Co-ed Floors: Less Vandalism

by Christopher Boyd

Imagine returning to your dorm after a long day in New York. Rather than finding a clean bathroom and hallways, you return to a bathroom hit by a toilet paper hurricane and hallways that are virtually impassable because of broken beer bottles and a door with a hole in it. Because somebody simply did not see the door in their way.

According to Margaret Watson, Dean of Student Affairs, in the past year, there has been a share decrease in the number of vandalism incidents like the one pictured above. This year we have had a decrease in vandalism," she said. "But whether this had to do with the increase in co-ed floors or something else, I'm not sure.

Co-ed floors were first introduced to Connecticut College about two years after there will still be vandalism on co-ed floors, but not nearly as much as on all-male floors. "Men" might not mean to do it, but they get angry, as we all men.

"I think that it is probably a combination of physical and emotional aspects," Dean Watson said. Women don't tend to have the strength. They just scream when they get angry.

Meanwhile, Dean Watson expressed her high satisfaction with the dormitory situation here at Conn. "There are other schools that have co-ed floors," she said. "But, some separate their classes. That is, freshmen and sophomores are often placed in their own dorms rather than with the other classes.

Our uniqueness is having an equal number of freshmen year," she said. Not many other schools can say that.

Nuclear Arms Symposium Prompts Thoughts

by Meg McClellan

"The military solution to arms problems is about at the end of the road," according to Robert Sherman, chairman of Student Affairs. "There is a much better way - the nuclear freeze," Sherman, legislative director for Congressman Tom Howney of Long Island, was one of three speakers at a symposium on arms control sponsored by the Peace Action Group and the Lectures and Discussions committee held in Dana Hall on Sunday, November 14.

Sherman's opinion that the military's handling of nuclear arms control is unsatisfactory was one of several points made at the symposium. The program consisted of two parts. Part one involved the showing of the film The Last Epidemic, followed by speaker Dr. David McMahon, Chief of Psychiatry at Backus Hospital in Norwich. McMahon discussed the film in terms of the psychological effects of a nuclear war. In Part Two, Sherman and Stanley Resor, former secretary of the Army and Chief Negotiator for the Mutual Balanced Force Negotiations in Vienna, addressed the freeze proposal itself. The program concluded with the film No First Use, in which the pros, cons, and difficulties of a "No First Use" policy were discussed.

Part One of the symposium successfully portrayed the medical, social and psychological realities of a nuclear war. The Last Epidemic was based on hearings held in San Francisco by the Physicians for Social Responsibility. While many of the facts and photographs of victims of Hiroshima in 1945 were familiar, the presentation and content of the film accounted for its dramatic impact. For instance, a nuclear explosion would cause a 20 percent depletion of the ozone layer, allowing enough ultraviolet rays to reach the earth's surface and blind all unprotected eyes. While humans, wearing dark sunglasses, animals cannot and would therefore be blinded.

There is a much better way - the Nuclear Freeze

Epidemic was based on the knowledge that the ozone layer allows enough ultraviolet rays to reach the earth's surface and blind all unprotected eyes. While humans, wearing dark sunglasses, animals cannot and would therefore be blinded.

Unfortunately, Sherman did not seem optimistic about getting the freeze today because of the current Administration's opposition to it. He feels that the administration does not understand the stabilizing effect of a freeze, as opposed to some of the other arms race and start talking about stability.

Resor is also a supporter of the arms freeze, but said, "progress has been made". He feels that arms control hasn't totally succeeded because of Soviet behavior, such as the Czechoslovakian invasion.

He is optimistic about the freeze because he feels it is in the "first time there has been strong political consciousness behind arms control.

Unfortunately, this strong consciousness was not reflected in the student turnout at the symposium. About 50 people were at the symposium, many of whom were faculty and New Londoners. Those students who did attend seemed to find the program informative; however, some felt that the last film was a bit long and dry. All in all, the program was a success.

Inside the VOICE

this Week:

SGA Course Evaluations

The Nuclear Freeze Debate

Letters Concerning the Future of Conn College

---

VOL. VI NO. B NOVEMBER 30, 1982

---
Going Once, Going Twice...
by Steven Wilson
On Thursday, November 11th, about 100-150 people filed into Dana Hall with checkbooks in hand for the fall Faculty Auction. The event was the 1983 Senior-Faculty Auction, which featured an auctioneer John Krininsky, leading the way, the senior college officers, and many other college officials and students.

