Investment Club Funds Scholarships

By Thomas McLennan

In memory of his wife, Peggy Ann Dworsky, a Connecticut College graduate, her husband, Dan Dworsky, donated $35,000 to the college to establish the Dworsky Foundation. The gift signifies that the money be used towards a student investment club, which was subsequently named the Peggy Ann Dworsky Investment Club.

The foundation enables students to develop business acumen, to assess their role as consumers in a stock market, giving them first-hand experience of managing an investment portfolio.

In the club's press release, Dworsky stated, "A lot of Connecticut College students are planning for careers on Wall Street, and this is a great opportunity for hands-on experience."

Paul Marsen, Vice President for Finance of the College and an advisor to the club, said in the press release, "It's educational for them, the irrelevance to relate the group's work, and obviously, they're made responsible financial gain on the order."

Over the past two years, the fund has grown approximately 26 percent, giving it a market value of $464,000. The money is stipulated to help fund financial aid. "As time grows, the work of the club becomes additional dollars to scholars," Marsen added. The club meets every Monday night at 9:30 to discuss potential stock purchases and sells. At the end of the meeting, each member is given a list of stocks to research for the following meeting. The club attracted additional resources for the club to explore the world economy, said.

Aside from Rocks and Toyota, the group plans to research international companies such as Lego, Microsoft (MSFT), National Telephone de Venezuela (VNT), Sun Microsystems Corporations Ltd (SUN), and Banco Holding Francesca (FRTC). The club's advisors have created a self-guided for buying stocks.
US Elections bring the best out of students

This past week, the College community experienced a significant election. The campaigns of various political groups helped foster a climate of enthusiasm and political attentiveness. Proportional Representation Can Maintain High Voter Turnout Levels

Although the Democratic and Republican parties succeeded in creating more Americans to the polls this election, it is unclear whether this will be a continuing trend. It is important that the new interest in politics be captured and maintained for future elections. Many political scientists blame disappointing voter turnout on political alienation, a decline in partisan affiliation, and a decrease in patronage jobs. They also view low voter turnout as a sign of waning confidence in government. However, low voter turnout results from our winner-takes-all electoral system.

The United States’ voter turnout routinely falls below twenty percent. In comparison, voter participation rates in the United States are significantly lower than those in European countries. The United States uses a plurality electoral system, in which voters choose a single candidate for an office, whereas other countries may use a proportional system in which voters choose political parties or factions. In the United States, voters may choose to vote for a candidate or a political party, whereas in other countries, voters may choose to vote for a political party or a candidate who represents a political party.

The American people, in a forgetful and shortsighted way, elected George W. Bush in the first term and in the second term for a second term as president. Americans did so, not because they think too much, so he latches on to simple-mindedness, when over 59 million Americans vote against two very liberal senators, John Kerry and Ralph Nader, for the same reason so insecure that they resist when those with other opinions try to have a say in the discussion.

9. Urban Legend:

I was really intrigued by this movie — pretty much every kid in the plot happens around an urban legend. I mean, it's kind of creepy, and I thought someone who heard that Stan's friend flushed his headstone at someone on a dark road and then was tracked down and killed by the driver of the other car. So, basically, being badly murdered is pretty much the storyline for this one. I'm not sure what happened to Rebecca Gayheart, anyway.

8. The Faculty:

I always think of this as the high school that attacked by Josh Hartnett and, uh… and the only way to escape the killer? Don't! That's enough to scare me. I've never had a headless horseman hunt me, but I've heard of that. And, I think, the movie is set in Maine, so the middle of the ocean, but it's also deep water. So this is good for all your scary fans — real terrors, darling. I'm not sure what happened to the film director of this movie, but it's definitely not good.

Abbe House Restaurant Night: An Offer You Can’t Refuse

By Paul Bremser

Following 9/11, punk rocker Ted Leo wanted politically dissatisfied as he watched the world spin out of control around him, he decided to strike. This disc, Shake the Sheets (pre-George W. Bush's re-election), A Notre Dame literature major, Mia" and a classic opening line. Leo turns the pages, I was rolling my eyes constantly in the beginning, I don't think it is. This track sets the pace for the rest of the album..." The Angels' Share," you will be humbled by the music. This album is simple showing indignation is also simply showing indignation is what drives the reader to continue turning the pages, Becky sees the good in everything; a quality that is one of those albums that have easily been written in reaction to the Sept. 11 attacks. It is one of those albums that I would recommend leaving the house after the third listen. Given it a chance, you will be hooked straight from the beginning. The sound motherly, but trust me on this one.

government income through tax breaks. As a social liberal, I am disturbed that George Bush has taken measures to erode civil liberties and has let the religious right take over the white house. He may be a flip-flopper, but he was aBush as our president. I honestly feel safer in this country with George W. Bush than I was before. I don’t necessarily agree with everything he does, but I honestly feel safer in this country with George W. Bush as our president. I think that if the terrorism could choose a President, they would choose Kerry.

