Connecticut College
Brown to open 2nd semester

BY Walter Palmer

With the coming of the second semester, we are rapidly advancing toward an unprecedented event in the history of Conn. College — the opening of the bar in Crozier-Williams. Physical plant will work through Christmas in order to have the bar ready when we return for the second semester. Co-chairman of the bar committee, Sophia Hatzes, explains that in accordance with the school's university permit, the bar will only serve "beer, grog, hard cider and soft drinks." Also the bar will only be open to Conn. College students and their guests, and I.D.'s must be presented at the door.

Located in the old student lounge in Cro., at this stage the bar somewhat resembles the highway construction in New London. However, upon completion, it will comprise a lowered entrance, cozy ceiling, wood paneling, a brick linoleum floor (undoubtedly, the committee felt rugs would not be practical for a beer joint), a series of booths along the far wall, various round tables seating four, and a stereo-system. The bar will offer domestic beer on tap or imported beer in bottles. Also, pitchers will be sold. The committee assured me that beer will be sold at the cheapest price possible. The capacity of the bar is eight people.

The tentative hours are: Tues., Thurs. 12 noon-1 p.m. and 4:30-10 p.m.; Fri. 3 p.m.-10 p.m.; Sat. 1 p.m.-2 a.m.; and Sun. 11 a.m.-9 p.m. The bar will be closed Sunday evening and all day Monday.

The school will hire one per- mittee from Residence to assume general responsibility for the bar. In addition, there are openings for three student bartenders and five student waitresses (three afternoon and two night). Anyone interested should apply through the placement office in Crozier-Williams.

A new student lounge will be located on the second floor of Cro. The Director of Residence, Miss Voorhees is furnishing the lounge with new furniture and rugs. The ping-pong tables will be moved into this area, and the pool tables are in the old Pundit office.

Lastly, I wish to point out that the members of the bar committee have done an extensive amount of organizing and planning on this project. We should all appreciate their efforts. In fact, a toast might be appropriate.

Four members of the class of 1974 have been nominated for Thomas J. Watson Fellowships, according to Dean P. Cobb's office. There are Mary F. Azevedo, who plans to study multinational corporations, Karen L. Fales, who is interested in inferential alternatives to traditional methods of education, Ellen Lipp, who plans to study the linguistic environment in Estonia, U.S.S.R., and Thomas A. Sheridan, whose interest is organized labor and workers' civic involvement in West Germany and Norway. The winners will be announced some time this week.

The Watson Fellowship program is administered by the Thomas J. Watson Foundation in cooperation with thirty-five colleges and universities throughout the country. The Watson Fellowship provides a grant of $7,000 ($9,500 if the student is married and will be supporting a spouse while abroad) for a year of independent study abroad. Seventy students are awarded fellowships; they are chosen from the one hundred forty nominees provided by the member institutions.

The nominees from Connecticut College are chosen by a campus committee, according to Dean Cobb, who chairs the committee. The three other faculty members of the committee are Mr. Philip Goldberg, Mr. R. Francis Johnson, and Mr. Peter Seng. Two seniors, Miss Anita DeFranz and Mr. Karl Chustaffers, also serve on the committee.

Each candidate for nomination was interviewed by the committee and was asked to submit a 500-word statement outlining his proposed project. Ballots were cast, and the four students with the highest scores became the Connecticut College nominees. Their names were then sent to the Watson Foundation office in Providence, Rhode Island, for final consideration.

Three members of the class of 1973 are studying abroad this year as Watson Fellows. They are Gita C. Merkevicius, who is in Lithuania, Margaret B. Shepard, studying in New Zealand, and Jean Wong, who as granted permission to enter the People's Republic of China. Further information for juniors interested will soon be available from Dean Cobb.

Three Watson Fellows from the class of 1974 have been nominated for Watson Fellowships.

College council concludes Pundit controversy

by Janice Pope

On Thursday October 18th, College Council met to discuss and solve the charges brought against Pundit. The mood of the meeting was decidedly different from that of the previous meeting and College Council was able to come to a decision on the issue. President Laurie Lesser began by reading Pundit's answers to charges numbers 1-4 against the Constitution. It was opinion of College Council that both the first four charges and the Pundit's answers to these charges were valid. Both statements reflected different points of interpretation of the newspaper's Constitution.

Throughout College Council's discussion on these points it was suggested that Pundit should amend their Constitution. They have not. It was also suggested that Pundit clarify their Constitution where it is concerned with votes of the co-editors. Both statements were equally valid. Both charges numbers 5 and 6 and Pundit's response to this charge that Pundit keep more adequate records on file of these weekly meetings.

In response to charge number 7, which was concerned with the use of AP material, Pundit suggested that AP could be used if the paper itself. College Council severely questioned this statement suggesting the use of AP material as a serious risk. It was strongly suggested that this practice be discontinued.

College Council determined that charge number 8 was merely personal speculation but it was suggested in any case that communication on campus should be investigated and improved.

The immediate result of College Council's meeting was the formation of a subcommittee to investigate Pundit's Constitution. This committee has presented recommendations for modification to College Council. This subcommittee has also written a report to the Board of Trustees.

The Committee continues to welcome the names of potential candidates for President. The next meeting of the Subcommittee will be set for the near future and the process of moving candidates into the AI category for serious consideration will begin.

Select Ctte. begins Presidential review

A meeting of the Subcommittee of the Selection Committee met on October 24th in New Haven with Chairman W.E.S. Griswold Jr., president.