The items and services being auctioned included a full paid trip to the Rocky Horror Picture Show to a dinner for two at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel. The prices ranged from $100 for a silk painting of shoes to a whopping $247.00 for Dean Alice Johnson's own hair. Price tags were as low as $5.00 for a pair of her shoes.

The atmosphere was pretty slow on the first few items, with Krininsky's wit and humorous comments keeping the auction alive. First out of the gate were the first five items, each priced in line with a Swiss dinner for two for a reasonable $12.00 and then, just moments later, he showed us a study in contrast by selling three women's dresses, one for break-fast in bed. Krininsky's enthusiasm eventually caught on, and the full day of sales for 125 pairs of her shoes, for a total of $25.00. The highest bidding was for a tray of strawberries and cream for a full body massage.

Among other items, there were several book auctions that generated quite a bit of excitement. A set of three volumes of The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald was purchased for $12.00 by two students. Another set of three volumes of The Odyssey by Homer was purchased for $25.00. So, if you are one of the students who are searching for a book with a "rubber-tipped" item in the title, you were in luck. And remember that it was worth at least $3.50 to someone who had to get a book that was not sold.

It was a valiant effort, and overall the auction seemed to be a success. It brought in about the same amount of money as the previous year.

Some of the more interesting or unusual items up for bid included a Mexican dinner, featuring Krininsky's own "three alarm chili" that he claims is "guaranteed to make you sweat." This dinner for four had a starting bid of $10.00. Claudia Gould paid $12.00 to be serenaded by a Scottish Bagpiper for ten minutes and Trip Seeds 13-album record collection, which sold for $25.00 at the last moment. That was probably the most unusual bidding war of the night. "Dangerous Dan," W. S. W. T. M. A. (a group known for their "fast in bed" efforts) was the first live item, picking up two at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel for $25.00.

The bidding was pretty slow on the first few items, with Krininsky's wit and humorous comments keeping the auction alive. First out of the gate were the first five items, each priced in line with a Swiss dinner for two for a reasonable $12.00 and then, just moments later, he showed us a study in contrast by selling three women's dresses, one for break-fast in bed. Krininsky's enthusiasm eventually caught on, and the full day of sales for 125 pairs of her shoes, for a total of $25.00. The highest bidding was for a tray of strawberries and cream for a full body massage.

Among other items, there were several book auctions that generated quite a bit of excitement. A set of three volumes of The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald was purchased for $12.00 by two students. Another set of three volumes of The Odyssey by Homer was purchased for $25.00. So, if you are one of the students who are searching for a book with a "rubber-tipped" item in the title, you were in luck. And remember that it was worth at least $3.50 to someone who had to get a book that was not sold.

It was a valiant effort, and overall the auction seemed to be a success. It brought in about the same amount of money as the previous year.
COMMENTARY

Congress Needs a Fiscal Straightjacket
by Patrick Kennedy

There is substantial consensus that borrowing must be curtailed. The debt limit is a cut in built-in tax increases and a defense budget that consumes only a portion of the nation's expenditures but demagogues against cuts in mandatory "entitlement" programs, call for increased social spending, fight attempts to reduce pork-barrelling, and push illusory "job programs" to respond to small, but influential, constituencies. Just as the Founding Fathers recognized the need to build constitutional safeguards to prevent Congress from abusing its power, so is it necessary to counter the inflationary biases in our political system that threaten private property rights and our economic health.

The Balanced Budget Amendment would be an external constraint on Congress, preventing the irresponsible fiscal policies that have been encouraged by pork-barrelling, and bills as riders to other legislation. It would force us to reduce pork-barrelling, and bills as riders to other legislation, and would require Congress to produce balanced budgets. The American people are horrified because the current deficit is so large and impending. If the deficit were still 5% of GDP, this lack of an overwhelming majority of the people desire is through the Balanced Budget Amendment. This measure is attacked as a mammoth "entitlement." The point: no Congress will pass such a bill, however reform-minded it may be.

