood-alcohol level was three times the legal limit and he later prepared a statement saying, "I am sincerely sorry if any of my actions have been detrimental to the institution."

ALCORN STATE UNIVERSITY: A member of a fraternity which the school believes that the Minuteman mascot represents a white symbol of violence and he wants it abolished. Members of the school's community became divided on the issue and the chancellor said that he did not want to discuss the issue at the moment. The student said that he would go on a hunger strike until formal talks about the situation begin.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY: The annual Big Game bonfire which is held before the football game against the University of California at Berkeley had to be canceled because rare salamanders have been spotted around the fire's site. The rare California tiger salamander was thought to be extinct, but they were apparently hiding in the deep cracks of the lake bed during an extended dry period.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN: A student at the school believes that the Minuteman mascot represents a white symbol of violence and he wants it abolished. Members of the school's community became divided on the issue and the chancellor said that he did not want to discuss the issue at the moment. The student said that he would go on a hunger strike until formal talks about the situation begin.

Members of the student run radio station was shut down by Missouri's Residence Hall Association, mostly because of financial mismanagement. All of the staff members were fired and the association is now running it. During a visit to the station, the president of the association was also arrested on the head by a concrete block which fell from a booby trap which he accidentally opened.

On the issue of alcohol at all parties, Neil Maniar, Class of '94, president, commented, "I know the senior class is really working on alternatives to alcohol at parties."

The proposal was passed 30-0-0 in a roll call vote...
Weiselspeaks of the importance of friendship and a connection to history

BY APRIL ODES
News Editor

Inciting individuals to reflect and take another look at the history of the holocaust and fascism, Elie Weisel, recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize, writer, Holocaust-survivor, and world-famous Jewish activist addressed the congregation of the Beth-El Synagogue in New London during Shabbat services last Friday night.

Weisel’s visit was part of the Synagogue’s celebration of its reopening after a year-long renovation process. Rabbi Carl Azar spoke of Weisel’s presence at the service was a result of his “personal and close friendship between Weisel and Sigmond Strochlitz, a local member of the congregation.”

Strochlitz introduced his friend, describing him as “not only a man who has survived, but also a man who has conquered.”

Weisel and his family were deported from Romania to Auschwitz, where his mother and younger sister died. He and his father were later taken to Buchenwald.

According to Strochlitz, through his novels and constant advocacy of human rights amidst acts of violence and oppression, Weisel has taught the world that,”the opposite of love is not hate, but indifference.”

Weisel began his address by speaking of the importance of friendship, and said, "A friend makes you aware of your own loneliness, and helps you to escape it so that you can help him.”

Weisel compared the friendship between individuals to the friendship that exists between an individual and the congregation of a synagogue. Said Weisel, “The synagogue is a place where one is not alone, even when one is alone with God. For God alone is alone.”

Weisel commented on the way Synagogue Beth-El’s 60 years of existence connects the local community to the history of the world, and the history of Judaism.

Weisel said, “100 years! 60 years! In 1933, a man in Europe stood ready to change the course of history, to alter tragically the destiny of the Jewish people. And you in this congregation witnessed that. In 1938... Kristallnacht happened. I wonder, whatever did your rabbi say to you on that Shabbat?”

“You community has witnessed, lived, and remembered... you have absorbed, memories that have filled the life, the existence, and the work of beings that existed 10, 20, even 100 generations ago,” said Weisel.

Weisel continued speaking about the history of the past 3,000 years, and the events of the past century. "Look, I can't be not hide from you my anguish. History has moved fast, perhaps too fast. As we approach the end of the decade, and also the end of the century, and of the millennium,... there is a kind of a time quake... hidden memories, hidden passions arise.”

Weisel spoke of the rise of fascism and communism as sorts of alternate religions. “These are two quasi-religious ideologies. What they have done to humankind, what they have done to history, will last forever.” said Weisel.

Weisel focused on the amount of resources that the United States spent on combating communism. "To this day, I cannot understand how the intelligence agencies of the world could not have known that communism was about to fall. We spent hundreds of millions of dollars to eradicate communism, and we didn't even know that it was not there. For what?” said Weisel.

Weisel concluded by saying that nations must focus their resources on positive change. “I surely would take at least 10 percent of the budget of the CIA and use it on education, to build hospitals, and youth centers," said Weisel.

Weisel will be on campus November 10 through November 11 to discuss the college’s staging of Dawn.

SAC charges admission to Halloween event to cover costs, profits to be directed to Floralia

BY APRIL ODES
News Editor

A long standing policy of Student Activities Council was dropped this week when admission was charged at a SAC-sponsored all-campus event.

Jennifer Scott, SAC chair, said that charging admission to the Halloween event was primarily intended to enable SAC to pay for the event. Charging admission was never done in the past according to Scott. “Our intention was to cover, [the cost of], this event. If we made anything in profit it was going to go into the Floralia account,” said Scott.

Scott continued, saying, “We covered the cost of the event, but didn’t make any more. It was a neutral event.”

Scott said that raising money for Floralia was only secondary motivation in charging admission. While SAC has no specific fundraising amount in mind for Floralia, said Scott, it does plan to direct some of its profits from all-campus events to the Floralia fund.

“Throughout the year we will be doing various fundraisers for Floralia. Anything we can for Floralia helps the day,” said Scott.

“We made the decision about two weeks ago that charging a dollar was nothing unusual for Connecticut College campus, and would be better than having nothing at all. Since we had reserved the date, and nothing else was planned for that night, we felt that we really had a responsibility to make sure that nothing else happened,” said Scott.

According to Scott, the finance committee did not allocate full funding for the Halloween party that SAC planned for last spring. Originally, said Scott, SAC planned to have a haunted house and a magician at a Halloween event. However, the finance committee cut the funding for the haunted house. As a result, SAC decided to change its plans for a Halloween event.

Said Scott, “Most of the funding for a Halloween event was cut by the Finance Committee, which left us with a decision that we could have a party and charge for it to try to make up for the cost, or not do anything.”

“It’s very hard to say what we were allocated, because the initial allocation doesn’t equate with the final working budget. When we make decisions about events, we take into account the big things come first. When it comes to smaller things, we have to find other ways to fund them,” said Scott.

SAC will use the Finance Committee allocation to hold an event with a magician at another time this year.

“We believe that the students will have a good time, and that it will be a safe event,” said Scott.
Fay cited dining services finances as an obstacle in meeting student requests in contact session last week

BY BEN RUBIN
The College Voice

In an attempt to give students a chance to voice their opinions and make suggestions as to how the dining services on campus can be made even better, Matt Fay, director of dining services, held a contact session last week.

The eight students who attended presented their ideas to Fay, who then explained the realistic possibilities of specific changes, and the financial aspects of the situation. Based on Fay's responses, it seems that financial concerns are the primary barrier in putting changes into effect.

Fay explained that dining services is limited by the same financial constraints which affect the rest of the college. One suggestion which students presented was to have a serve-yourself style Belgian waffle maker available at each meal in Harris since one of the students' concerns seemed to be a lack of options besides salad and cereal if one did not find the course palatable.

Fay said that he would definitely do his best to have the waffle maker available, although he was concerned about the problems and barriers with having another unattended hot appliance.

Another idea which arose was to have a frozen yogurt machine in Harris. Fay said that the other half of the milkshake machine could not provide a low enough temperature, and that a new machine would simply be too expensive. The one from the snack shop cost $5,000 and he added that it could not be moved to Harris because it accommodates the faculty and staff in its present location.

Fay urged students "to fight the battle" when visiting LaQuinta during the course of the year. He said that he wants students to be specific on their suggestions, not that they would have no action can be taken. There are "napkin in board meetings" in each dining hall on which students are able to voice their opinions.

Fay also stated that he would be more than happy to talk to anyone in person about any problems that they may have about the dining services.

Other suggestions made at the contact session were to serve chicken tenders and veggie burgers at dinner and to serve fresh fries with the burgers at Freeman. Fay said that he would try his best to do this, but the main problem of this change is that the amount of fried foods would be unlimited both for health reasons and because there are not enough deep fryers to handle this volume.