The Committee reviewed the biographies and credentials of the 171 persons whose names have been submitted to the Committee for consideration as candidates for the position of President of the College.

The Committee recommended the biographies and credentials of the five candidates into the AI category. These five candidates are:

- Miss Eastburn
- Mr. Philip Goldberg
- Mr. Karl Chustaffers
- Miss Voorhees
- Mr. Philip Goldberg

These five candidates are being considered for future consideration by the Selection Committee. The Committee will be considering their qualifications and the overall needs of the College in making a final decision on the next President of the College.

Impeachment, Now More Than Ever

In conjunction with student newspapers across the country, the Amherst STUDENT is circulating an editorial calling for the impeachment of Richard Nixon. Many papers have called or will call for impeachment themselves, but it is equally important that these individual statements be reinforced and amplified by one national statement of student sentiment.

We ask that your newspaper endorse and print this editorial. As part of the nationwide AMHERST TAP, the Wesleyan ARGUS, the Duke CHRONICLE, and the Vassar MISCELLANY have endorsed the editorial. And twelve more newspapers, including the Harvard CRIMSON, the Yale DAILY NEWS, the DAILY PRINCETONIAN, the Wisconsin DAILY CARDINAL, the STANFORD DAILY, the University of Maryland DIAMOND BACK, and the Minnesota DAILY have indicated their probable approval. The list will no doubt expand over the next few days. Copies of this editorial have already been sent to over 120 schools.

If this editorial is to have its intended effect, it must reach Washington directly through national and local media and by circulation to members of Congress. But before this can take place, it needs widespread support. To maximize the impact of this action, this support must be forthcoming as swiftly as possible.

Constitutional government in the United States may have suspended at 8:00 p.m., Saturday, October 20. Richardson Nixon now rules by fiat and force. He is no longer a legitimate leader.

With callous disregard for his oath of office and the intent of Congress and the Judiciary, the President first refused to abide by a court order to produce Watergate documents. His later turnarounds defused the immediate confrontation but can not obscure his repeated abuses of power. He then forced the resignation of the Attorney General and the Statesman, and an Special Prosecutor when they refused to condone his conduct.

Moreover, the President abolished the office of Special Prosecutor and dispatched the FBI to seal off its records. These decisive and unprecedented actions represent the tactics of a military coup. They are an anathema to a rational democratic policy.

Even before these steps were taken, public confidence in the Nixon Administration's ability to govern was at one of its all-time lows. Now this support will deteriorate still further. The mandate of 1972 has been buried in a committee of congressional investigation. The nomination system couldn't be fairer or more democratic. Nixon continues to refuse to abide by a court order to produce Watergate documents. His later turnarounds defused the immediate confrontation but can not obscure his repeated abuses of power. He then forced the resignation of the Attorney General and the Statesman of the Special Prosecutor when they refused to condone his conduct.

Moreover, the President abolished the office of Special Prosecutor and dispatched the FBI to seal off its records. These decisive and unprecedented actions represent the tactics of a military coup. They are an anathema to a rational democratic policy.

Get It Over With

Last week the Junior Class replacement to the Judiciary Board was finally elected. It took three elections to reach the two-thirds quorum required and achieve this feat, and the final election barely eked out a quorum by two votes. Over forty per cent of those students voting abstained, and the election was decided by a single vote.

These absurd facts demonstrate that either new nomination and election processes must be created or that students are just not interested in their student government. If this editorial is to have its intended effect, it must reach Washington directly through national and local media and by circulation to members of Congress.

The nomination system could not be fairer or easier; anyone can nominate himself, no signatures necessary except for student-faculty committees. Voting in the dorms through ballots received from dorm representatives is the most efficient way to reach everyone, except when the reps get tired of handing out ballots for the second and third time and decide not to bother with it at all.

If the nomination and election processes are good and workable, then it must be that students aren't really interested in their student government.

If the student plans to read further for a lecture or work, she must explain how much Conn is really concerned for the welfare of the student body here at Connecticut College.

To the Editor:

I am addressing myself to those persons who are responsible for the welfare of the student body here at Connecticut College.

On October 24, 1973, I was in the Harris Refectory eating breakfast. I had gotten some milk and poured it into my coffee. A woman I believe named Mrs. Krissis, one of the dieticians, came over explaining that I could not take the juice and milk because "we do not allow it." I then held them back, explained to her, was told that I would come from, I pointed out to her about the "sanitary conditions." Tipped in the jars and emptied them and I would hope that the juice and milk away, although among this canning process I never realized where the administration does and if they are really feeding us food that is safe.

The point I am making is this. To the Editor:

First of all, over the last two years, we have been made aware of how much Conn is really concerned for the students. The various under-handed ways that the Administration has dealt with the minority students show no concern for us. But, it seems that Conn is really concerned about little or no concern for the majority of students. It really gives me something to think about when considering whether to re-enroll this year to tell prospective students about Conn College.

I am a scholarship student and since the Administration has cut back possible working hours for us, I have had to understand the logic of when there are non-scholarship students paying for more than five times the price of tuition, who according to the Federal Government do not need the extra money, I cannot afford to buy orange juice and milk on my own as the dietician suggested. If I have a cold and since orange juice is rich in vitamin C and I am not able to get everything else going to this school has a right to have it.

