No more Coors!" chanted a group of approximately 25 people in Castle Court as the audience on the SGA-sponsored Preservation Hall band show left Palmer Auditorium, last Thursday at approximately 10 p.m.

"We're trying to sabotage the Coors beer sales here at Conn," said Sam Luebke, one of the organizers of the protest and the House President from Abbey House.

Luebke announced at the Thursday night SGA meeting that Abbey was "in an editing" stage of determining how to act on the Coors issue and its "unwillingness" to act on the Coors issue and its discriminatory hiring practices.

"President of Abbey strongly supported Coors last Wednesday night and is discriminatory. "Luebke, a supporter of the John Birch Society, an ultra-conservative political group, and the Louisiana Council on National Policy, a group Luebke claims is engaged in fund raising and political action." Luebke told SGA members that Coors should be banished from the college campus bar and the alleged discriminatory hiring practices.

The Adolph Coors Company allegedly engages in unfair hiring practices, which discriminate against minorities and women. William Coors, one of the leading share holders of the company, is, according to Luebke, a supporter of the John Birch Society, an ultra-conservative political group, and the Louisiana Council on National Policy, a group Luebke claims is engaged in fund raising for the "Contra" rebels fighting the Government of Nicaragua.

Luebke said that the SGA conflict began when Luebke, accompanied by "three quarters" of his dorm members and "about ten or fifteen other interested people" attended the Student Assembly meeting on Thursday.

Luebke and Warren Cohen, President of the Class of 1988, then presented to the Assembly information, based on their research, which showed the Coors organization as engaging in unfair labor practices and discrimination, as well as having continued on page 9

The Coors Story
by Alexandra Stoddard
News Editor and Lisa Broujos
The College Voice

This Thursday SGA will vote on whether or not Coors beer should be banned from the college bar, bringing an end to a highly controversial issue on campus.

The Adolph Coors Company, makers of Coors beer, has been accused of subscribing to discriminatory hiring practices.

The controversy on campus centers around the existence of adequate proof that the company is discriminatory.

Also, the infringement on the right of students who choose to drink Coors, should SGA ban its sale in the bar, has become an issue in the ongoing debate.

Sam Luebke, '88, the House President of Abbey strongly believes that Coors should be banned because they were "blatantly discriminatory in their hiring practices."

During her presentation in support of Coors last Wednesday, Kathy Continio, Assistant

RenoVation

by Lisa Broujos
The College Voice

Along with the construction work on the North parking lot and Hale Laboratory, the renovation and relocation of numerous offices in Fanning Hall are well under way, according to Robert Hutton, Director of Operations at Conn.

One reason the offices are being moved and remodeled is to create space for the workers. "We need more room and proper working space," Hutton said. In order to make the more frequented offices easily accessible some offices exchanged locations.

For example, the Registrars office on the 2nd floor, which handles a constant influx of students will eventually switch places with the Treasurer's office on the 1st floor, which deals with a limited number of people through scheduled appointments.

Other changes that are occurring are the movement of the Academic Dean's office, the addition of another Personnel office, the conversion of two offices to the movement of Accounting rooms.

The office of Frank Johnson, Academic Dean, was once a Bursary office. Since a Bursary controls the accounting of the college, the office contains a large vault which takes up most of the office space. Hutton said.

Last week Johnson moved to the room of Eugene Gallagher, Acting Dean of the college. Dean Gallagher, Dean King, and Dean Ray had previously moved to the North end of Fanning on the second floor.

The Personnel office will be gaining a new room when the women's bathroom on the 1st floor is moved beside the men's bathroom.

The offices of Julie Quinn, Director of Public Information, will be losing a room when the women's bathroom is installed. Quinn said that she is just glad that the Information and Public office is remaining in the first floor.

"It's important to be in the traffic area where people can drop us off of Communication and calendar items."

When construction is complete, the accounting offices on the first floor, which are presently divided on both sides of the hallway, will be located together on the same side of Fanning.

"The work in Fanning is an expansion, with the goal of making the first floor more effective," remarked Hutton. "Many offices are also being carpeted and painted."

Construction in Fanning began on June 1 and could last all year or possibly into the summer, said Hutton.

Election '86

by Margaret Nightingale
World Outlook Editor
The College Voice

With the 1986 Election results final, President Ronald Reagan will face new challenges in getting legislation passed through Congress for his last two years in office.