Another student inquired about unknown ingredients in the burgers, since some people are allergic to soy. Fay said that the burgers were at least 52 percent beef in order to keep the fat content down. Fay also said that he will consider having a sign by the burgers to indicate the presence of soy.

However, Fay said that it would require two extra employees to have all of the ingredients made available for each individual dish. He did say that if a student wished to do so, he or she would be permitted to tour any of the kitchens, refrigerators, or freezers.

Someone also remarked that meals should be able to be transferred to the snack shop if they are not eaten in the dining halls. Once again, said Fay, the problem is that it would cost the school too much money. According to Fay, the snack shop and the bur- don make money as it is, and the average purchase per customer at the snack shop is only slightly over $2.

Fay said that there are also many other financial problems which the dining services department faces.

The service actually takes in more revenue than it spends, but this profit is invested into other areas of the school rather than back into dining services.

The profit dining services makes is partly because of the fact that the average student only eats thirteen meals a week. "Hardly anyone is paying for what they are eating," Fay said. He also said that he would make every effort to act on student suggestions, but he added that students must understand that they can not be choosy about their meals than they are at home. Referring to people who make unreasonable requests, Fay said that "dining services should not be held responsible for the narrowness of people's appetites."

Fay said that he will consider having a soy, Fay said that the burgers were at least 52 percent beef in order to keep the fat content down. Fay also said that he will consider having a sign by the burgers to indicate the presence of soy.

In order to enhance its role in preparing students for graduate and professional schools, Connecticut College currently is adapting the Strategic Plan to strengthen academic resources and intellectual opportunities.

As of 1990, Connecticut College was ranked among its peer schools as having the highest number of students seeking their doctorate degrees.

Evaluation of the number of seniors taking GRE exams 6 months before graduation shows an average of 20 students scoring in the 600 range in their verbal, quantitative, and analytical scores. According to the booklet of Strategic Planning Indicators, this data does not reflect the impact of Strategy A, to strengthen the college's resources and intellectual opportunities, yet over a period of time, the college expects to see the numbers demonstrate the effectiveness of the plan.

Robert Hampton, dean of the college, foresees this effectiveness as a result of the dual responsibilities between students with faculty and administration. He attributes the college's small size and 11 to 1 student to faculty ratio as key factors to building bridges to the future. Hampton said that Connecticut College is making consistent strides to "recruit, cultivate, and develop" strong students each year to take advantage of every possible opportunity presented to them.

"We must remind ourselves constantly to look beyond the horizons in encouraging students," he said.

In response to Connecticut College's above-average place in the 1990 study of doctoral degrees, Hampton does not see the college's success in competition as a key element. He said that the purpose of the plan is not to您的 across the charts but to continue building ongoing relationships with students.

Hampton also said that the strategy does not depend on a concrete plan but fulfilling its goal, in its attempts to cultivate students' potential, and making them aware of their options.

Jack Tinker, head of the Office of Career Services, agrees with Hampton's insistence of "dual responsibility."

"In pursing a professional degree," said Tinker, "we help students begin the process with a timeline, take tests, obtain letters of recommendation, and attend workshops. We essentially make them aware of the different pieces that comprise the graduate school process."

Throughout the year, the office of Career Services teaches the dual role of making these connections, as well as guiding students through each step of graduate school admission.

Through a follow-up survey, Tinker said that about one quarter of Connecticut College students go on to pursue graduate and professional degrees.

He attributes the success of the program to the strong dialogue in faculty and administrative advising.

Famous Economists Have Said

"In the long run, we're all dead!"
John Maynard Keynes, British Economist

"Eat a Recovery Room pizza in the short run!"
Don Peppard, Penn College Economist

"They tell me there's a pie up in the sky, waiting for me when I die!"
Jimmy Cliff, Famous Reggae Economist

"I want my pie at the Recovery Room!"
Rolf Jensen, another Penn College Economist

The Recovery Room

Inexpensive Incomparable Indecently Good

445 Ocean Avenue New London Ct

CALL FOR TAKE OUT, TOO: 443-2619

BY YUKI TSUBOTA
Associate News Editor

In order to enhance its role in preparing students for graduate and professional schools, Connecticut College currently is adapting the Strategic Plan to strengthen academic resources and intellectual opportunities.

As of 1990, Connecticut College was ranked among its peer schools as having the highest number of students seeking their doctorate degrees.

Evaluation of the number of seniors taking GRE exams 6 months before graduation shows an average of 20 students scoring in the 600 range in their verbal, quantitative, and analytical scores. According to the booklet of Strategic Planning Indicators, this data does not reflect the impact of Strategy A, to strengthen the college's resources and intellectual opportunities, yet over a period of time, the college expects to see the numbers demonstrate the effectiveness of the plan.

Robert Hampton, dean of the college, foresees this effectiveness as a result of the dual responsibilities between students with faculty and administration. He attributes the college's small size and 11 to 1 student to faculty ratio as key factors to building bridges to the future. Hampton said that Connecticut College is making consistent strides to "recruit, cultivate, and develop" strong students each year to take advantage of every possible opportunity presented to them.

"We must remind ourselves constantly to look beyond the horizons in encouraging students," he said.

In response to Connecticut College's above-average place in the 1990 study of doctoral degrees, Hampton does not see the college's success in competition as a key element. He said that the purpose of the plan is not to your across the charts but to continue building ongoing relationships with students.

Hampton also said that the strategy does not depend on a concrete plan but fulfilling its goal, in its attempts to cultivate students' potential, and making them aware of their options.

Jack Tinker, head of the Office of Career Services, agrees with Hampton's insistence of "dual responsibility."

"In pursing a professional degree," said Tinker, "we help students begin the process with a timeline, take tests, obtain letters of recommendation, and attend workshops. We essentially make them aware of the different pieces that comprise the graduate school process."

Throughout the year, the office of Career Services teaches the dual role of making these connections, as well as guiding students through each step of graduate school admission.

Through a follow-up survey, Tinker said that about one quarter of Connecticut College students go on to pursue graduate and professional degrees.

He attributes the success of the program to the strong dialogue in faculty and administrative advising.

Famous Economists Have Said

"In the long run, we're all dead!"
John Maynard Keynes, British Economist

"Eat a Recovery Room pizza in the short run!"
Don Peppard, Penn College Economist

"They tell me there's a pie up in the sky, waiting for me when I die!"
Jimmy Cliff, Famous Reggae Economist

"I want my pie at the Recovery Room!"
Rolf Jensen, another Penn College Economist

The Recovery Room

Inexpensive Incomparable Indecently Good

445 Ocean Avenue New London Ct

CALL FOR TAKE OUT, TOO: 443-2619
Dean's term public speaking instructor
Baltin speaks about acting experiences

BY JAMES SANTANGELO
Features Editor

Ken Baltin, actor, public speaking instructor, and at times “waiter, taxi driver, bus driver and dishwasher,” will be one of the educators at the public speaking seminar during the Dean’s Term in January. Baltin described his occupation at an event sponsored by the Dean’s Term Coordinating Committee, as “professor of public speaking for the Dean’s Term,” and his assignment was to “convince the audience to apply.”

Baltin began his lecture by telling the audience about his experiences as an actor. “When I go to parties,” he began, “people ask me what I do. I tell them I’m an actor. They look at me and say, ‘And what do you do for a living?’ What nobody understands is that I am so much a part of what I do. I am an actor.”

Baltin believes that growing up Jewish in an all Catholic community at an early age is what made him “socially retarded until [he] was sixteen.” Of course it was at sixteen that he got his first role in a school play. Since it was his first role in a play, he was quite surprised to discover that he was “missing a part that made [him] outgoing.”

Baltin considered professional acting until Ruth White, a veteran of Hollywood told him, “Don’t be an actor. Acting is a woman’s profession.” So thoroughly dissuaded, Baltin applied to Rutgers University, intending to major in Journalism.

While at Rutgers, he was approached to be in a play called, Six Characters in Search of an Author. It is in this play that he “blames” for making him an actor.

“The director of this play ‘decided to beat the characters into us. He was bent on showing us just how shallow I loved it. I was a masochist. I wanted to be got at. I must have had a catharsis at every rehearsal. And when it came time for the show, the audience got wet with all the sweat and saliva we gave off.”