We pay about $100 a year to come here and I am afraid that to anyone asking about Conn., I will have to say that I am not worth the time. After all, I am not in the administration and know what the student body feels. I am sure my words will go unheeded and that I believe those people who took the time to read what I have written.

PUNDIT
Last Wednesday night, October 24, students of Trinity College in Hartford held an all-college meeting at which 400 assembled students called for Nixon's impeachment. Three resolutions were unanimously passed: the first said, "It is resolved that the House of Representatives impeach the President of the United States, Richard Milhous Nixon." Another resolution supported that Representative Carl Albert, Speaker of the House, serve as an interim president until a general election could be held.

The third resolution passed asked that Judge John Sirica appoint another special prosecutor who would continue investigation of the Watergate case. Spokesmen both for and against impeachment were heard.

The all-college meeting and the October 21 spontaneous burning proximately fifteen minutes later, giving the hoodlums plenty of time to escape with the booty. Mr. O'Grady had apparently been able to report such incidents as quickly as possible to the Security Office.

In the case of the Watergate investigation, it is a good chance that the crooks would have been apprehended and two students would not have had a car if the machine had been reported promptly. The same night that these two bikes were taken, a third one was in the same shell we say — attacked by a bicycle thief. At 2:10 A.M. he was proceeding toward the infirmary when he noticed a man moving in the direction of Williams Street and carrying the wheel of a bicycle. Upon hearing the guard's order of "Halt," the man whisked and threw the wheel of the bike. He then ran to Williams Street and jumped into a car manned by at least one person, which had apparently been waiting for him. In view of the two bikes which had been stolen several nights earlier, it seems safe to conclude that criminals from off-campus are raiding our campus for kicks. Students with bicycles should use all possible measures to insure that their bikes will not be removed.

This column is the first in a series devoted to political commentary. The authors are not affiliated with any established party.

In the face of corruption, injustice, ecological crises, and the threat of nuclear war, most Americans still support a system within which they are dissatisfied, mistakenly assuming there is no other answer. Why is this?

Countries and their companion cultures are often propelled along and held inert (especially by economic and political crises) by a set of powerful, thoroughly propagated myths. Although these range from religious dogmas to national folklore, it is the political myths which will be considered in this and subsequent articles.

Politically, these myths often act to glorify the government’s just policies and to euphemize and minimize those national stands or actions which are inhumane, unjustified or misjudged. They extend toward foreign cultures and political opposition, both foreign and domestic. The other blatant evidence of this was shown during President Nixon’s press conference last week, when asked whether implications of his involvement in the Watergate crime were ever covered up, he charged his credibility with the Soviet Union, the President retorted that he knew "how they work, how they have worked." He has watered the case.

The implications of this assertion need not be enumerated. This statement was effective only because one of the most basic myths of the past 50 years has been, and still is, extremely credible. This is the widespread indoctrination that economic system is inherently "sound," that making the above statement, Nixon was glorifying his fight against communism. When he justified his immoral and unjust policy toward Vietnam.

The intellectually repressive nature of the Soviet Union is undeniable, but the United States is guilty of cultural repression as well. It has always been a characteristic of a totalitarian system to bar its citizens with unanalyzed and unfulfilled total corruption of the communist system, free to read communist "propaganda" and supposedly make their own judgments, the United States is the alter-national political systems. But this is a relatively insignificant privilege in the face of mass economic, political, and cultural opposition to even the mention of socialism or communism, let alone acceptance of either. Remember the old "Better dead than Red!"

Anti-communist prejudice in the U.S. demonstrates the same unexamined emotionalism as any prejudice—racist, ethnic, or religious.

Americans have been directed to look at historical "communism" out of context, and to deny the policies of the U.S.S.R. They can see only the tyranny of Stalinism, the war-mongering rhetoric of Hitler, or the Kruschev, in the same context as overt repression occurring under the present regime. They fail to grasp the ideology from which, in the theory and practice, measured against historical cause and effect, and do not realize Soviet communism's role in the distortion of the original aims of socialist theory.

This failure of the ideal socialist state to be realized gives rise to more opposition. People adopt the attitude that in theory communism is "all right" but in practice "it just won't work". After thorough comparison of capitalist "democratic" systems and the system which produced Watergate, one might well come to the same conclusion. A closer examination of communist philosophy would reveal in its beliefs a closer resemblance to the same ideology that the United States has found in the practice of capitalism.

This column will bear out these statements in the coming weeks. Even if readers do not conclude a final acceptance of this alter-national political system, it is their duty as rational human beings to at least give the opposition a fair hearing.

The authors of this column are members of the Connecticut College group of the SDS. Donna Diamond is a European History major, and Nina George is majoring in Philosophy and History.

A positive alternative to the red meat and bland steak dinners that can be found at Cabilla's Natives Room, the new international gourmet restaurant at 114 4th Street offers a mouth-watering selection of food from 56 nations. To facilitate the eating experience of the diners, only 6 countries and 7 soccials called "Bob's Thing" appear on the menu, and this is revised weekly. If you desire a dish which does not appear, however, Bob will gladly prepare it.

The dinner menu which we presented listed 6 countries including Ros en Compilox from Spain, Chicken en Vienne from Germany and Torndades of beef from France. These entries range from $4.95 to $7.95. Each is served with a salad with house dressing and a baked potato with (optional) sour cream. In the near future, 10 varieties of potatoes will be available.

The College Council would like to thank all these members of the Community who have shown a sincere interest in the business that was before the Council the past two weeks. We appreciate the frank and open discussions that we were able to have with concerned individuals and groups.