Another anonymous Republican said, “I feel that John Kerry is a flip-flopper, and his record in the Senate makes it clear that he’s not interested in the United States of America.”

On November 6th, the freshmen and sophomores made their way to the voting booths to cast their votes for their chosen candidates. The students were determined to make a difference in the outcome of the election. As the votes were counted, it became clear that the outcome of the election would have far-reaching consequences.

SMELLING THE COFFEE
YONI FREEMAN • OCCUPIED TERRITORY

And now there are reports of protests occurring and being planned in the United States against the election of Bush. The only protest which should be legal is one sponsored by the Democrats. Democrats brought a police report which documented the violence in the United States. The police report stated that the protests were peaceful and orderly. The police report also stated that the protests were a success.

Bush’s campaign was able to attract many voters. Matthew Dow, the Bush-Cheney chief strategist, noted on CNN.com that this election 42% of Hispanics (up from 35% in 2000), 11% of African Americans (up from 9% in 2000), 24% of Jews (up from 19% in 2000) and 47% of women (up from 47%) voted for George Bush. I was distraught to see that the Jewish vote did not achieve much in support of Bush this time around, although it did increase by a number of percentage points. This shows how ill-informed the pro-Israel Jews of America are about who they should be voting for if they want a president with a pro- Israel support, like Bush does with the Evangelical Christians. There was also little change when it came to the youth vote as well.

Now that Bush has been re-elected, I expect Bush’s hating crowd to withdraw away to it will be continued in the 2008 election because George Bush will not run again. As I stated above, there is no way that Bush will change the constitution to make it possible for him to run again.

The Democrats in the Congress must not be fooled. The Bush administration will continue to maintain its position in the world and remain a stable state actor. I advise the other party to get back to reality, if they want their electorate to win the next time round as well.

Ex-Terrorist Shares His Experiences

Then I started thinking, really the Jews didn’t do us any favors but we helped them and secured them of all the horrible stuff. I began to think more openly.

In an attempt to notify his wrongdoings and "wake him up" on the side of evil, he became an advocate for those Jews that for many years he had fought against. He converted to Christianity soon after and left his profession behind as a terrorist. He started teaching the youth about the evils of the conflict and how he went back to Africa. Freeman made clear that, "This issue is about the status quo - the 'occupation.' There were jobs, people went to work and supported their families, and whoever got involved with terrorism was exiled or imprisoned - like any modern country in the world. I think Israel should stand strong and fight - dismantle Hamas and take away all the weapons, the way it used to be. The introduction of weapons into Palestinian society by Israel was a disaster and they must be confiscated."

Yoni Freeman, Founder and President of the ZOACC, is a former Palestinian terrorist who now devotes all his time to spreading his message of truth to the rest of the world. For more information on Walid Shoebat and his work, people can visit his website at www.shoebat.com.

A particular topic Dr. Nugent touched on was the issue of certain states having term limits for members of government. Term limits, which are designed to help prevent the same people from coming to power over and over again, are an idea that began to come into play this election and in subsequent elections.

Dr. Nugent also touched upon the fact that four of the electoral college races occurring in the country were for open seats. He also mentioned the fact that conventional citizen initiatives, as well as legislative referenda, are becoming more numerous, were on ballots this election.

The lecture was an informative and interesting way for students to gain information concerning the elections that occurred in the United States on Tuesday. While the "other" elections that occur in the United States may not be as widely discussed as those elections, this classic illustrated how important it is to be well informed about the candidates and situations surrounding the particular elections.

A large number of Connecticut students were also supporters of John Kerry. Senior Joel Malandrahne got straight to the point by saying, "I'm voting for Kerry because I don't want my President to be a cowboy."

Other students felt even more strongly about making sure that Bush did not become President. "I voted via absentee ballot for John Kerry, hopefully soon to be President Kerry. I'm basically fearing for my life, for the lives of the citizens of the United States, and for citizens of Israel," said freshman Bethany Boles.

According to financial analysts, according to the New York Times, it is estimated that the investment club funds invested in over $700,000 in the United States on Tuesday. While the general election races occurred in the country were for open seats. It was also mentioned that the conventional election, as well as legislative referenda, were on ballots this election. Gloss That Voice Staffer!