But Baltin reassured the audience that a strong property for violence and mass hysteria was not what turned him on to acting. “I discovered I could be more than what my parents told me I was. A good son. I could be outrageous, funny, serious, a lot of other stuff,” said Baltin. So he became an actor.

For some time after leaving college and teaching at Franklinc Pierce College, Baltin was asked why he felt so comfortable speaking to people. At this point he realized “it is important, in the business world, to talk to a large group of people. And so I asked myself, why do I find standing up before a group exhilarating? The answer is simple: I can be more myself on-stage than off-stage.”

Baltin asked the audience how many of them had experience acting, to which several people replied affirmatively. Referring to what makes acting so appealing, Penny Ansay said “being the center of attention.”

“Your, in life, are pretty much shaped by your relationships,” Baltin said, “You play a different role in each relationship. But you must not know you are playing a role. In acting, you must rediscover these traits, and realize, ‘Hey, it’s all me.’ And once you do this you find it a great deal easier to talk to people.”

Communicating with other people brought Baltin to the subject of the Dean’s Term workshop. “What we are aiming for is this: we are after you being able to be the same person you are when you are involved in a meaningful conversation with someone you care about. I want to lead you out of the forest into the clearing so you can look back and see the problems.”

Baltin basically divided up the course into three areas of focus which he says are crucial to good public speaking.

“The components in the workshop, which, if you achieve, will make you a better speaker, are: First and most importantly, try and get you to speak authentically with your whole self. If you can do this you are in the top 1% in the business world. And you accomplish this through being attentive, responsive, and decisive,” said Baltin.

The next focal point is managing your anxiety. Now, you can take vials, ludes, or other things, but what we have to get you to do is say, ‘This is gonna suck. I am bad.’ and work with it,” said Baltin.

Baltin spoke of these fears that cause a speaker to worry: “Isolation, the burden of responsibility, and being judged. These are the three things of suffering. In the workshops we will be doing some self-mind control stuff, because good preparation and a strong sense of purpose can do away with all these things.”

The last focal point Baltin outlined was preparation skills. Being a “user friendly speaker,” is the key to good speaking.

“You, in life, are pretty much shaped by your relationships. You play a different role in each relationship. But you must not know you are playing a role.

In acting, you must rediscover these traits, and realize, ‘Hey, it’s all me.’ And once you do this you find it a great deal easier to talk to people.”

— Ken Baltin, instructor of Dean’s term speaking seminar

a woman’s profession.” So thoroughly dissuaded, Baltin applied to Rutgers University, intending to major in Journalism.

According to Baltin, “Your ideas should lead into each other. Each idea should spawn a new one. When we talk about delivery, words carry about 10%, sounds 92%, and 6% is carried by your body. The body is where all the belief is. We will work on eye contact, posture, keeping close space, gestures, and vocal variety.”

Baltin assured the audience that the Dean’s Term workshop in “all about pushing boundaries. You have to get egg on your face to come out of your shell...I like to walk around with egg on my face.”

As a result of the financial negotiations with the Office of the President, Baltin announced that the public speaking seminar will now only be able to accommodate 50, rather than 100 students. Both of the other two Dean’s Term seminars will still accept 100 students.

Today is the deadline for applications to the Dean’s Term program.
Robinson speaks on NAFTA in the first of a month-long series of lectures in economics

NAFTA is the North American Free Trade Agreement. According to Stephen P. Jacobs, director of the "The Economics of NAFTA," the agreement may have an impact on wages. Jacobs says that the agreement will not be "a shock to the system," but a continuing trend of a tilted economy.

Robinson described NAFTA as the "most studied trade agreement in history." NAFTA has been reviewed by most agencies and has gone before every living president. It is also the most controversial of agreements ever to be proposed. However, Robinson assured the audience that he has been unable to accomplish any of the liberalization that has so far been attempted in the US and Mexico. NAFTA may have on the US will be "positive and small."

Robinson described NAFTA as "the chicken that the sky will fall. This opinion is not isolated either. There are many who believe that the passage of such an agreement will undermine the American worker, since they cannot compete with low-wage Mexican workers. Referring to this, Robinson said, "If companies made location decisions based on wages, companies would be flocking to Bangladesh."

300 economists including 13 Nobel Prize winners drafted a letter to President Clinton, concerning the Agreement. NAFTA will create the largest market in the world: a $6.5 trillion market with 370 million people. That is 200,000 additional high-wage jobs in the US by 1995. Robinson said, "We are not creating an Economic Common Market. We are not creating one country. We are opening Mexican exports to the US. and opening US exports to Mexico."

- Sherman Robinson of the President's Council of Economic Advisers

INSTITUTE FOR STUDY ABROAD
BUTLER UNIVERSITY

UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES IN GREAT BRITAIN
AUSTRALIA
IRELAND
NEW ZEALAND

Fully integrated study at British, Irish, New Zealand and Australian universities

FALL OR SPRING SEMESTER • FULL YEAR
INSTEP • SUMMER PROGRAM • INTERNSHIPS

Study Abroad Information Session
Representative: Tom Roberts
Date: Mon. Nov. 1
Location: Fanning Hall 315

For further information please contact: Your Study Abroad Office on campus or the Institute for Study Abroad, Butler University, 4600 Sunset Avenue, Indianapolis, IN 46208. Tel: 317/283-9336 or 1/800-368-6852 Ext. 9336.

The College Voice
Publishing Group

Looking for people to fill the following positions:
Designers
CONNThought Editor
Associate Photo Editor
Photo Editor (Magazine)
Writers
Photographers
Ad reps

*Applications are available in the Voice office, second floor of Cro, and are due back to box 4970 by Wednesday, November 8

Also, submissions for Voice Magazine are due by Wednesday, November 13
Questions? Call Isabelle x3608
HIV positive panelists educate the community about living with AIDS, relating personal experiences

BY HILARY C. SARDIELA
The College Voice

"I'm doing this now because I feel I've made the ultimate mistake. I can't stop people from doing the same," said one of the two HIV positive males who spoke about living with AIDS at a panel discussion last Wednesday night.

The discussion, held in the College Center's 1941 room, was sponsored by several groups including the Connecticut College Peer Educators, Southeastern Connecticut AIDS Project (SECAP) and the New London AIDS Educational, Counseling and Testing Services.

The goal of the panel was to better educate students in colleges and the general population about the prevention of the spread of AIDS, as well as how to cope if someone you love is HIV positive. Betsy Ryan, a registered nurse for the New London Health Department led the panel discussion.

Baruch Gould, a member of SECAP who offers support groups for those who are living with the HIV virus began the discussion by explaining that the first thing that he tells individuals who have HIV is that there are five things they can do to improve their immune system, the first being nutrition. A high protein diet is necessary to build up one's immunity, according to Gould. One must also exercise at least three times a week to keep the body as healthy as possible. The HIV patient must also stop smoking, since smokers have twice the chance of becoming ill as non-smokers and give up all drugs, especially cocaine, if they are to live longer.

Gould added a sixth rule to the list, the support from loved ones, which he said was "the most important."

"Every person should do those things I mentioned anyway, whether or not they are HIV positive," said Gould. "All we need loving support around us. People with AIDS may find their family and friends have disappeared. That's what we hate.

"HIV is an infection," said Gould, "but when people become infected, the people around them become affected.

"This is one of the main reasons why Gould decided to become involved in what is known as a "grassroots" project. Gould said that in the late 1980's when AIDS first became an issue for the American people, the social services were not prepared to handle the situation. People who had contracted the virus had a stigma attached to them, and the government was not viewed as a source of support. Turning to local or "grassroots" projects such as SECAP, founded in 1988, people sought knowledge about the disease and what to do.

Edna DeLeStine, an AIDS Risk Reduction Outreach Worker (AROW) for the city of New London was the next member of the panel to speak. There are 22 AROWs programs in the state of Connecticut, most of which are situated in New London County, the location of highest concentration of drug use.

DeLeStine's main job is to prevent the spread of AIDS caused from IV drug use. She visits the local crack houses and instructs users on how to properly clean their syringes, provides HIV testing, and refers users to clinics.