The Democrats continue to hold the majority in the House by a solid margin of 258 members to 174 Republicans, with three seats still undecided.

The most important victory for the Democrats occurred when the US Senate where they will hold a 55 to 45 member majority over the Republicans, for the first time in six years.

Reagan now faces a Democratic-controlled Senate for the first time in six years.

continued on page 8
Counseling Service at Conn

To the Editor:

We, the Counseling Service Committee, are writing in response to the October 21 article on Moral Illness. We appreciate the honesty and courage of the woman who wrote the article and shared such personal experiences with members of the college community. We also appreciate her willingness to help break our stereotypes of manic-depression, through writing about her situation. Many issues and questions were raised in the article, most of which our committee is addressing. For example: the number of counselors, student awareness of mental health and illness, and how to dispense medication to people with psychopharmacological needs on campus.

We have just completed a thorough study of the Counseling Services of the four colleges in the Twelve College Exchange. We wish to use this as a resource and a guideline to see how we can improve the Counseling Service at Connecticut College, and address the concerns of the student body. This article gave us even further direction and reinforcement of our purpose. We want people, such as the author of Mental Illness to feel like they can have a group of people who are concerned with creating a counseling service that can better meet student needs. With Laura Hessling as our advisor, we feel hopeful about the possibility for change, because the members of The Counseling Service and the Dean's office are passionate and interested in what we are doing.

We are a newly formed committee, and would welcome any concerns or observations that you may have. You may contact any one of the members of the committee through our student boxes and phone numbers.

Sincerely,

Amy Wheeler
Leslie Lauf
Maureen Tirmian
Ann Clark
Stephanie Hamed

Students Express Concern Over Spiritualism Article

To the Editor:

We, as Christians at Connecticut College, wish to express our concern over the recent "Spiritual Healing" article published in the October 21 issue of The College Voice, in which a medium named Carl Hewitt was asked about his case and shared such personal accounts of the woman who wrote the article, with whom he associates with his phenomenon in the Bible. This is hardly the case. The notion of the presence of an enormous amount of material on psychic phenomena in the Bible, which he feels is unimportant and unauthentic.

Mr. Hewitt talks of "the power of faith into our lives -- spiritual, emotionally and physically. We feel like they can have a group of people who are concerned with creating a counseling service that can better meet student needs. With Laura Hessling as our advisor, we feel hopeful about the possibility for change, because the members of The Counseling Service and the Dean's office are passionate and interested in what we are doing.

We are a newly formed committee, and would welcome any concerns or observations that you may have. You may contact any one of the members of the committee through our student boxes and phone numbers.

Sincerely,

Amy Wheeler
Leslie Lauf
Maureen Tirmian
Ann Clark
Stephanie Hamed

Yes, SOAR

Of late, there has been mounting criticism of SOAR, the Society Organized Against Racism. It seems that in this age it has once again become fashionable for people to belive the obvious: racism exists here, on this campus.

When Fanning Hall was taken over by majority and minority students in May of this year to protest the minority "condition" here at Conn, the issue at stake transcended that of "how they got their demands met?". It became, instead, a test which determined whether Conn College's administration was sensitive enough to minority concerns and needs. The Administration passed this examination.

The ones who failed this crucial exam were the students who refused to understand what was at stake, what it all meant; these were the students who grumbled about not being able to attend their American history class, when one of the greatest issues of American history played before their eyes.

Last week, in an unsigned Letter to the Editor titled "War Validity Questioned", one such person aired her views. She called the Fanning takeover "terrorism at its lowest level". And the Administration's willingness to deal with the protest in a logical and compassionate manner "succumbing" to this terrorism. Beyond a attempt to belittle everything SOAR has done and accomplished, this writer proved the need for the existence of SOAR.

This person, through her unwillingness to become educated, to be aware, demonstrated the insensitivity of a majority student to the needs of the minority population of this College. It is because of people like this writer, and not in spite of them, that SOAR exists.

As long as people at Conn College, be it students, administrators, faculty members, or staff, continue to believe that the acts of desperation and frustration of minority students and their majority supporters, such as the Fanning takeover, are simply theblings of a spoiled minority seeking, as the anonymous writer contended, "preferential treatment", then SOAR will exist because it must exist.