The balanced budget amendment would be a fiscal straightjacket that makes it very difficult or "drier" than others.

1. The balanced budget amendment makes it very difficult to pass any tax cuts or increases in defense spending. It would also prevent tax cuts from raising faster than national income unless a bill solely aimed at increasing revenues is passed. Funding Social Security, Medicare, and national defense is a mammoth task requiring a balanced budget. To fund such a bill, the amendment would be waived in time of war.

Irresponsible spending does a great deal of damage to the economy no matter how it is financed, but especially if it is financed by deficits. Deficits must either be financed at the printing press, which is inflationary, or by borrowing, which drives up interest rates for private investors. If taxes are raised or made more progressive, there is less money for investment and savings. If there is also a high deficit, this lack of savings exacerbates interest rate problems, for government is simultaneously increasing demand for loanable funds (by borrowing) while curtailing the supply of such funds (by decreasing savings). Thus the government would succeed in stimulating aggregate demand and aggregate supply. The result is inflationary illusions of prosperity in the short run and stagnation in the long run. There can be no doubt that this constant irresponsible spending is produced by political pressure for new economic theory purports it.

Orthodox Keynesianism certainly mandates no such solution. The advocate of countercyclical fiscal policies, not drunken spending, must balance the budget now. This is the point: no Congress will pass such a bill, however reform-minded it may be. If taxes are raised or made more progressive, there is less money for investment and savings. If there is also a high deficit, this lack of savings exacerbates interest rate problems, for government is simultaneously increasing demand for loanable funds (by borrowing) while curtailing the supply of such funds (by decreasing savings). Thus the government would succeed in stimulating aggregate demand and aggregate supply. The result is inflationary illusions of prosperity in the short run and stagnation in the long run. There can be no doubt that this constant irresponsible spending is produced by political pressure for new economic theory purports it.

Orthodox Keynesianism certainly mandates no such solution. The advocate of countercyclical fiscal policies, not drunken spending, must balance the budget now. This is the point: no Congress will pass such a bill, however reform-minded it may be. If taxes are raised or made more progressive, there is less money for investment and savings. If there is also a high deficit, this lack of savings exacerbates interest rate problems, for government is simultaneously increasing demand for loanable funds (by borrowing) while curtailing the supply of such funds (by decreasing savings). Thus the government would succeed in stimulating aggregate demand and aggregate supply. The result is inflationary illusions of prosperity in the short run and stagnation in the long run. There can be no doubt that this constant irresponsible spending is produced by political pressure for new economic theory purports it.

Orthodox Keynesianism certainly mandates no such solution. The advocate of countercyclical fiscal policies, not drunken spending, must balance the budget now. This is the point: no Congress will pass such a bill, however reform-minded it may be. If taxes are raised or made more progressive, there is less money for investment and savings. If there is also a high deficit, this lack of savings exacerbates interest rate problems, for government is simultaneously increasing demand for loanable funds (by borrowing) while curtailing the supply of such funds (by decreasing savings). Thus the government would succeed in stimulating aggregate demand and aggregate supply. The result is inflationary illusions of prosperity in the short run and stagnation in the long run. There can be no doubt that this constant irresponsible spending is produced by political pressure for new economic theory purports it.

Orthodox Keynesianism certainly mandates no such solution. The advocate of countercyclical fiscal policies, not drunken spending, must balance the budget now. This is the point: no Congress will pass such a bill, however reform-minded it may be. If taxes are raised or made more progressive, there is less money for investment and savings. If there is also a high deficit, this lack of savings exacerbates interest rate problems, for government is simultaneously increasing demand for loanable funds (by borrowing) while curtailing the supply of such funds (by decreasing savings). Thus the government would succeed in stimulating aggregate demand and aggregate supply. The result is inflationary illusions of prosperity in the short run and stagnation in the long run. There can be no doubt that this constant irresponsible spending is produced by political pressure for new economic theory purports it.