DeLeStine also provides services for prostitutes, and has devised a package called a "safety kit," which ensures prostitutes who use IV users that their needles are sterile. The "safety kit" contains three boxes, the first has clean water, the second has a bleach solution and the third is clean water. As well as providing the materials and instructions for cleaning IV needles, the kit also contains a condom to promote the practice of safe sex.

"All of us are recovering drug addicts."

Referring to the resistance she encounters from crack houses, DeLeStine said, "You have what is called gatekeepers. You must be very careful and subtle. We can't make assumptions about whether a person gets high or not. We speak to everyone. Also, you have to know when to back off when they don't want to talk to you."

"It's all about risk reduction, Gould added. "At first, the only people targeted for any type of education were men who had sex with men. A lot of sexual activity goes on that is not talked about. A male who considers himself to be heterosexual may have engaged in sexual act with other men, and is therefore at risk. The subject of AIDS is forcing society to face two issues: death and dying, and sex."

The first testimony of the evening from a HIV patient was given by John, who had contracted the HIV virus in 1987.

"I had a little bit of a chance for me to talk to you, because I attend this college. I'm not really identified on campus as being HIV positive among the college population," said John.

For most of his life, John, who suffers from kidney failure, had been on dialysis, a process which cleans the blood. In 1990, John was referred to a psychiatrist. He continued to ask about my IV drug use, and I eventually told him about my HIV. I told him that I didn't use all of the information out there. If you don't take care of yourself, nobody will take care of you," said John.

The second testimony from an HIV positive patient was given by a man named "McGoo." McGoo is a gay male who contracted the virus in 1985.

"My story is completely different," McGoo said, "but the same. I was a virgin up until the age of 24. Being desperate for love, I needed to trust and love somebody. I had three sexual partners and three unsafe sexual encounters until I met Robert, who died in 1991. I loved him very much. I put all of my trust in him. I thought I had a back together in a mostorgonous relationship that no harm would come to us, that this theory is foolish."

In 1990, McGoo noticed that Robert had developed a cough and was smoking heavily. He tried to persuade Robert to go to get tested for HIV, but didn't succeed. One night McGoo came home to find Robert in the bathroom telling him he couldn't breathe. He rushed Robert to the hospital where they discovered his T-cell count was 50. The average count is 1200, Robert had been below AIDS, and two weeks later McGoo tested HIV positive.

"I was his only support in this person? Even though I loved him, I knew I shouldn't have thought that he could never have the HIV. Since 1990, I've lost my career and a lover. I had to change my lifestyle. I now am involved with a person who loves me even though I have the HIV. If you don't love yourself, learn how to love yourself."

McGoo then told the audience that he had already planned his funeral, obituary, and will. He is now active in a support group that puts a face and personality behind the disease. There are a lot of people living with AIDS, not dying with AIDS, said McGoo.

Closing his testimony, McGoo said, "If you're going to have sex, you have to assume you are carrying HIV. Wear a condom. When you protect yourself, you are doing your part to eradicate the spread of AIDS."

Please recycle.

The College Voice

Natalie Hildt, Doug Lampert, Jennifer LeVan, Chris Scott, and Welch Elspeth came out in style at Connecticut College's first ever gender-bender bash.
Social Awareness Week

Eastern Pequot Drumming Circle brings slice of Native American culture to community

BY CARL SCHULTZ
A&E Editor

The Eastern Pequot Drumming Circle brought rhythms of Native American culture to the Coffee Grounds last Monday. Members of the Eastern Pequot Drumming Circle brought the sounds of their Native American heritage, along with discussions on their instruments and culture, to those who attended the performance.

"The songs that we sing are in that Algonquian language, the language of the people that live right here in this land. What we are trying to do is bring back that language and the use of that language right here in this area, for our children and the seven generations coming after us," said Red Loon.

"I actually enjoy menstruating."
- Jeff Gass

"Me and my orgasms are not going in Camel Heard"
- Esther Potter

Much of the Algonquian way of life deals with the balance between male and female, and Red Loon explained how this concept of balance filters even into the music and use of instruments.

"There are men singers and woman singers. The men are no more important, nor less important. The only difference is the instrument that they use," he said.

"The women are cutters, the men sit at the drum. The large drums come out of a western tradition where women were always in physical contact with the drum. This is not because it was believed a woman was unclean. It was because it was believed that a woman was more powerful than a man, and that the only place that a man could ever feel his full power was at a drum," he said.

After a brief introduction by Bill Bingham, who now works as a legal advisor for the Eastern Pequots, the circle began with a "Thank You" song, thanking the Creator for giving them the ability to be here, their love and friendship with each other, and the support of their families. During the songs, the three men, Red Loon, Little Turtle and Mike Stoching sat around the large drum, while the three women, Bright Sky, Sue Dipiazza and Cindy Freeman stood behind them with their shakers. Conversations were held around the drum during a song with drum beats, passing the lead from one drummer to another, and announcing the changes in the rhythms.

One of the most entertaining pieces was a song the Circle often performs for children. Breaking the stereotypical myth that Native Americans are always serious and have no sense of humor, the song went from indiscernible sounds to a list of Disneyland characters, including Mickey Mouse.

After the performance, Red Loon answered questions about how the Circle communicated during a song, the religious use of drums, and the types of events the Circle would drum for, which included funerals, celebrations, and prayers for the sick.

Little Turtle and Bright Sky are both Narraganset-Nipmuck, Freeman is Muskogee Creek-Oklahoma, Dipiazza is Kiowa, Stoching is Narraganset, and Red Loon Micmac. Together, these members of the Full Circle Drum put on a stunning performance for those fortunate enough to catch it.

The Camel Heard . . .

"Do you need anything besides a woman and a life?"
- Janessa Fournier asking friends at her table on her way to the Coke machine in Harris

"It's always acting."
- Esther Potter referring to female organisms

"Me and my organs are not going in Camel Heard"
- Esther Potter

"You're not going to take your skirt off, are you?"
- Esther Potter to Chad Marlow

"How?"
- Chad Marlow

"When I removed your skirt; for a brief moment, I thought I saw the face of God"
- Chad Marlow

"You will make sure it's printed, even if you have to sleep with someone on the staff."
- Janessa Fournier to Lee Rawles, referring to getting material printed in the Voice.

"I've been waiting four years for this — four years!"
- Campus Safety officer Doug Barnes, on purchasing Ted Heintz at the rugby auction.

"I like them big."
- Sarah Hanley, overhearing at the men's soccer game.

"Size is a good thing."
- Hanley, trying to justify herself over brunch the next day.

"So, baby, what's your name, anyways?"
- Overheard in shower stall somewhere in the Plex

"You know, Lee, you gotta get some or something."
- Knute Gregg to Lee Rawles, responding to Rawles' longing, lustful look while discussing the "Sex" issue over dinner.

"I actually enjoy menstruating."
- Jeff Cass

"Bitchin'"
- Lee Rawles

Halloween Eve at Conn: Never before have so many Elvises invaded Conn College.
To protect the identity of all individuals involved, the following case summaries refer to every witness, accuser, and accused as female. The Board will alternate gender in each case summary.

CASE SUMMARY #1

ACCUSED: Student A
ACCUSSER: Campus Safety

CHARGE: Destruction of College Property in the Form of Destroying a Tree

EVIDENCE: A Campus Safety report in addition to verbal and written statements from Student A indicated that she had been involved in the destruction of a tree. The Board believed that such similarity could occur by chance.

DISCUSSION: Student A had claimed that she did not participate in the destruction. The Board found that the evidence did not support her claim.

RECOMMENDATION: The Board recommended that the incident be treated as academic probation for two semesters.

ATTENDANCE: Manning Weir ’96 had an excused absence.

ADDITIONAL NOTES: Student B’s case will be heard separately.

CASE SUMMARY #2

ACCUSED: Student A
ACCUSSER: (Student A turned herself in)

CHARGE: Vandalism

EVIDENCE: Written and verbal statements from Student A, the vandalism itself, and a confession from Physical Plant served as evidence.

DISCUSSION: Student A turned herself in to the J-Board. She admitted to having vandalized college property with spray paint and accepted full responsibility for her actions. She stated that she had been at a party and that she had not been under the influence of alcohol or any other controlled substance. She could not provide a sound answer as to why she committed the act.