In accordance with our interpretation of our duties and responsibilities the Council has chosen to make the following recommendations to the Pundit.

1. It is the Council's belief that recommendations will aid the newspaper in complying with its laws and regulations as outlined in the College Constitution. Such recommendations will be accepted by the Council.

2. We feel that the recommendations will bring about satisfactory conclusion to the charges brought against the Pundit so that the paper can continue its operations uninterrupted.

In reference to Article 4i of the Pundit Constitution, Charge 7:

The College Council urges the use of Polis rather than Petitions. The former is not only as effective, but also saves money!

Since the new course evaluation book project began over a month ago, little has been heard about their progress. Forms were passed out to Dormitory Representatives for distribution to students. Faculty forms were distributed and since then the course evaluation committee has been waiting for the results.

So far few have been evident. The faculty have been most responsive despite the fact that their forms are longer and more difficult to fill out. It is the students who have been least cooperative. In a Pundit interview, Monica Rottulb, co-chairman of the project felt that it was rather ironic that now that the faculty were participating the students had decided not to. She added that they had received less than a 50 per cent response from the students in a large majority of the courses. This is not a large enough percentage to give an accurate description.

The original procedure for getting the forms filled out was for the dorm reps to go from door to door and wait for the individual to fill them out. However, some students objected to filling them out under pressure or while being watched. Though forms were supposed to be put under the dorm reps door, few showed up. After appealing to House Presidents at Student Assembly, the dorm reps were urged to turn their forms in and to have them approved by the Editorial Board. All Editorial Board members, which, due to unforeseen circumstances, are not approved by 3-5 of the Editorial Board should appear in column form.

In reference to Article 4a of the PUNDIT Constitution, Charge 6: Editorial Board meetings should be publicized campus-wide either through the use of the Campus Communicator or in the masthead of the PUNDIT itself, so that interested members of the campus community may attend.

In reference to Article 4i of the PUNDIT Constitution, Charge 7:

The College Council urges the appointment of a Recording Secretary to comply with Article 4i of the Constitution which calls for the recording of all major actions. The Recording Secretary should keep minutes of Editorial Board meetings, attendance, and the record of all votes taken.

In reference to Charge 8:

Pundit Allegedly plagiarized from the AP news service, in regard to the article entitled "Agnew Resigns" with the byline "By Richard Pyke", the College Council encourages the PUNDIT to contact either Mr. Ambrose Dudy or Attorney Frank McGuire as to the legality of such action.

The College Council further urges that such outside services not be used in the future but rather students report on such issues.

FURTHER SUGGESTIONS:

POLLS VS. PETITIONS: In order to avoid added expense, the College Council urges the use of Polis rather than Petitions. The former is not only as effective, but also saves money!
Two English Girls visit France

I could put up with Muriel vomiting in the bathroom (which was unnecessary in itself) but that mastodont snort on the bed when Muriel took the plunge was a bit much. She not only lost her virginity but probably three-quarters of her blood supply. I couldn’t see the meaning behind that parting, the “going of separate ways” in canoes when Anne and Claude left their comfy country cabin. I also wish Jean-Pierre Landard (Claude) could have had a different expression on his face than that of a little boy who just wet his bed and was afraid his mother would find out. Despite the fact that Claude improves his love-making technique as he moves from one sister to another, his initial encounter with Anne (when he touches her breast with an arm as stiff as a ramrod) looks as if he’s teaching her to pledge allegiance to the flag rather than trying to seduce her.

In a film so utterly pointless and comical when allegiance to the flag rather than intelligence of the audience. It’s ludicrous as to insult the in-

Student -Alumni relations crux of Alumni weekend

By Bill Looney

Focusing on a number of broad-based issues deemed “important for the continued viability of alumni involvement in college affairs, programs and policies,” the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the Connecticut College Alumni Council was held on campus last weekend. Over 105 alumni from eighteen states attended, participating in refresher workshops dealing with the six major areas graduates serve their alma mater: annual giving, student-alumni relations, career advising, admissions assistance, club and class organizations and class reunions. Activities began with registration and dinner with Mr. Shain as guest speaker on Friday evening and ended with morning worship on Sunday. “Clearly, the focus was on student-alumni relations,” remarked Ms. Louise Andersen, alumni director.” Members were especially in-

Winthrop scholars elected

Mark Lasner ’74 has earned a unique niche in college history. He is the first man to be named a Winthrop Scholar and elected to Phi Beta Kappa at the end of his junior year.

The senior American Studies major from Westport, Conn., transferred here as a sophomore from Bennington College. He is one of nine new Winthrop Scholars, the largest group ever elected to Delta of Connecticut chapter of P.B.K.

The new member-designates are: Jane Arabian of Newton, Mass., psychology; Amy Cohen, White Plains, N.Y., American Studies; Annemarie Garvey, New London, child development and psychology; Pamela Gleason, Wareham, Mass., zoology; Ellen Leich, Rutson, La., studio art; Dianne Garvey, Vernon, Conn., art history; Shannon Stock, West Hartford, Conn., economics and physics; and Rebecca Wholley, Bradford, Mass., mathematics.
The 1973-74 Student Organization Budgets appear in this week's edition of the Pundit in order that questions and comments can be heard before the final allocations are approved by the College Council this Thursday. The figures printed represent the requests made by the many student organizations as well as the Council's Finance Sub-Committee's recommendations.