Orthodox Keynesianism certainly mandates no such solution. The advocate of countercyclical fiscal policies, not drunken spending, must balance the budget now. This is the point: no Congress will pass such a bill, however reform-minded it may be. If taxes are raised or made more progressive, there is less money for investment and savings. If there is also a high deficit, this lack of savings exacerbates interest rate problems, for government is simultaneously increasing demand for loanable funds (by borrowing) while curtailing the supply of such funds (by decreasing savings). Thus the government would succeed in stimulating aggregate demand and aggregate supply. The result is inflationary illusions of prosperity in the short run and stagnation in the long run. There can be no doubt that this constant irresponsible spending is produced by political pressure for new economic theory purports it.

Orthodox Keynesianism certainly mandates no such solution. The advocate of countercyclical fiscal policies, not drunken spending, must balance the budget now. This is the point: no Congress will pass such a bill, however reform-minded it may be. If taxes are raised or made more progressive, there is less money for investment and savings. If there is also a high deficit, this lack of savings exacerbates interest rate problems, for government is simultaneously increasing demand for loanable funds (by borrowing) while curtailing the supply of such funds (by decreasing savings). Thus the government would succeed in stimulating aggregate demand and aggregate supply. The result is inflationary illusions of prosperity in the short run and stagnation in the long run. There can be no doubt that this constant irresponsible spending is produced by political pressure for new economic theory purports it.
Curb Campus Cowboys

by Perry Karrington

I must tip my hat to the SGA. The SGA, who has its best time of the year, is finally going to deal with the long-standing campus problem—traffic control. It’s an area that they haven’t left much of a hole in yet, but enthusiasm to stop it is running high.

One SGA spokesperson is particularly livid. “What with the cars that come and go, Perry, is that these campus cowboys off the streets. Maybe they have been listening to too much Bruce Springsteen; or maybe they have drive around this campus like there’s no tomorrow. They have no regard for rules or human safety whatsoever. And it’s not just the BWVs, it’s American-made cars as well. You want my opinion on what to do? Say expelled violators on the spot. Yes, you could say I feel strongly about this issue. When it becomes no longer safe to walk across Harkness Green, you know you’ve got a problem.”

What will SGA eventually do? Even they don’t know, but a lot of debate is going on in the works. A Connecticut College Committee on Curbing Campus Cowboys will be formed in mid-December to offer suggestions on traffic policy. Fines for violators will most likely be doubled. Campus safety will be aided by students placed at traffic-related problem areas on the campus. Buttons, bumper stickers, and t-shirts (“Curb Campus Cowboys”) will go on sale next semester.

There is also talk of traffic lights, a traffic violation hot-line, a WCN traffic watch helicopter, and courses on safe driving.

“Well, all the cars on campus, driving is a way of life. All we want is for people to abide by the rules. It’s not drive-thru,” the BWV said. Yet, motorists the SGA is riding high—yet slow—in the saddle.

Clarifying a Point

In the same issue of the Voice, Alan Spalter (president of Larrabee) is quoted as saying a vote in favor of the proposal was an admission of guilt, but this issue had not been brought up in his dorm.

My vote was NOT an admission of guilt or an unwillingness to commit. It was an expression of the importance I placed on the issue.

I caution Mr. Bliss, Mr. Spalter, and others who were quick to condemn a different opinion. A contradicting opinion does not imply incompetency. In this case it showed that a good number of the Assembly members placed a great deal of importance on the actual vote of the student body.

Lisa Rice
President Wright Dorm

The increased awareness and participation by the entire college community at Learned House is a very valuable and appreciated resource there. We thank you and look forward to more fun and cooperation in the future.

With Gratitude,
The staff, friends and kids of Learned House

Learned House Thanks Conn

A heartfelt thanks goes out to all of the Connecticut College students who contributed to a truly exceptional Saturday at Learned House. November 13 was no ordinary day. The Senior class, Shriffs, and Friends of Learned House put on a terrific carnival down at the House.
The student will also learn to respect the teacher because of the excellence of his or her extensive preparation. The liberally educated teacher is an extraordinary individual. With a liberal arts education for a student. The liberal education of a teacher is equipped for a college career and benefits of tremendously important. It is deeply troubling, if any student is of this opinion. The student will learn to respect the teacher because of the excellence of his or her extensive preparation. The liberally educated teacher is an extraordinary individual. With a liberal arts education for a student.