DECISION: Guilty (6-0)

REASONS:

CHARGE: Vandalism

RECOMMENDATION: The Board recommended that Student A be suspended for the Fall semester and that she complete this term with the Board.

ATTENDANCE: Manning Weir ’96 had an excused absence.

ADDITIONAL NOTES: Student B’s case will be heard separately.

CASE SUMMARY #3

ACCUSED: Student A
ACCUSSER: Campus Safety

CHARGE: Cheating

EVIDENCE: Evidence included the final exams of Student A and Student B, written and verbal statements from Student A and Professor Z, a written statement from Student B, and written statements from Students S and T.

DISCUSSION: Professor Z accused Students A and B of cheating after grading their take-home final exams. Professor Z explained earlier to the whole class that, while they were allowed to use notes, they were not allowed to collaborate among students. In grading the exams, Professor Z observed that the exams of Student A and B were nearly identical; in fact, the only difference between them was that Student A did not complete the final problem. The two students claimed not to have worked on the exams together although they both admitted to having shared a notebook over the course of the semester. Furthermore, the timeline and the other parts of the exams were identical.

REASON: The exams were identical, aside from the one missing question. The exam allowed for a tremendous amount of variation in the approaches students could take. The nature of the exam itself made it unlikely that such similarity could occur by chance.

RECOMMENDATION: The Board recommended that Student A’s self-scheduled, self-proclaimed absences for the Fall semester 1995, that she be on Academic Probation for two semesters, and that she receive a "F" grade on the exam in question.

DECISION: Guilty (5-0)

ATTENDANCE: Manning Weir ’96 had an excused absence.

ADDITIONAL NOTES: Student B’s case will be heard separately.

CASE SUMMARY #4

ACCUSED: Student A
ACCUSSER: Campus Safety

CHARGE: Fire Code violation in the Form of Tampering with and Removing an Extinguisher from the Wall

EVIDENCE: A Campus Safety report, written and verbal statements from Student A, written and verbal statements from Witness S, and a written statement from Witness T served as evidence.

DISCUSSION: The accused and her friends were playing ball outside of their dorms when Witness T ran into her room. Student A followed her and picked up the base of the fire extinguisher (which was mounted next to the door) then knocked it. At the same time a Campus Safety officer passed by on routine patrol and saw Student A with the hose in her hand and the other on the lever. In addition the officer noticed that the pin was missing. The officer stopped her and wrote a report. The officer stated that she believed the accused would have sprayed the operator of the room with the extinguisher had she not been stopped.

ATTENDANCE: Manning Weir ’96 had an excused absence. Student B further stated that she had noticed the pin of the fire extinguisher missing at least a week before the date of the incident in question.

DECISION: Not Guilty of all charges (5-0)

ATTENDANCE: Manning Weir ’96 had an excused absence.

ADDITIONAL NOTES: Student B’s case will be heard separately.

CASE SUMMARY #5

ACCUSED: Student A
ACCUSSER: Campus Safety

CHARGE: Theft

EVIDENCE: Evidence included the final exams of Student A and Student B, written and verbal statements from Student A and Professor Z, a written statement from Student B, and written statements from Students S and T.

DISCUSSION: Professor Z accused Students A and B of cheating after grading their take-home final exams. Professor Z explained earlier to the whole class that, while they were allowed to use notes, they were not allowed to collaborate among students. In grading the exams, Professor Z observed that the exams of Student A and B were nearly identical; in fact, the only difference between them was that Student A did not complete the final problem. The two students claimed not to have worked on the exams together although they both admitted to having shared a notebook over the course of the semester. Furthermore, the timeline and the other parts of the exams were identical.

REASON: The exams were identical, aside from the one missing question. The exam allowed for a tremendous amount of variation in the approaches students could take. The nature of the exam itself made it unlikely that such similarity could occur by chance.

RECOMMENDATION: The Board recommended that Student A’s self-scheduled, self-proclaimed absences for the Fall semester 1995, that she be on Academic Probation for two semesters, and that she receive a "F" grade on the exam in question.

DECISION: Guilty (5-0)

ATTENDANCE: Manning Weir ’96 had an excused absence.

ADDITIONAL NOTES: Student B’s case will be heard separately.
"Tales From The Darkside:"
Storytelling Center shares spooky tales with kids and adults

BY MICHELLE RONAYNE
The College Voice

"The Coals," by Kruper. Black, a well known storyteller from Massachusetts, She told of folklore from Ireland in "The Story of Jack." If you have yet to visit the Lyman Allyn before January 2, 1994.

The cool fall air and the full moon shining brightly made a perfect evening for ghosts and goblins. Well it was at least a perfect evening for telling scary tales.

"Tales From the Darkside" was an evening program for students as well as the New London community which consisted of spooky Halloween stories sponsored by the Connecticut College Storytelling Center. It featured storytellers Barbara Redd, Judith Black, Claudia Kenyon, Anne Bischof, and Jennifer Hollis.

The adventure through Halloween horror began with Barbara Redd, who is in charge of the Storytelling Center, reciting the witches chant from Macbeth. The chant begins with the well-known line "Double, double toil and trouble..." an appropriate eerie beginning to the series of engaging stories.

Claudia Kenyon continued the Halloween romp with the tale of "Hagery Peg," a story of a scary old woman who turns children into food. This motion frightened many of the five and six year olds in the crowd. Kenyon's ability to make the characters' voices sound different made her performance particularly interesting.

The star of the evening was clearly Judith Black, a well known storyteller from Massachusetts. "The Story of Jack," an appropriately eerie beginning to the evening festivities, was an attempt at a story of an ending, and six year olds in the crowd. Kenyon's ability to make the characters' voices sound different made her performance particularly interesting.

The cliche of an ending, and six year olds in the crowd. Kenyon's ability to make the characters' voices sound different made her performance particularly interesting.

The star of the evening was clearly Judith Black, a well known storyteller from Massachusetts. "The Story of Jack," an appropriately eerie beginning to the evening festivities, was an attempt at a story of an ending, and six year olds in the crowd. Kenyon's ability to make the characters' voices sound different made her performance particularly interesting.

The cliche of an ending, and six year olds in the crowd. Kenyon's ability to make the characters' voices sound different made her performance particularly interesting.

The star of the evening was clearly Judith Black, a well known storyteller from Massachusetts. "The Story of Jack," an appropriately eerie beginning to the evening festivities, was an attempt at a story of an ending, and six year olds in the crowd. Kenyon's ability to make the characters' voices sound different made her performance particularly interesting.

The cliche of an ending, and six year olds in the crowd. Kenyon's ability to make the characters' voices sound different made her performance particularly interesting.

Two exciting exhibits on display now at Lyman Allyn: 18 local artists featured

BY DIANE MYERS
The College Voice

If you have yet to visit the Lyman Allyn Art Museum (LAAM), heed this advice: go. Now is an especially good time, as Karen Asher says, "[The artists'] work has a seductive presence and pieces represented in Tuesday through Friday and Sunday from 1-5 p.m., Saturdays 11-5 and Wednesdays 1-9. Students get in for a mere $3, for an afternoon of your choice, and stroll on down while the weather is still nice. You certainly won't be sorry.

"Tales From the Darkside:"
Storytelling Center shares spooky tales with kids and adults

BY MICHELLE RONAYNE
The College Voice

The exhibit rebels against traditional abstract art. Indeed, every piece has a unique personal tivity at the museum. From the simple viewpoint of a non-art connoisseur, the exhibit is a fascinating visual feast of unusual mediums and uncommon subjects like Chinese laundry and bananas. One of the exhibit's most striking pieces (and my personal favorite) is Emilio Martinez's "Two Ways of Saying the Same Thing," which is a large iron triangle placed next to an immense fiberglass nostril on the museum floor.

If you have yet to visit the Lyman Allyn Art Museum (LAAM), heed this advice: go. Now is an especially good time, as Karen Asher says, "[The artists'] work has a seductive presence and pieces represented in Tuesday through Friday and Sunday from 1-5 p.m., Saturdays 11-5 and Wednesdays 1-9. Students get in for a mere $3, for an afternoon of your choice, and stroll on down while the weather is still nice. You certainly won't be sorry.