Many organizations have been asked to operate with less funds this year than requested because of the limited funds available and the increased number of student organizations. The Student Government Association Budget has remained constant ever since the College found it necessary in 1971 to reduce the association's funding from $25.00 to $22.50 per student. The Council is presently looking into this economic problem which has forced the Sub-Committee this year to make very critical judgments as to what were reasonable or unreasonable requests.

The Sub-Committee also chose to establish a new Special Events fund. This fund has been created for the purpose of supporting major student activities which require substantial financial backing. It is hoped that the fund will relieve some of the burdens the organizations are facing by lending money for many of the special events being planned. Applications for using this money will soon be on file in the Dean of Student Activities Office. As applications are submitted throughout the year the Council will review and act upon the loan requests.

Further questions or comments concerning the 1973-74 budget or the Special Events fund should be directed to the College Council. Thank you for your cooperation.

Aching back?
Try exercising, NCS.
By Eric McKenzie

On a blustery Saturday afternoon around four o'clock Senator Lowell Weicker of Watergate fame delivered a brief address to a multifarious crowd of New London dignitaries, and volunteers at the Drop-In Learning Center and smartly appalled youngsters. The occasion for his appearance was a gala Open House sponsored by the Drop-In Learning Center, a community service agency active since 1970.

In his comments to the audience he decried on the positive contributions of the Center to the community. The efforts of all the volunteers, in his words, "exhibits the best of the country." He elaborated by remarking that we ought to turn from "avoiding and hurting each other" and turn to "working together for the community." He considered the Center was worthwhile in real terms than any mere symbolic flag waving. It showed that people were still able to "make their history and not rely on the history made by others."

Among the spectators were representatives of the Women's Political Caucus from Connecticut College led by Lynn Cole and Bernie Zelitch. Their purpose was to oppose Senator Weicker's anti-abortion stand and hand out leaflets to members of the audience. According to Ms. Cole, the Women's Political Caucus contends that because there is no totally safe contraceptive, women must have the right to determine whether or not they wish to terminate a pregnancy.

Because of the number of people who crowded into the Center after the Senator's speech, Ms. Cole was unable to directly question the Senator about this issue.

Fortunately I had the opportunity to pose a question to Senator Weicker as he walked back to his car after the festivities. As to the impeachment possibility, he said that, like Senator Ribicoff, he would refrain from making any judgment on the case before the House of Representatives had voted to issue writ of impeachment against President Nixon. Personally he would prefer not to stand in judgment of the President should the Senate have to act. He would take the position he did this summer toward Mr. Stans and Mr. Colson with whom he had had conflicts which would tend to prejudice his questioning of them.

His response to the pro abortion sentiment was that at this point, the states had been handling the issue satisfactorily. There was little discussion of abortion legislation on the floor of the Senate. He had received very little mail about this issue from either side and did not foresee any legislation appearing on the Senate floor in the near future.

To the editor:

Orphaned children are left in the aftermath of all major natural catastrophes and in the debris of the awful destruction of modern wars. The long, intense conflict in Vietnam and the delicate association of our troops with the Vietnamese left thousands of orphans of American parenthood.

Many veterans brought their children home; others, separated by war and military fiat, have sought their children in vain. Existence of many of the children is unknown to their fathers; some fathers simply care not. The children remain; orphaned by death, abandoned or with mothers only and no means of survival. From the roads, jungles the litter of obliterated villages and the trash piles of ruined cities, a pitiful few have been taken into over-crowded orphanages, fostered, or joyfully adopted.

The Vietnamese-American Children's Fund, Inc., is a publicly supported, non-profit organization contracted with the Vietnamese Ministry of Social Welfare to gather and to care for these children. We are to feed, medicate, guide and provide them with an education in order that they can become a positive force in the world's future rather than a part of the eternal wreckage of war.

The professional help in the VACF program is in Vietnam, caring for the children we have already gathered. In the United States we are a group of citizens having no political, religious or racial differences in the name of humanity.

Billy nipped in the Bud

By Maxine Olderman

What can you say about a 17-year-old boy who died? That he was handsome, that he was kind, that he loved by everyone who met him and that he was too beautiful to last.

The boy of course is Melville's Billy Budd and the tragic hero of Peter Ustinov's film. The film was produced, directed and co-written by Ustinov and featured Terence Stamp as Billy, Robert Ryan as Claggart, Melvyn Douglas as Dassner and David McCallum as one of the ship's junior officers. Shining above this competent list of actors is the indomitable Mr. Ustinov as the Captain.

"Billy Buddy" can be seen as a virtuoso tour-de-force of realism and mood. Billy is fully lifed aboard ship and the interactions of a tight society of seamen was captured to perfection. In fact, there were several instances when I was tempted to reach for a Dramamine, those ocean swells and innocent and thus enhances was himself.