The merit of the secondary education program is concerned, we must make sure that any changes in it are made in the light of the fundamental educational objectives of the College. It would be naive to think that the ways of achieving these remained completely unchanged in a world which is changing so rapidly, and certain small shifts have been proposed and are under discussion. It would be far more surprising, and indeed deeply troubling, if any fundamental shifts in the long-term exist would eliminate a lot of problems. The merit of the secondary education program is invaluable, but if budget cuts continue, the school holds a responsibility to the students enrolled here at Connecticut College to provide them with a quality education. The merit of the secondary education program is extraneous. With a liberal arts background a teacher is actually more qualified than a teacher who has no such preparation. Our faculty is prepared to relate to his or her students only in their other areas. This result in a broader and more meaningful educational department is student. The student will be better equipped for a college career and will be better equipped for a college career they chose to attend. Connecticut has had the benefit of having lesser talented students in the past. Should it not continue to do so in the future?

Education Program invaluable

To the Editor:
This letter is in response to the recent article on Education Department cuts in the November 2nd issue of the "Voice." While I recognize the importance of discussing concern over declining enrollment and the need to make cuts to make ends meet, I believe the school holds a responsibility to the students enrolled here at Connecticut College to provide them with a quality education. The merit of the secondary education program is extraneous. With a liberal arts background a teacher is actually more qualified than a teacher who has no such preparation. Our faculty is prepared to relate to his or her students only in their other areas. This result in a broader and more meaningful educational department is student. The student will be better equipped for a college career and will be better equipped for a college career they chose to attend. Connecticut has had the benefit of having lesser talented students in the past. Should it not continue to do so in the future?

Future Threatens Theater

To the Editor:
As theatre majors, we were disturbed to read the naive and cavalier attitude displayed by President Ames towards the theatre department in the November 9 issue of the Voice "President Ames Defends Future Theater." President Ames' contention that the theatre department could offer a viable major with only one faculty member is absurd. Linda Kent and Jim Lee do their best to offer students a variety of courses, and we are lucky enough to have the opportunity to study at the National Theatre Institute, and with visiting artists such as Morris Carnovsky. But Linda and Jim can only do so much, and the department does not even have a full time secretary which only increases their workload. We are proud of our department but cutting it to one faculty member would completely dumb down the course work. We have very much doubt President Ames' claim that the viable major could be offered with only one faculty member, whether in the past or for the future. It has become increasingly difficult in the past few years to believe that President Ames would see the Theatre department as concerned, this is clearly not the case. We cannot take Connecticut College into the future by retrograding it into the past.
The KLR Trio
by Erik Haslam

The thing that was most remarkable about the KLR Trio was the way Jaime Laredo, Robertpoons and Jaime Laredo, Robertpoon and Robertpoons musical ideas and communication with each other. San Francisco, who has performed together in impressive unity and harmony. Pianoist Jaime Laredo has recorded with and has been engaged by some of the world's greatest orchestras. He is a frequent collaborator with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra and the New York Philharmonic. Cellist Sharon Robinson has been acclaimed as one of the most brilliant cellists before the public today. She is a frequent collaborator with San Francisco, and has appeared on several recordings. Violinist Richard Giarratana has been praised for his expressive playing and his ability to communicate brilliantly with the audience. The KLR Trio, composed of Jaime Laredo, Robertpoons and Jaime Laredo, Robertpoon, is an ensemble that brings a fresh and exciting perspective to the world of chamber music. Their performances are known for their technical mastery, musical insight, and emotional depth. The KLR Trio's ability to combine these qualities in a cohesive and compelling manner is what sets them apart. It is not surprising that their concerts are eagerly anticipated by music lovers around the world. The KLR Trio's music is not only pleasing to the ear, but also thought-provoking and intellectually stimulating. Their performances are a testament to the power of collaboration and the boundless possibilities of music.
"Not Just Another Bomb"

by Sally Jones

On November 11, in Oliva Hall, David Hawkins, an official historian of the Los Alamitos project, gave a lecture on "The Atomic Scientists and The Arms Race." Speaking to an audience of the general public and Connecticut College students, he lectured about the nuclear bomb and the misconceptions that people have about the "Atomic Interlude" that now exists.