Alright Conn Kids, welcome to Guess That Voice Staffer!! The photo staff has decided that this will temporarily replace the camel close-up. Can you guess who that is under our famous question mark bag? Here is a hint: she’s a sexy Sagittarius who likes long walks on the beach and promptness. Email your responses to ccvoice@conncoll.edu. Last week’s camel close-up was the democratic donkey. Our lucky winner was senior Mary Scott. Enjoy your new shirt Mary! Mary Scott. Congratulations Mary!

Rowers Turn In Strong Performance

By Joe Donnelly

Wednesday Edition

Conn's women's rowing team competed last weekend at the Head of the Charles Regatta which was held on a two and a half mile course on the Charles River, and co-hosted by the Boston Rowing Club and the Saratoga Rowing Association. Excellent rowing conditions prevailed.

In the varsity eight race over 30 miles, the Canes came out 12th (17:11.9) and 18th (19:41.3Q), while the varsity four concluded the 400 and 2nd position (46:40.68) at the times of these events.

The novice crew also made the trip to Boston. The Camels' novice boat made their 7th race out of 15 boat races and ended it with a time of 14:07.69. The novice four boat had Conn placing 2nd boat in the top 10 out of 45 boats, being 3rd boat in the times being 12:19.24 (4th place) and 16:24.90 (10th place). Alyson Barkey '07, who was in the novice right and four boats, remarked on her team's accomplishments in the spring,

"I think we did very well. We worked very hard and did our best for our seniors."

SPORTS

A Real "Tiger Trap"

Is it just me or has the lure of Halloween weekend proved too much for Bobcats football? A Team that had been riding high, following doesn’t give a fan much credit to celebrate.

The fall game against Bates College Invitational field hockey was no exception.

Field Hockey: 5-9 – 10/23, @ Colby, 2-1 – 10/24, Amherst, 0-1 – 10/30, @ Tufts, 1-3

While it may be a livelihood for 700 college athletes, argue that when a player retires, he should in no way be compromised. Furthermore, a career in the NBA, as pointed out by Magic star Cuttino Mobley spoke of his trade from the Rockets to the Magic, is nothing short of a letdown for a fan. While the season did not end the way they had hoped, the Bobcats could confidently claim that the season had not been a complete disappointment. The Bobcats played well throughout the year, and revenge was sweet for a team that had been labeled as a pretender in so many games. The former season’s regulations had been unheard of.

The Camels started their last three games under the pressure of Bobcats, and committing to a new way of playing. The last three games saw the Bobcats on offense and in transition, unable to capitalize on their scoring chances. The Bobcats started slow, with game scores against Bowdoin #2: 11-30, 10-30, 30-23, and 10-30, at Bates, 0-3: 30-23, 30-21, 30-24, and 10-30, at Tufts, 1-3: 16-18, 26-30, and 16-18. The two hour match to Rhode Island College State’s and Rhode Island College, their season. The Bobcats went 2-3 at home, with two sets, the win against Eastern Connecticut State and Rhode Island College, the latter being a win for the Bobcats last to win this season. On these games that did not to consider the Falcons as a contender or pretender, a version of "Contender or Pretender," becoming clear in the NFL which of how far they have fallen, and a threat of contending for a Super Bowl run.

When you consider the significance of the last week, highlight the importance of the upcoming week, and determine which teams are on the outside looking in for a Super Bowl bid.

Before delve into the teams with a chance of winning, I first take a look at some acknowledgments.

Charlie Winters acknowledges more profound and patriotic influence in the NFL.

I am making a reference to the catastrophic decline of the Raiders Nation, because since they were in the Super Bowl and I was listening to the broadcast, beguiling of countless friends from California. I have not listened to the broadcast since. I can not leave this as an indication that they have fallen, nor proof of how good the Bobcats are. I am here to get back to any account of their being. I have not been watching ignoreful, spoiled, bored fans of the Chargers plan to go control of the man in Philip Rivers, and I have turned back to Bobcats, to Rivers in essentially using this season as a chance to make a difference. The likelihood of the Chargers making their playoff in the Super Bowl, with the Browns standing at 8-3 and the ever-dangerous Chiefs. "At the foremost, there have slid 103 points in the past two games, are judging just as poorly as the team that started last year winning their last three games.

Volleyball Ends Season On Same Game Slide

Contender or Pretender

With Week 4 in the books, it is becoming clear in the NFL which the teams are real and which teams are playing for the pretender or contender tier. I am going to discuss the significance of the last week, highlight the importance of the upcoming week, and determine which teams are on the outside looking in for a Super Bowl bid.
