Ex-Terrorist Shares His Experiences College Constituencies Organize Investment Club Funds Scholarships

By Thomas Mobley

In memory of his wife, Peggy

Connolly, a Connecticut College

Conservative, connection with College, donated $50,000 to the club through the Dornam

Foundation. The gift stipulated that the money be used for a student investment club, which was subsequently named the Peggy Connolly

Investment Club.

The foundation enables students to learn about the world of stock market, giving them first-hand experience of managing an investment portfolio. In the club's press release, Donnen said, "A lot of Conservative College students are planning for careers on Wall Street, and this is a great opportunity for hands-on experience.

Paul Marini, Vice President for Finance of the College and an advisor to the club, said in the press release, "It's educational for them, the intent is to please the group's work, obviously, they're made expensive financial gains for the Society.

Over the past two years, the fund has grown approximately 26 percent, giving it a market value near $64,000. The money is stipulated to help fund financial aid. "As the fund grows, the work of the club contributes additional dollars to scholas-ticships each year," Marini added.

The club meets every Monday night at 10:30 to discuss potential stock purchases and sells. At the end of the meeting, each member is given a list of stocks to research for the following meeting. The club serves as a valuable resource for students interested in finance, including parents.

Partly because a number of the club's members are international students, the focus this year is on internationalization, according to Jim Griffin, a junior who joined the group last year. "The club has excellent resources with which to explore the world economy," he said.

Aside from Honda of Toyota, the group plans to research international companies such as

Adobe Corporation, ACN (South American), Telmex (Mexico),

OvC, 1 (Venezuela), and Banco Hispano Americano, Francoeya.

Govt Hosts Panel on 'Other' Elections

By Kayson O'Neill

Iron Word

On Monday November 1 at 4:30 p.m., the Government Department hosted a panel discussion concerning the other elections that were occurring in the United States during the current year.
While the majority of the audience attended to hear the discussion of the presidential elections, the panelists were more interested in discussing corruption in Connecticut's other elections. The panelists were: Professor Shafik (sociology), Professor Freeman politics), and Professor Frasure (politics).

The main points that were discussed were the corruption in the other elections that were occurring in Connecticut, especially the legislative elections. The panelists believed that the legislative elections were more corrupt than the presidential elections because the legislative elections were larger and more visible.

The panelists also discussed the importance of voting in the other elections. They believed that it was important for citizens to vote in all elections, not just the presidential elections. The panelists also discussed the importance of being informed about the candidates and the issues before voting.

The panelists concluded by encour-ging the audience to vote and be informed about the candidates and the issues before voting. They believed that it was important to be active in the democratic process in order to make a difference in the future of the country.

Proportional Representation Can Maintain High Voter Turnout Levels

Although the Democratic and Republican parties succeeded in winning major elections over the past decade, we should not take this as a continuing trend. It is important to note that the election results cannot be attributed entirely to past voter turnout. The outcome of the election remains uncertain, with the possibility of a tie in the electoral college. To address this uncertainty, we propose implementing proportional representation, which would allow for a greater number of parties and candidates to participate in the electoral process. Proportional representation would ensure that all voices are represented in the political system, leading to a more equitable distribution of power.

The voting was so close that the networks had to call it for President Bush right after the polls closed. The election was too close to call in Ohio, and the networks called it differently. CCASA's Annual Diwali Dinner Will be A De-light-ful Show

By Shara Nenoff

Nathan Druck

CCASA (Connecticut College Asian/American Studies Association) has been advertising its 9th annual Diwali Dinner. CCASA members have been spreading the word that tickets sell like hot cakes, encouraging all interested students to reserve their seats as soon as possible. And they were right. The last one was full! And this year's four hundred and thirty tickets sold out in less than two days. Many people who really wanted to attend the show were pleasantly surprised when they discovered that getting on a long waiting list was all they could do.

What made the Connecticut College community so eager to attend Diwali?

"I think people were excited because it's a cultural event that they can participate in. It's a way to learn about another culture and celebrate it with others," said Representative David Owyaug '07, CCASA's public relations representative.