For one of the greatest difficulties that he cited was one of scale, the problem of not seeing things in their true dimensions. Scientists, congressmen and the public do not recognize the magnitude of the problem and are not well informed about the issues at hand. Various lobbies for politicians and seminars for the people have been held to educate everyone about the bomb and to eliminate the misunderstandings concerning atomic energy. As Hawkins said, "it's not just another bomb."

On realizing the extent of the problem, Hawkins brought up three lines of development that society recognizes and should continue to develop. First, the nuclear bomb is no secret. There are no scientists in all countries, and no one can make a secret out of nature. Secondly, there is no defense. Hawkins found a quotation for scientist scientists will find a defense, "to be a myth, for such a defense would be extraordinarily implausible.

Finally, the only stable solution that Hawkins suggested was an international surrender. A committee is needed that will set forth a rational plan of international control. It is important to see that the people who understand the magnitude of the problem create an agency that controls the technology that contributes to the making of the bomb.

In conclusion, Hawkins spoke of the nuclear arms freeze as being a tactic. He saw it as part of a policy to gradually slow down the arms race to an eventual standstill. From there, a step-by-step reversal strategy would follow to reduce tensions and keep them from growing. Finally, Hawkins posed the question of, "What if this tactic of freezing the arms fails?" A failure of a tactic does not invalidate the strategy of solving the problem, for tactical moves are extremely important. One must remember that the entire globe is affected by this issue, and therefore, everyone must be reached. An international policy can be created that is workable for all.

On Patronism:

I have feelings of patriotism in the sense that I believe in the experiment of America. But I wouldn't fight-what's on paper has faded into a ridiculous death game."

John Poglinco, age 21, '83, registered

"Yes, I do have feelings of patriotism, but would most likely not fight.

Eric Jacobson, age 21, '83, registered

"Yes, my male ancestors have fought and died in government-organized combat, and I realize there are ideals behind U.S. foreign policy." Ray Chaffield, age 20, '83, registered

On Women in Combat:

"Because women are not as physically strong as men, they are not as good a fighting force. I do believe they can be trained to be nearly as good.

female, age 18, '86, wouldn't register

And one last voice:

"If men can vote and register for the draft and women can't, it doesn't make sense that men and women can't drink at this age.

K.W.

On Profession:

I registered out of fear of prosecution. But as men and women in combat, and women they can't prevent everybody. They might find it unconstitutional to prosecute selectively.

John Poglinco

"If I were old enough and male I think I would register - not because of pressures but just for the country. (However, I think war is a stupid means of solving problems.

N.W., female, age 17, '86 would register

Spent so much time here every year as to have legal residence. I did register two years ago so I could vote locally in the national Presidential elections. By doing this, I would save myself the trouble of sending away for an absentee ballot from my home state. The truth of the matter is, of my own (and thus myself) I have legal residence in three separate states due to the property we own and pay taxes on. Don't ask me how, but I could vote in 3 States, though I believe that is slightly illegal.

Nevertheless, I was not interested in the slightest about who was running for what in Connecticut, at all. Because of my own constant interest in Social Democratic leanings, I vote for the person, not the party. I could like, in the future, to be left alone when their is another election so I could exercise my right, better or worse, in the secret ballot it is supposed to be. And it's my business only, so keep your lists to yourselves, please. Thank you.

M.A.J.

Class of 1963

Going Once, Going Twice

continued from page 5

money as it has in past years, and will be well organized and run. A special commendation has been given to John Krichinsky, who has a number of times kept things rolling with his witty remarks and his persistent search for a higher bid. I have also been asked to extend a special thanks to Phoebe Andrin and Madeleine Eggleston for their efforts.

The only thing that could have made the auction better is if more people participated in the purchasing of items. I realize that the faculty donated a lot of items to be auctioned off, but their absence among the bidders prevented some items from going sold. These were items that were specifically directed toward faculty members, such as snowshoeing service, free gardern and yard work, and babysitting services. These were all auctions of time and labor and it is too bad that no faculty members were willing to show up and bid on them.

"The great danger that exists is man himself."