Melville intended the characters of Billy and Claggart to clash in an allegorical terms, not the living embodiments of good and evil. We sense that Ustinov started the film with the concept of allegory in mind. Billy is fully lifed in white, Claggart in a tight fitting black uniform. However as the film progresses Ustinov are as inhuman as Claggart in his and was finally a highly un

There are many lines of dialogue which are not only an integral part of the story, but which stand on their own as lines charged with poetry and eloquence. Dassner, the prophet of the ship revealing Greek antecedents like Tainan speaks in simple haunfing phrases which belie an inner wisdom which his shipmates do not share. When Dassner is brought before the officers of the ship to speak on Billy's behalf she describes Claggart's antagonism to Billy by saying, "He bore malice towards a grace he could not hide." As the film closes, the camera backs away to give us the world apart from his fellow men and as much as he is loved by his peers he is not truly one of them. That is evidenced in the scene when Billy stammers during a questioning by the crew of the Avenger and an unknown natural truth falls over the men. The stammer suggests something and it gives and enhances Billy's virtuousness. Certain comparisons to Christ are possible. Melville gave his life to be able to restore justice and kindness in a world (the sea) that destroy a thing built in a way or not we choose to make the comparison Billy still emerges as someone not of this world. As the Captain says to him after the decision to execute him has been made, "You, in your goodness, are the inhuman as Claggart in his evil.

The storm

Protagonists stand up and proclaim that Nature is calling and beats it on the very enthusiastic crowd present at the event, therefore, having to enter into debate about the Law of Nature. And oh, what a debate it was. Now I back home; yes, home, with the three-day old dirty socks carpeting the floor and that three inches thick of mungoes blanketing my bed, the worn-out felt-tip pens rolling on the floor to the Yes and Non's togethers. After having procrastinated more around campus, but by initiation, mind you, I thought I'd do myself—oh, one of those rarer-than-rarer occasions—as I hummed the first cigarette to be bummed by me off a fellow freshman who seemed to be in that common condition known as Jockitus. Well, on about the world I'm a big idea and I went on about the table so I could get a better look at what this disease had to offer. I roll my cigarettes, but it gets a little inconvenient carrying a can of tobacco around in your back pocket. And be the world's worst roller, too. I have great trouble with "Bambu," naturally, because of the uncorrected status paper for reasons which comprise and illustrate my life's philosophy: You can lick anything that you can bite.

...So he discussed more about the soccer team which, of course, is important. I thought though one of the girls of the CoffeeSpoon discussion of Billy Bud was led by Mr. Baird and was asking vaguely specific references to phrases and meanings in Melville which did not appear in the film. I believe however that in the course of the scholarly analysis of the original text, Mr. Baird and the participants of the CoffeeSpoon agreed that Ustinov's "Billy Budd" held true to Billy's spirit and was finally a highly unforgettable film.
Study abroad offers many alternatives

by Sherry L. Alpert

This is the second of a two-part article.

Connecticut College sponsors an exchange program with Westminster College in Oxfordshire, England. Under the auspices of the Child Development and Education Department, this program provides for an exchange of seven students from each of the two schools for the fall semester.

Mrs. Donna Hetzel of the Child Development Department and Mr. John Cole of Westminster College pioneered the program which began in 1972-73. Last year five students at Connecticut College participated. Now it is an equal exchange from both colleges.

Seven students from Westminster College are currently studying on campus. Under the supervision of Mrs. Hetzel, and each of them is practice teaching; five at the college nursery school, two at elementary schools, and one at the junior high school in New London.

The major objective of the Westminster Program, in addition to its cultural advantages, is to allow the student to teach in a different education system and environment. At Westminster College he has the opportunity to practice teach at a progressive primary school. His coursework also includes an independent study, a course in art and design, and an environmental study which includes field trips to various historical sites in the area long with British history, architecture, and culture. All students enrolled in the Westminster Program have taken children's literature, and have expressed an interest in teaching and classroom practice.

While generally pleased with the program last year, Debbie Raines felt it rather demanding. "The Westminster Program can be a great experience if you're really wanting to teach," she said. "Westminster is a teacher training college, and the students there go out on teaching practice every year for at least six weeks."

You also have the pleasure of arising at 7 a.m. to ride a bus for an hour to reach our school. And you meet 300 people on your feet all day, but if you're lucky (when you arrive home at 5 p.m.) you have leisures to prepare for the following school. Great care is taken to place Connecticut College students in the best of the 'open classroom' primary schools, and working in this kind of environment was invaluable."

A new program with the London School of Economics is planned for January, 1974, focusing on the study of the European Community, Market, History, government, and economics, and sociology majors may participate. The students will study in London until the last three weeks, when they travel to the University of Freiburg for lectures by German professors. In this way they can be exposed to a point of view beyond the British one and integrate the experiences of studying in the two countries. Dean Johnson, Chairman of the Committee on Study Abroad, expressed hope that the program will be expanded to a year.

Besides these Connecticut College-sponsored programs, there are many others for studying in the British Isles. A year at the University of Edinburgh was a welcome change for Ann Cohen. She explained, "It was a great chance to live within a community and partake of a slower pace of life . . . people have so much less and enjoy it so much more. It is amazing how much more one can learn in a less pressured atmosphere."

Frun Axelson, who spent her spring semester at the University of London through the Beaver College Program, described it as "myriad of experiences, each surpassing the previous one . . . delicious food and historical significance of each place I visited . . . sufficient time to go beyond the "tourist" attractions and adapt to the British way of life . . . wonderful opportunities for travelling, meeting people, enriching one's self.

Under the auspices of the University of Oxford, Linda Amato spent last year in Florence, Italy. "I can honestly say I would never have written the best year of my life," she asserted. "Being in Italy was great, and Florence is the most beautiful city in Italy. I never regret it. In spite of mail strikes and the annoying Italian men, I would recommend a year in Florence to everyone."

A fall term in Rome, through Trinity College, was the best thing I've ever done," Nancy McNally said. "It was an ideal opportunity to do several things which I felt were quite different. The first term is a different culture for an extended period, travel and yet maintain a 'home base,' government continues without interruption for four years of college education."