"Tales From the Darkside:"
Storytelling Center shares spooky tales with kids and adults

BY MICHELLE RONAYNE
The College Voice

The exhibit rebels against traditional abstract art. Indeed, every piece has a unique personal tivity at the museum. From the simple viewpoint of a non-art connoisseur, the exhibit is a fascinating visual feast of unusual mediums and uncommon subjects like Chinese laundry and bananas. One of the exhibit's most striking pieces (and my personal favorite) is Emilio Martinez's "Two Ways of Saying the Same Thing," which is a large iron triangle placed next to an immense fiberglass nostril on the museum floor.
Calvin and Hobbes

That was obviously some sort of commentary.

Hey, look at me!

"Nude descending a staircase."

Nobody understands art.
November 2, 1993 The College Voice Page 15

Arts & Entertainment

College pays tribute to Martha Myers after 26 years of service

BY CARLI SCHULZ
A & E Editor

On Saturday night, while many college students were smiling along the campus in various states of costume, welcoming in Halloween, a sad good-bye was being said in East Studio.

Alumni and students alike gathered to share their lives, their stories, and their endless love and thanks to a tribute to Martha Myers, who retired after an illustrious 26-year career here at Connecticut College.

The tribute, which consisted of a series of performances and stories from Myers’ past students, combined dance and humor to paint a portrait of thanks to this astounding women who touched and changed so many people’s lives over the years.

The tribute began with a video collage edited by Charles Reinhart which showed Myers in her element, teaching, laughing and dancing. This was followed by over 15 pieces choreographed and performed by the alumni. Some, such as the first piece, “Lifedance for Martha” by Gloria McLean ’71, told a story. While dancing to a Miles Davis score, McLean shared experiences from her four years at Connecticut College, giving the audience a sample of Myers’ unique sense of humor, intelligence and love for dance.

Other pieces, such as “Diabolo Reef,” choreographed by Joyce Granberry Hoyt ’71, used dance itself to speak. Hoyt and her fellow performer, Pamela Granbery, blended their movements in a short piece to the score of a cello duet to express gratitude to Myers.

One of the most outstanding performances of the evening was “Silk Pajamas,” choreographed by Mary R. Barnett ’78. With an original score and some of the most interesting moves I’ve seen anyone do with a chair, Barnett, dressed in a green skirt that can only be described as foofie, danced among three silk pajamaed women in a fabulous performance.

Another highlight was “The Right Touch” by Deborah Abel ’80, in which a couple contorted and put their bodies together in more ways I could have imagined possible. The dancers melded together in a surprising display of grace and strength that garnered rousing applause from the delighted audience.

After the intermission, which lasted way too long (plenty of time for running and gabbing at the reception afterwards, people), Dana Holby ’75 et al performed a series of works based on her experiences on sabbatical. Ordinary objects such as a tent, tent supports and sleeping bags were turned into fabulous accompaniments within the dance.

Gratitude was expressed even by those not there in flesh. One former student had sent a tape, which thanked Myers and explained what he had been doing with his life since leaving Conn, assuring Myers that he was indeed there with her in spirit.

The evening reached its peak with the final performance, an improvisation by Myers, accompanied on the piano by the lovely mijwd, Wall Matthews. Myers talked and danced her way through a series of laughs, stories and hats, leaving a sense of humor to paint a portrait of thanks to this astounding women.

Myers finished and stood before a thunderous applause and ovation, deserving every second of it. After a short speech and presentation by Claire Gaudiani, president of the college, she was surrounded by her friends and students in a final good-bye as everyone headed to the reception.

I never knew Martha Myers, but I certainly wish I had. Even in that one evening I was touched by her as well, and am sorry to see her go.

She will be remembered by everyone who walks into the East Studio, for it is no longer called the East Studio. Martha’s name, proudly displayed by the door, will bring a smile to one’s face and a dance to one’s step for years to come.
Schmoozing with Josh and the Donut:

Rousmaniere notches first career rugby score; mistaken identity

The NBA season is about to begin, but unfortunately, the Don't's interest in the NBA lasts about as long as his 1982 Dodge Omni did last year. The car was destroyed in a terrifying engine fire. In the NBA eastern conference, two sensational powerhouses from Washington and Philadelphia will battle it out with Shawn Bradley and Mo Malone. These teams are so even that if we weren't boisterous talking about them, Boston's player losses would put them out of contention. The Knicks and Magic will contend for the top spot. Orlando is still too young to dominate. In the Central Division, Charlotte should improve enough to challenge the top two teams. Both Indiana and Atlanta will create new chemistry but fail to provide the key, crucial element. In the West, the conference has the talent to sell it all, but key injuries and drug suspensions will make the road difficult. Seattle has the most depth and young talent in the league, but can Coach George Karl satisfy all of the tremendously good teams such as Eddie Jones's San Antonio Spurs and the Houston Rockets will all provide stiff competition. Seattle's depth and trip to the conference finals last year should give them the edge and experience the title.

The Ultimate frisbee tournament graced the Conn College campus last Saturday. Several NESCAC schools displayed the grace of an alternative sport. The fabulous guns and greats were all there for the party. The men's and women's varsity and freshman boats were entered in the open event which disregarded weight with a time of forty-two that ranged from international to unknown at the time the paper went to print, but each boat found themselves in 63rd place, junior Natalie Bhattacharya's time of 28:11 gave him 43rd place, sophomore Meghan Clancy gave with a 21st place finish and a time of 28:17. Freshman Jon Vogel ran the course in 29:17 for 64th place, and junior Dace Isaacson placed 73rd with a time of 31:33.

The men's cross country team finished ninth at the NESCAC championship on Saturday.

Cross country teams run wild

Saturday was not a good day to go outside. Most people weathered the cold and rain by staying inside and sleeping.

Most people, however, do not run cross country for Conn College. The members of the women's and men's team traveled to Wesleyan University on Saturday to run in the NESCAC Championships. The men placed sixth with 173 points and the men came in ninth with 208 points.

Wesleyan's Sarah Hann set the pace by finishing the 8000 meter cruise in 18:37. Senior Lyn Balsamo set the pace for the Canes with a 14th place finish and a time of 19:41. Senior Jenniech Devine finished just two seconds later for a 16th place finish. Freshman Meghan Clay followed with a 21st place finish and a time of 22:31. Sophomore Martin Land led the way for Conn by coming in 33rd with a time of 27:47. Bob Stack came in 39th with a time of 27:57, junior Craig Morrison ran the course in 28:07 for a 42nd place finish, freshman Jody-Deep Bhattacharya's time of 28:11 gave him 43rd place, sophomore Mandy Nagel ran in 51st with a time of 28:17, freshman Jon Vogel ran the course in 29:17 for 64th place, and junior Dace Isaacson placed 73rd with a time of 31:33.

The women's cross country team finished ninth at the NESCAC championship on Saturday.

Sports

The College Voice

November 2, 1993

Sports

BY MATT BURSLIN

Sports Editor

Winter was won with 54 points, Middlebury came in second with 86 points, and Colby's 103 point total gave them third place. Conn soundly defeated both of its in-state rivals; Wesleyan placed ninth with 92 points, and Trinity finished last with 260 points.

The men could not compete with these two teams or any others in the state for that matter. The two teams combined for 212 points, while the next closest team had 310 points. The men's lineup was from stem to bow: senior coxswain seniors Sasha Notnagle, freshman Meg Barry, sophomores Facenda, Daryl Jones, and the Donut all contributed to the Conn's secret weapon. Congratulations! By the way, Conn rugby ended its season by trouncing WNEC 32-5. John "Cement Head" was the star of the show with his first score. Pande-
Sports

Sports Analysis:

Men’s soccer hoping to gain NCAA Tournament invitation

Despite 11-2-1 regular season record, team is on the bubble for a trip to NCAAs; may have to defend last year’s ECAC title

BY NOAH GOLDSTEIN
Associate Sports Editor

After concluding the regular season with a 11-2-1 record, the men’s soccer team once again hopes to make post season play.