,—C,G, Jung

3 floors of fun, surprises & nostalgia

Visit this family Victorian style Luncheonette

303 East Main St. West Hartford, CT 06110
now until Dec. 31
$40 per meal
NEW $25 table shrimp and hero
NEW $10 today
"We welcome walk-ins"

BEN RAMOS and friends

Unisex Beauty Salon

345 No. Main St. West Hartford, CT 06117
now until Dec. 31
345 No. Main St. West Hartford, CT 06117
NEW $25 table shrimp and hero
NEW $10 today
"We welcome walk-ins"

7 College Voice, November 30, 1982
Basketball Season Preview

by Jeff Idelaon

New head coach Martin Schoepfer will try to make a "successful team" out of men's basketball, this winter. Last year, Martin was the assistant coach of the men's basketball team at Longwood College in Virginia for the last three seasons. At Longwood, a division II school, he coached compiled a 42-20 record while he was there. "I was looking for a school that understood the balance of academics and athletics," said Schoepfer.

The fact that it was in New England was a very big plus to the whole thing, because I grew up in the Boston area," said Schoepfer.

Ron Jirs a, head junior varsity coach and assistant varsity coach last year, will assist Schoepfer this year.

"Ron came highly recommended from the former coach," Schoepfer. "He wanted someone who understood the mechanism of the school and he knew the school and the team."

There are 16 members on the varsity squad this year.

Field Hockey All-Stars Announced

by Tracy Shipman

This past fall, the women's field hockey team posted one of its most successful seasonal records. As a result, the members of the team achieved all-star status: Kathryn Smith '85 (halfback), Tammy Brown '85 (halfback) and Caroline Wang '85. Because of their impressive performances during the season, coach Lombardini asked these players if they would be willing to try out for the Northeast Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Division All-Star Team (NIAC), with the understanding that if they made the team they would be playing in a tournament the weekend of November 12 and 14.

When asked what playing in the tournament was like, both Kathryn and Caroline said they thought it was a great experience. "We hadn't met any of our teammates before, but we just adapted to one another so quickly, after only three hours of practicing together," they also found that the level of play was very competitive.

The tournament differed from regular season play in that the teams were not only composed of fine college players (player-coach teams) which also participated were composed of coaches and a few U.S. players. "In one game we played against a team with cops, Lombardini and the coach of our all-star team." Out of fifteen teams that participated in the tournament, the NIAC team placed third overall. The team scored a total of five goals over the weekend: two were scored by Caroline Twomey, and one was scored by Tammy Brown, making Conn's contribution very strong.

Throughout the weekend coaches were still observing individuals to qualify for yet another team, to represent the north in a national tournament in Florida, Caroline Twomey was asked to return to try-out for this team.

Conn's three all-stars have all been playing for a number of years. When asked if they plan to continue in hockey after college and what options were available, they expressed an interest in perhaps playing on an Association team to keep in shape.

Morrison Wins Super Bowl 21-14

On Sunday afternoon, Morrison defeated Larrebbe 21-14 in a contest between the Women's Flag Football Super Bowl. Morrison's passing back Caroline Morrison was able to make the big gains, taking advantage of a good Larrebbe secondry. Morrison quarterback Sally Grafstein threw to wide receiver Gail Hopp for two touchdowns. Larrebbe was able to gain considerable yardage on the ground with running back Anne DeLaney and quarterback Barb Barsa. However, Larrebbe's erratic passing attack and numerous turnovers prevented them from generating a strong offensive drive especially in the closing minutes of the game.

The first half was close with Morrison scoring first on a pass to Hopp. However, Larrebbe came back scoring on a long run by DeLaney. But Grafstein threw for another touchdown to wide receiver Gail Hopp, ending the half with Morrison in the lead 14-7.

The second half opened with a Larrebbe turnover on a kickoff. Larrebbe was able to hold Morrison and on their next possession carried the ball to the Morrison 21 yard line. On the next three plays, they were able to take the ball to the one yard line and scored on a QB keeper up the middle. This tied the score at 14-14.

However, Morrison came back scoring on an end run by Grafstein making the final score 21-14. Both teams played with intensity and skill. It was a close contest.