The Other Side of the Globe

Connecticut College students have educational opportunities to study on the other side of the globe as well. In 1972 Connecticut College sponsored the Associated Kyoto Program, an informal classroom approach to a year's study in Japan. Students at Connecticut College and Doshisha University in Kyoto, Japan, have continued to participate this year.

Mr. Thomas Havens of the Asian Studies Department, Director of the Program, emphasized the cultural opportunities offered by Kyoto. This modern city, formerly the capital of Japan for one thousand years, has about 1600 Buddhist temples, 600 Shinto shrines, many galleries, factories, and military bases. Students are housed with Japanese families in the area. The resident director (chosen from among the five sponsoring American colleges) stays at the University throughout the year.

Each of the five colleges may send four students to the Kyoto Program. Lissa McCullar and Eugene Kimakawa are the only Connecticut College students participating this year. The program fee includes round-trip transportation from the West Coast. Interested students should contact Mr. Havens at 447-4011.

Mr. Havens is most enthusiastic about the program. "The Japan experience not only broadens them (students) individually, but also promotes an awareness of international questions among a generation obligated to deal with multilateral issues and forces. It offers a degree of breadth and first-hand exposure rarely possible at the field research level."

He added, "Study programs in Japan offer a priceless first immersion in the culture at an important point when young people take stock of their career interests and often develop the motivation to pursue advanced degree programs. When the time comes to consider what a career involving Japan might be like, there is no substitute for having been in Japan in person to find out."

Because of surging diplomatic relations, all undergraduate programs for American students in India have been suspended indefinitely.

New Asia College in Hong Kong sponsors a one-year exchange with Connecticut College. Established two years ago, this program offers liberal arts courses in Chinese and is geared for Chinese majors. Students may also apply to Taiwan University through Stanford or to the National Normal University in Taiwan. Two Connecticut students have already participated in the New Asia College program.

As part of the Exchange, New Asia College has sent a grantees to Connecticut College this semester. She is currently working as a teaching assistant in the Chinese Department and lives in Kowloon House as a resident in the Chinese corridor.

The Experiment in International Living offers students opportunities in countries throughout the world, including South America and Africa. However, the Experiment is not accredited, and students who wish to pursue individual study projects must receive prior approval by Connecticut College.

The alternatives for foreign study have grown significantly over the past two years. Students not only have a wider range of their fields of study but also an almost unlimited choice of locale. In many cases, further more, they may leave for the senior rather than the junior year, and for either one or two semesters.

Dean Johnson affirmed that the Committee on Study Abroad is continually looking for new and better programs to offer the students at Connecticut College.

Westminster Program Takes off

By Eleanor Dein

Seven students from Connecticut College are involved in the Westminster Exchange program this semester. They are attending the Westminster College exchange program with emphasis in the child development department.

The seven students include Patty Moak, ’75, Jane Zelkey, ’74, Martha Lee Vinnedge, ’75, Faith Spencer, ’74, Miss Fenner, ’74, Sarah Blum, ’74, and Amy Busman, ’75.

Their weekly activities, until November 5, consists of two days' work in Art and Design, which includes printing, drawing, color, tile design, woodworking, and photography. One day is divided between visits to primary schools to observe how "open plan" an informal classroom functions and seminars with Mrs. Donna Hetzel of the child development department and Mr. John Cole, Senior Advisor to Oxfordshire schools. Another day is spent doing researches on Environmental Studies which involve travelling to castles, cathedrals, and historical sites to develop an understanding of British history and culture.

After November 5, each of the seven will practice teaching for six weeks in a primary school with either infants, children, aged five to seven, or juniors aged eight to eleven.

During their free time, what little there was, the students have had the opportunity to travel as far as Wales and Scotland.

In addition to these activities, they have observed that the weather is "freezing" and that "English" English is very different from "American" English. They will return to Connecticut College for the second semester.

Learned House has sundae party

By Pam Greenhalgh

On Tuesday, October 16, the Learned House volunteers held a Sundae Party for 25 of the children from the drop-in center. Promptly at 3:30, the kids pored out of cars and into Cro's alleys and immediately began to devour the ice cream and punch. A typical sundae consisted of two or three scoops of ice cream smothered with chocolate, butterscotch, or marshmallow sauce, and topped with jimmies and cherries. Still hungry? The kids obviously were. Some came back for seconds and thirds. After they had had enough sundaes and punch, the kids went bowling at Cro's alleys. They had a great time and some proved to be fairly expert bowlers. One little boy even got a strike! Later, the kids got a general tour of the campus before going home. It was an enjoyable and hectic afternoon for both the volunteers and the children.

The Learned House is a drop-in recreation center in New London for underprivileged children. On Mondays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, volunteers from Conn go down to its mission. Anyone who is interested in helping out can contact Elaine Lang in Windham.

How about hari-kari on the sidelines? Or an open house with a crab exhibition? Possibly perform some nasty acts in the Maunder's, Killer Kadria, and a Fresh Flash were enough to pull Larrabee's vice-like grip on the North.