Coach Tim Hudner and the Conn defense all but rewrite the record book, compiling ten shutouts and an 0.38 goals against average. These easily eclipsed the marks of seven shutouts and an 0.97 Goals Against Average set by 1992 Division III Player of the Year, Matt Hakl. However, the Camels will have to get lucky to gain a berth in the NCAA tournament, and would otherwise be relegated to playing in the regional ECAC tournament.

Only the top three teams from each region automatically qualify for the NCAAs, and Williams, Colby, and Salem State have all but secured those spots in New England. If a wild card spot is granted to the region, it would most likely come down to Conn and Plymouth State (13-3), but the Camels might have the edge as a result of their 11-1 tie against Williams, which is ranked second in the country.

Why, after compiling such an impressive record are the defending ECAC champions having such a difficult time gaining respect? The losses to solid Amherst and Wesleyan teams were the only blemishes on their record, which was amased playing in the extremely competitive NESCAC conference. Was it the loss of seniors Tim Cheyne, Xolani Zungu, and Hackl enough to undermine the credibility of the Conn soccer program?

For one last year, when the offense relied on Cheyne and Brendan Gilman to provide the scoring punch, this year’s scoring has been much more balanced. Perhaps since there went no players with standout offensive statistics, the Conn program did not get much attention.

It seems more likely however, that the 1-0 loss at home to Amherst in the fourth game of the year did the most to scar the Camels’ image. Conn did not lose until the last week of the season last year, and their rise in the polls was never hampered. This season, with freshman standout Matt Raynor replacing Cheyne, Hudner replacing Hakl, a strong core of returning veterans, and a deep pool of freshman, there was no doubt that expectations were running high.

After several lackadaisical victories, including an unimpressive 2-0 overtime victory against Coast Guard, the Camels faced off against Williams (14-3-1), and Plymouth State (13-3), but the Camels failed to take advantage of their opportunity. Perhaps since there were no players with standout offensive statistics, the Conn scoring has been much more balanced. Perhaps since there went no players with standout offensive statistics, the Conn program did not get much attention.

In the extremely competitive NESCAC conference, even the minor hip injury. He, for the purposes, did not play in the first two games, presumably to prevent further aggravation to his injury. After he returned to full strength, his playing time was limited to short five minute appearances. This happened despite the fact that he has the complete package of speed, skill, heart, and savvy.

... Whether the absence of these two players played a role in the Camels’ two losses or not is irrelevant, however. What is relevant is what is going to happen during post-season play.

First and foremost, especially if the Camels make the NCAAs, Pete Spear needs to return to the starting lineup with a burning desire to perform.

Mokonane has playoff experience and a burning desire to win. These are attributes that absolutely cannot be ignored in the post-season.

Conn has the potential to do extremely well in any post season. A tie between second-ranked Williams on home turf proved the Camels can play with anyone. Hopefully the NCAA selection committee will think the same.

Women’s volleyball ousted from NESCAC championships; hoping for bid to NCAAs

Record stands at 30-12, loss to Bates in semi-finals ends chance of title

BY MATT BEUSTIN
Sports Editor

One of the best-kept secrets on campus is the women’s volleyball team. There are quite a few possibilities as to why. Perhaps studentsFree Trips and Money!! Individuals and Student Organizations wanting to promote the Hottest Spring Break Destinations, call Sarah Lawren-
Free Campus Programs 1-800-327-6013.

One of the best-kept secrets on campus is the women’s volleyball team. There are quite a few possibilities as to why. Perhaps students free trips and money!! Individuals and student organizations wanting to promote the hottest Spring Break Destinations, call Sarah Lawrence College in Florence, WC.

One of the best-kept secrets on campus is the women’s volleyball team. There are quite a few possibilities as to why. Perhaps students free trips and money!! Individuals and student organizations wanting to promote the hottest Spring Break Destinations, call Sarah Lawrence College in Florence, WC.

Free Campus Programs 1-800-327-6013.

Women’s volleyball ousted from NESCAC championships; hoping for bid to NCAAs

Record stands at 30-12, loss to Bates in semi-finals ends chance of title

One of the best-kept secrets on campus is the women’s volleyball team. There are quite a few possibilities as to why. Perhaps students would rather attend men’s and women’s soccer games played in the middle of campus than cross the bridge to the Athletic Center. Perhaps it is the fault of a certain campus publication which gives far more coverage to other sports. Nevertheless, while the men’s and women’s soccer team get the most support and headlines, the volleyball team keeps churning out win after win at the Athletic Center. Last weekend, the women’s team beat Wheaton at home before traveling to the NESCAC championships over the weekend, where they lost in the semi-finals to Bates, upping their season record to 10-3-0. All the NESCAC teams were invited to Amherst, Massachusetts last weekend for the tournament. Upon their arrival, they were separated into two pools. The Camels found themselves with Williams, Bowdoin, Colby, and host Amherst.

Conn defeated all the members of their pool, setting up a semi-final match with Bates. But the Bobcats ended the Camel’s championship run by knocking off Conn in two games.

"It was the final game," said junior Meghan Cady. "I thought we could have gone all the way, but sometimes it just happens that way." Sophomore Lauren Shropshire led the way for Conn with 45 receptions. Senior Bonnie Silberstein had 50 kills, 47 digs and 27 blocks. Junior Martha Vivian added 43 kills, 51 digs and 16 blocks. Sophomore Megan Hanselmann was also a major contributor with 31 kills and 70 digs.

At the conclusion of the tournament, Silberstein was named to First Team All-NESCAC, and Vivian was named to the second team.

The Camels tuned up for the championships with a 3-0 win over Wheaton on Tuesday. Conn’s first game was a close 15-12 match, but they breezed by their guests 15-6, 15-4 in the final two games to clinch the win. Freshman Jessica O’Deaiken had five aces for the Camels. Vivian added 12 kills, seven blocks and 13 digs. Hanselmann contributed eight kills and 16 digs. Cady had 23 assists, and Silberstein added 14 kills.

Although the Camels schedule shows no more matches, they are still in "season," according to Cady. She said that head coach Darryl Bourassa spoke to Conn athletic director Bob Malekoff earlier today about the possibility of Conn taking part in the ECAC’s. There is also the possibility that the Camels will attend even more prestigious tournaments.

"There is a very slim possibility that we might go to the NCAA’s," said Cady. Even if their season is over, it has been an incredible success. Hopefully, it is not to prevent further recognition that fans might have another chance to see one of Conn’s best-kept secrets.
WHAT TO TAKE FOR YOUR NEXT ALL-NIGHTER.

NO ANNUAL FEE,
A $1,000 CREDIT LINE,
AND NATIONWIDE ACCEPTANCE. HOW'S THAT FOR AN EYE-OPENER?

DISCOVER

IF YOU DON'T GOT IT, GET IT.
Women’s soccer falls to Williams in season finale; await ECAC tournament seeding

BY MATT BURSTIN
Sports Editor

Sometimes you just have to wait. After thirteen games, nine wins, four losses, and one tie, including a 2-0 loss at Williams on Saturday, the Ephs were involved in a scoreless draw over Clark on Wednesday. As the final seconds ticked away, the Conn College women’s soccer team has absolutely no idea where they will be seeded in the ECAC Championships. For now, guesses will have to suffice.

“If we beat Williams, we have a chance at the number one seed,” said team assistant coach Kristin Supto after Wednesday’s win.

Williams spoiled those plans on Saturday with a convincing 2-0 white-washing of Conn in Williamsburg. The hosts boasted a gritty 11-1-1 record and the number two ranking in New England compared to #6 for the Camels entering the game and looked eager to increase their win total to a dozen.

The Ephs wasted little time in working to accomplish their goal. Beth Wheeler scored off an assist from Agatha Donovan fifteen minutes into the game to give Williams a 1-0 lead. The Ephs struck again fifteen minutes later. Jessica English’s assist led to Sarah Campbell’s goal which led to a 2-0 score at the end of the first half.