OCEAN PIZZA PALACE

88 Ocean Ave. 443-0870

Featuring:
American, Italian and Greek Cuisine
Mousaka - Souvlaki - Dinner - Egg's ent Parmesan
All Kinds of Pizzas and Subs

EVERY 4 PIZZAS WE GIVE 1 FREE
Serving Beer and Wine

This COUPON is worth FREE BEER or Soda with your meal

SPORTS

Basketball Season Preview

by Jeff Idelaon

New head coach Martin Schoepfer will try to make a "successful team" out of men's basketball, this winter. Last year, Martin was the assistant coach of the men's basketball team at Longwood College in Virginia for the last three seasons. At Longwood, a division II school, he coached compiled a 42-20 record while he was there. "I was looking for a school that understood the balance of academics and athletics," said Schoepfer.

The fact that it was in New England was a very big plus to the whole thing, because I grew up in the Boston area," said Schoepfer.

Ron Jirs a, head junior varsity coach and assistant varsity coach last year, will assist Schoepfer this year.

"Ron came highly recommended from the former coach," Schoepfer. "He wanted someone who understood the mechanism of the school and he knew the school and the team."

There are 16 members on the varsity squad this year.

Field Hockey All-Stars Announced

by Tracy Shipman

This past fall, the women's field hockey team posted one of its most successful seasonal records. As a result, the members of the team achieved all-star status: Kathryn Smith '85 (halfback), Tammy Brown '85 (halfback) and Caroline Wang '85. Because of their impressive performances during the season, coach Lombardini asked these players if they would be willing to try out for the Northeast Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Division All-Star Team (NIAC), with the understanding that if they made the team they would be playing in a tournament the weekend of November 12 and 14.

When asked what playing in the tournament was like, both Kathryn and Caroline said they thought it was a great experience. "We hadn't met any of our teammates before, but we just adapted to one another so quickly, after only three hours of practicing together," they also found that the level of play was very competitive.

The tournament differed from regular season play in that the teams were not only composed of fine college players (player-coach teams) which also participated were composed of coaches and a few U.S. players. "In one game we played against a team with cops, Lombardini and the coach of our all-star team." Out of fifteen teams that participated in the tournament, the NIAC team placed third overall. The team scored a total of five goals over the weekend: two were scored by Caroline Twomey, and one was scored by Tammy Brown, making Conn's contribution very strong.

Throughout the weekend coaches were still observing individuals to qualify for yet another team, to represent the north in a national tournament in Florida, Caroline Twomey was asked to return to try-out for this team.

Conn's three all-stars have all been playing for a number of years. When asked if they plan to continue in hockey after college and what options were available, they expressed an interest in perhaps playing on an Association team to keep in shape.

Morrison Wins Super Bowl 21-14

On Sunday afternoon, Morrison defeated Larrebbe 21-14 in a contest between the Women's Flag Football Super Bowl. Morrison's passing back Caroline Morrison was able to make the big gains, taking advantage of a good Larrebbe secondry. Morrison quarterback Sally Grafstein threw to wide receiver Gail Hopp for two touchdowns. Larrebbe was able to gain considerable yardage on the ground with running back Anne DeLaney and quarterback Barb Barsa. However, Larrebbe's erratic passing attack and numerous turnovers prevented them from generating a strong offensive drive especially in the closing minutes of the game.

The first half was close with Morrison scoring first on a pass to Hopp. However, Larrebbe came back scoring on a long run by DeLaney. But Grafstein threw for another touchdown to wide receiver Gail Hopp, ending the half with Morrison in the lead 14-7.

The second half opened with a Larrebbe turnover on a kickoff. Larrebbe was able to hold Morrison and on their next possession carried the ball to the Morrison 21 yard line. On the next three plays, they were able to take the ball to the one yard line and scored on a QB keeper up the middle. This tied the score at 14-14.

However, Morrison came back scoring on an end run by Grafstein making the final score 21-14. Both teams played with intensity and skill. It was a close contest.

OCEAN PIZZA PALACE

88 Ocean Ave. 443-0870

Featuring:
American, Italian and Greek Cuisine
Mousaka - Souvlaki - Dinner - Egg's ent Parmesan
All Kinds of Pizzas and Subs

EVERY 4 PIZZAS WE GIVE 1 FREE
Serving Beer and Wine

This COUPON is worth FREE BEER or Soda with your meal