More action in the Northern Sectional Race occurred between Hamilton and Larrabin in a make or break game for Hamilton in desperate view of second place. Many fans say the history of flag football were noted in this game among seconds: the first safety, 19-yd. drive (by Hamilton - their only score), trying to pass a shred of underwear for a flag (not so slow George had his pants and underwear ripped out instead of his flag), an almost intercepted lateral, the first flagrant mass of a TD pass and a pass interference call, the first time a first half referee became a second half player and a last half player became a second half referree, and that a shy, introverted, somewhat swift unsamsoning kid became a star quarterback (Jim "Swifty"

Our men in motion have more consistency and spirit than Knowlton? Besides an open bar, perform some nasty acts in the Maunder's, Killer Kadria, and a Fresh Flash were enough to pull Larrabee's vice-like grip on the North.

The other dish from "Bob's Thing" was Steak Peking. It was a thick steak topped with a pound and a half of onions, two oranges, mounds of mushrooms and an orange sauce. Again, it was another oversized, succulent entree.

Since the service was so friendly, we managed to talk with the chief and owner, Bob Cabilla. He learned all III dishes from cooking all over the world and has now returned to this home, New London, to offer the wealth of his travels. He has written 4 cookbooks and had an hour cooking show in Washington, North Carolina. He is very friendly and will explain any dish on the menu.

We highly recommend this restaurant as an economic and enticing alternative to Chuck's or the Lighthouse Inn. We were served more than enough tantalizing food for $4.00 to $5.00 a piece. The service is excellent and very prompt.

So visit Cabilla's National Room for exotic, well-priced and superbly prepared international dishes next time you want to eat out. It could change all your eating habits.

Footsy folklore

The South is served up as Harkens dominates concession, psyches, meals, and sideline concessions in waiting to wade through Wright and the Left overs toward the playoff parade. Second place is a bit in doubt between J.A. and Freeman (who played Tuesday) but there will be four teams total at the end.

Along with Harkens on Tues. or Wed. and Freeman against A.A. on Thurs. Wed., Hamilton plays Blunt today (assuming both show up) or yesterday and very possibly Park played or plays Marshall (it's scheduled for today, however) Saturday looms large since the Left overs take on Harkens and Abbey will show against Larrabin.

Believe it or not, before Thanksgiving, the season will be over as the regular games wind down next week. Mon. - Freeman vs. Wright, Tues. - Marshall and Thurs. - Larrabin vs. Abbey (undoubtedly a game of grotesque importance), Wed. - J.A. vs. Marshall, and Thurs. - Larrabin vs. Morrison to showcase their playoff savvy and potency.

A tip of the hat or of the only glass should be extended to Jim Hamil and Rob Roberts for their efforts as Co-Commissioners along with the corps of effete and impudent refs.

Soccer team streaking
By Greg Woodward

And the streak goes on! The soccer team ran its winning streak to six straight over the past two weeks. The team has now earned the most victories in its short three year history. Their impressive record stands at 7-1-1.

The street gang tactics of Thames Valley couldn't stop Connecticut as Gullly Hand scored early and later assisted on a tie-breaking goal by outstanding freshman Scott Carney, who tallied his second game winning score. The final score of the brawl was 2-1, Connecticut, of course, the victor. Credit goes to the entire team, and especially to the courageous play of freshman John Kaufman, whose stamina, legs, and other unmentionables, bore the brunt of Thames Valley's skill lacking play. Coach Bill Lessig informed the opposing coach in a diplomatic manner that Connecticut will not play Thames Valley again until they learn what is meant by fair and clean play. Wasn't that sweet?

The stage was then set for Manhattanville. Friday afternoon at 2:30, 150 faithful fans, our team loose, the officials paid up ... Manhattanville fell and forfeited the game. Either way the result would have most likely been the same. Rumor has it a mix-up between goalie Jim Lowe and sweeper back Chip Benson resulted in a costly injury. Chip, who had been a major reason for the team's success, incurred a broken tibia. A bad break for the team too, damn it!

Now for perhaps the team's finest hour. Faced with a short vacation (no practice), the injury of Chip, and the pressure of having to fare well against Coast Guard, Connecticut had to prove it was stronger than the sub. That they did! Connecticut dominated the game throughout although the 3-2 score indicates a closer battle. Three unassisted goals by freshman Jeff Chernoff, co-captain Gully Hand, and sophomore Dave Kelley led the way. The team occupied the Coast Guard 25-18. A mix-up between goalies Jim Lowe and sweeper back Chip Benson resulted in a costly injury. Chip, who had been a major reason for the team's success, incurred a broken tibia. A bad break for the team too, damn it!

Next Tuesday, November 6th is Election Day. Polls are open from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. This ward is one of the most important opponent - the Coast Guardjayvees. In order to play on a varsity level with the Coast Guard, Connecticut had to prove it was stronger than the sub- varsity. That they did! The New London transit district is trying again to see if Connecticut College and the people on Crystal Ave. will use the bus. Last year we offered two trips a day and they averaged under one rider per trip! We cannot afford to put up with a utilization rate so miniscule.

Now we have an attractive new Captains' Walk, with specialty stores lining it, ready for you to shop, or to combination shopping with traveling.

We are trying out these runs for an experimental period of two weeks, funded by a grant by the State of Connecticut. We are anxious to provide service, but only where it is wanted, needed, and used.

Hitchhiking is dangerous and unlawful.

Bothering your friends and neighbors to give you a ride down town is a bore and an intrusion on their privacy.

Pay the 30c fare and ride the bus. Then we can afford to continue to offer this service.

Our bus will stop on each trip in front of the Palmer Library, and wait only one minute. Our schedule is tight. We try to be on time and ask you to be, also.