"I really believe that CCASA has, and will continue to, bring cultural events to the entire campus community!"

Dinner tickets—available on a first come, first served basis—will take place on November 13th at 5:30 pm in the Crozier-Williams Center. There will be amazing food, dancing, and, of course, be amazing food, dancing, and music, have been coordinated by Pranay Gupta '06, chair of CCASA. There will, of course, be amazing food, created from Indian cuisine in Middlesex, CT.

It is important to recognize the hard work that goes into being a part of Diwali. Organizers have spent many hours planning and rehearsing cultural events and dances "to make something that everyone can enjoy," said Representative Richard Gere, who has been a part of Diwali for the past six years. "I think it's important to bring cultural events to the entire campus community!"

Many students and staff members look forward to attending Diwali, with its vibrant colors, delicious food, and lively dancing. It is a special event for everyone involved, and it is a great way to celebrate the diversity of the Connecticut College community.

And now there are reports of protests occurring and being planned against the election of Bush. The only protest that should be logi- cal is one, according to the forces behind their party that not because their message was not bold, but because they had an idea from which to attract Americans or a message which informed the real America was fac- ing. Their message was juvenile and anti-American.

Bush's campaign was able to attract many voters. Matthew Dowd, the Bush-Cheney chief strategist, noted on CNN's show that this election 48% of Hispanics (up from 35 in 2000). 12% of African Americans (up from 29 in 2000), 24% of Jews (up from 19 in 2000) and 47% of women (up from 46% in 2000) voted for George Bush. I was distraught in that the Jewish voter did not succumb to much in support of Bush. This time around, it did increase by a number of percentage points. This shows how well-informed the pro-Israel Jews of America are about who they should be voting for if they want a president with a pro- Israel support base, like Bush does with the Evangelical Christians.

There was also little change when it came to the youth vote as well. Note that Bush has been re-elect- ed, I expect this Bush sitting crowd to voice it will be further positives in the 2008 election because George Bush will not run again. It seems none of you think Bush will change the constitution to make it possible for him to run again. The centrists in the Democratic Party would be happy to get rid of them and begin to form a message for adoption in 2008.

Guess That Voice Staffer!

Alright Conn Kids, welcome to Name That Voice Staff Member!!! The photo staff has decided that this will temporarily replace the camel close-up. Can you guess who that is under our famous question mark bag? Here is a hint: she’s a sexy Sagittarius who likes long walks on the beach and promptness. Email your responses to ccvoice@conncoll.edu. Last week’s camel close-up was the democratic donkey. Our lucky winner was senior Mary Scott. Enjoy your new shirt Mary! Mary Scott. Congratulations Mary!

A Real "Tiger Trap"

Is it just me or has the lure of "Tiger Trap" worn off? Well, not exactly. Tiger Woods had a good showing at the Masters, but the hype surrounding him is now a bit more subdued. Tiger Woods is a great golfer, but let's not forget about the other players out there who are also very talented. It's important to remember that golf is a team sport, and there are many other great players who deserve recognition.

Women's Soccer Into NECASC Semifinals

By Peter Sterling

The Connecticut College women's soccer team had an exciting Halloween weekend. On Friday, the team traveled to Medford, Massachusetts to take on Tufts University. The team had a successful first half, with a score of 1-0, and they continued their winning streak, defeating AIC 9-0, 3-1, and 10-1. The final game of the weekend was against the Middlebury College Yellowjackets, where they scored 4 goals. Overall, it was a great weekend for the women's soccer team. Congratulations to all of the players for their hard work and dedication.

Volleyball Ends Season On Seven Game Slide

Contender or Pretender

With Week 8 in the books, it is becoming clear in the NFL, which teams are for real and which need to be written off. The New England Patriots are once again playing well and looking like a contender. The Los Angeles Chargers, on the other hand, are struggling and may be considered a pretender.

Get your tickets for the game, and come cheer on your favorite team!