After making adjustments to their opponents in the second half, Williams was just as successful at keeping Conn out of the net. The Ephs pumped 21 shots at Conn, forcing Doyle to make five saves and junior goalie Julie Granof, who earned her tenth goal of the year and a 3-1 Conn lead. Harkness Green, the Camels warmed the hearts of their fans by scoring early and often. They were able to maintain their energy, thanks to their quick scoring ability. In the first half, Conn College’s Carey Wingate scored a goal, followed by a 2-0 lead at the end of the first half. Harkness Green is an了 at the 21st minute of the game, setting the tone for the rest of the match. Although the weather was cold on Harkness Green, the Camels warmed the hearts of their fans by scoring early and often. They were able to maintain their energy, thanks to their quick scoring ability. In the first half, Conn College’s Carey Wingate scored a goal, followed by a 2-0 lead at the end of the first half. Harkness Green is an了 at the 21st minute of the game, setting the tone for the rest of the match. Although the weather was cold on Harkness Green, the Camels warmed the hearts of their fans by scoring early and often. They were able to maintain their energy, thanks to their quick scoring ability. In the first half, Conn College’s Carey Wingate scored a goal, followed by a 2-0 lead at the end of the first half.

The Camels went on to score five more goals in the second half, with Harkness Green leading the charge. Harkness Green was the lone score for the Express. Stackhouse (one assist) completed the win for Conn College.

After the Ephs were able to maintain their energy, they were able to score five goals in the second half. The Ephs were able to set the tone for the rest of the match. Although the weather was cold on Harkness Green, the Camels warmed the hearts of their fans by scoring early and often. They were able to maintain their energy, thanks to their quick scoring ability. In the first half, Conn College’s Carey Wingate scored a goal, followed by a 2-0 lead at the end of the first half.

The Camels went on to score five more goals in the second half, with Harkness Green leading the charge. Harkness Green was the lone score for the Express. Stackhouse (one assist) completed the win for Conn College.

The Ephs were able to maintain their energy, they were able to score five goals in the second half. The Ephs were able to set the tone for the rest of the match. Although the weather was cold on Harkness Green, the Camels warmed the hearts of their fans by scoring early and often. They were able to maintain their energy, thanks to their quick scoring ability. In the first half, Conn College’s Carey Wingate scored a goal, followed by a 2-0 lead at the end of the first half.

The Camels went on to score five more goals in the second half, with Harkness Green leading the charge. Harkness Green was the lone score for the Express. Stackhouse (one assist) completed the win for Conn College.

The Ephs were able to maintain their energy, they were able to score five goals in the second half. The Ephs were able to set the tone for the rest of the match. Although the weather was cold on Harkness Green, the Camels warmed the hearts of their fans by scoring early and often. They were able to maintain their energy, thanks to their quick scoring ability. In the first half, Conn College’s Carey Wingate scored a goal, followed by a 2-0 lead at the end of the first half.

The Camels went on to score five more goals in the second half, with Harkness Green leading the charge. Harkness Green was the lone score for the Express. Stackhouse (one assist) completed the win for Conn College.
Sports

Field hockey ends season 4–9; splits final two matches
Team downs Elms College 2–0

BY KATE WILSON
the College Voice

After fighting hard all season, the Conn sticksters fell to Williams in their final battle of the season Saturday. The Camels traveled to Williamstown, Massachusetts yesterday and got pummeled by the Williams College team, losing 4–1. In a game played earlier this week, Conn won a convincing 2–0 victory over Elms College. Conn’s final record is 4–9.

Many players pointed out the fine play of the Williams’ opposition.

“I think that Williams is the strongest team we’ve faced,” said sophomore Laura Bayon.

“Williams has an excellent transition game,” Molly Nolan, also a sophomore added.

“They had strong sticks. They stepped up nearly every time we tried to get something started,” Bayon explained.

Despite the high number of goals scored, many team members felt that freshman goalie Wendy Kanter played well.

“Wendy Kanter did a great job,” Nolan said.

Bayon also said Conn worked well as a team. “Communication was very good,” she said.

The loss was undoubtedly a frustrating end to a season with several similar games in which despite the heart and desire to win put into the game, the players could not put the ball in their opponent’s goal.

“It was a tough way to end the season,” Bayon said.

“We’ve had a lot of close games against tough teams this year, so it was very hard to have to end it that way,” she added.

On a brighter note, Conn went to Chicopee, Massachusetts on Thursday and notched a strong victory over Elms College, winning by the score of 2–0. Kanter had eight saves for the Camels.

The game was scoreless until the second half when Nolan scored unassisted with 25:08 left to go.

The second goal was scored by freshman Isadora Kriegel with only 1:18 remaining in the game. Nolan came up with the assist.

Laura Bayon and the field hockey team beat Elms College but lost to Williams to end their season with a 4–9 record.

The team was happy about the win, but felt they missed a lot of chances to score.

“We could have beaten them by more goals,” said freshman Dardy Muldau.

“We had a lot of scoring opportunities,” said coach Ann Packer.

Parmenter felt the playing conditions were less than desirable.

“The field was not good, and as a result the play was scrappy,” she said.

On the whole, Parmenter was pleased with the victory.

“A win’s a win, and we’ve been so frustrated this season that it is great when we can get a victory,” she said.

So, the field hockey season comes to a close. This team has had a tough season, no one can deny that. But it is a young team that can only improve with experience.

It is clear that with the abundance of young talent this team has, that they are going to be a force to be reckoned with in years to come.

Williams out-shot Conn 14–11.

According to senior co-captain Nkato Mokoname, the Camels were the better team on the field.

“We were better. We dominated the game. We didn’t capitalize on our opportunities to score. It was the best game we’ve played all year. We just needed a little more fire,” said Mokoname.

Wednesday’s game against Eastern Connecticut was a big 3–0 win.

Senior co-captain Peter Spear had the first goal 25:11 into the game.

On an assist by Brendan Gilmartin he had a nice header into the net.

“That first goal was a gift,” said Spear. “The goalie was expecting it. It was a textbook goal.”

Spear also had the second goal about ten minutes later. Freshman Matt Raynor passed him the ball and he had another ‘header into the net.

“I didn’t think I was aiming,” commented Spear.

The third goal was scored by freshman Ken Meyer late in the third half.

Surrounded by a crowd in front of the Eastern cage, Meyer shot a rebound off of the goalie into the net.

The Conn offense had a great game with twenty-seven shots on net to Eastern’s ten. Junior Goalie Tom Hudner had four saves.

“We’re coming together as a team,” stated Spear. “We had a lot of heart and patience. Patience is what we have been looking for all season. We have plenty of skill. We just needed patience.”

The Camels finish the season with a record of 11–2–1, and found out earlier today whether they qualified for the NCAA or the ECAC tournament.

Men’s soccer ends season with win and a tie

BY MAYA PERRY
The College Voice

The Connecticut College men’s soccer team finished their regular season with a 3–0 victory over Eastern Connecticut on Thursday and a 1–1 tie at Williams on Saturday. Saturday’s game at Williams was rough for Conn. After a long bus ride they were greeted by cold rain, mud, and an unsatisfying finish to their regular season.

The Purple Cows’ Perry Kaufman scored the first goal six minutes into the game. The Camels, however, were able to tie the match up with a goal by senior Bobby Driscoll in the second half.

Fellow senior Chris Mokoname scored the second goal about ten minutes later. Freshman Matt Raynor passed him the ball and he had another ‘header into the net.

That first goal was a gift,” said Spear. “The goalie was expecting it. It was a textbook goal.”

Spear also had the second goal about ten minutes later. Freshman Matt Raynor passed him the ball and he had another ‘header into the net.

“I didn’t think I was aiming,” commented Spear.

The third goal was scored by freshman Ken Meyer late in the third half.

Surrounded by a crowd in front of the Eastern cage, Meyer shot a rebound off of the goalie into the net.

The Conn offense had a great game with twenty-seven shots on net to Eastern’s ten. Junior Goalie Tom Hudner had four saves.

“We’re coming together as a team,” stated Spear. “We had a lot of heart and patience. Patience is what we have been looking for all season. We have plenty of skill. We just needed patience.”

The Camels finish the season with a record of 11–2–1, and found out earlier today whether they qualified for the NCAA or the ECAC tournament.

Athlete of the Week

This week’s Athlete of the Week award goes to senior CHRISTIAN SCHULZ. SCHULZ scored a try in the first half of the men’s rugby game against WNEC on Saturday. His overpowering presence on the field was a key factor in the 22–5 victory that ended the men’s season at 2–2.