The College Voice is a non-profit student produced newspaper. Editorial and business offices are located in room 212 in the Crellin-Williams Student Center. The deadline for all articles is Monday at 3 p.m., for the following week's issue. Letters to the Editor will published on subjects of interest to the community. The deadline for all letters is Wednesday at 12 p.m. for the following week's issue. Because of the volume of mail, all decisions are final. We cannot guarantee the publication of any submission. We are unable to return any copy. All submissions must be typed, double spaced, signed, and include a telephone number for verification. Opinions expressed in editorials are those of The College Voice. These opinions expressed elsewhere in the paper are the opinions of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of this newspaper.

Elizabeth Huffman
Executive Editor

Alexandra Stoddard
News Editor
Peter Falconer
Features Editor
Marc LaPlace
Sports Editor
Margaret Nightingale
World Outlook Editor
Thorn Puzen
Contributing Editor
Sarah Schoen
Arts & Entertainment Editor
Geoffrey K. Wagg
Managing Editor
Chistine Weaver
Business Editor
Jennifer Marshall
Production Editor
Melinda Fee
Copy Editor
Doug Shank
Operations Director
James Sachs
Advertising Director

Associate Editors: Fred Ryan (Sports), Victor DiGrazio (Cover), Mari Haffenspeck (World Outlook), Janet Schoenfeld (Advertising), Stuart Eaten (Graphics), Carl Carino (Operations), Rachel Roth (Compugraphic & Copy).

Fernando Espuelles-Aenjo
Publisher & Editor-in-Chief

Associate Editors: Gregory K. Wagg, Geoffrey K. Wagg, Christine Weaver, Jennifer Marshall, Melinda Fee, Doug Shank, James Sachs, Fernando Espuelles-Aenjo, Elizabeth Huffman
To the Editor:

One of the primary goals of an institution of higher learning, such as Connecticut College, is to help our students to philosophically, evaluate objectively, and draw scientific conclusions from the wide variety of situations to which they may be exposed. It was undoubtedly an interesting experience for many of our students to attend a "Spiritual Healing Seminar." Recently, it is not clear from the College Voice article whether the involved students did employ such a scientific method to evaluate the event. It was disturbing to me, as a scientifically trained physician as well as a lay student, to see the reference to Spiritualism "resolving the conflict between science and religion," when it would appear that demonstration was definitely not scientific, and was very questionable religious. Students with a critical mind would be curious to know who this mysterious energy was which was purportedly transferred from one person to another. Until such time as the question to those in need of healing. Would such healing stand up against a controlled double-blind study? I think not. Certainly it is universally acccepted that there is a tremendous inter-connection between the mind and the human body, so that a positive mental attitude is of great value in mobilizing the defenses of the body. Whether hormonally or by activation of the immune system (which can be scientifically documented), we all these power within us, and it is not necessary (or logical) to require an outside "medium" to "channel positive energy" into us.

No wonder there has been a shortage of mediums since the fourth century. The development of modern scientific methods has given us a fuller understanding of the nature of illness, which produces such paranormal phenomena. Such healing methods probably do no direct harm, but if reliance on such suspect methods keeps an ill person from obtaining legitimate, proven, effective therapy, then great harm can be done. It is laudable to experience such events as this "healing session," but I wonder if it is worth the mind, but this should not be confused with having holes in your head.

Sincerely,

Fred McKeethen, M.D.

For SOAR

To the Editor:
The letter to the Editor of the November 4 Voice [SOAR Validity Questioned] has both saddened and angered me not because of the contents of the letter, but because the individual who wrote the letter lacked the courage to reveal his or her name. Although he professes not to be a racist one cannot but wonder as to his motives for writing the letter. I am curious to know what this individual feels about SOAR which appears to be the 21 issue of the College Voice.

I must admit that I am responding with anger. It is an anger that stems from a frustration of being misunderstood. Mr. Kamara's letter was an attack upon SOAR — a minimalistic idea of what SOAR is about. SOAR stands for Society of Organized Activist Resistance. Racism is an enormous large problem, and to those who consider themselves actively trying to do battle against this monster, it often seems overwhelming. But they struggle on, nonetheless.

When confronted with a person who fails to see what the purpose of SOAR is and its importance for non-racists, or for those who believe in the beliefs of SOAR, who consider it to be a "minimalist idea of what SOAR is about." SOAR is not primarily concerned with racism as it is manifested in Africa, as Mr. Kamara believes; but in South Africa or Zimbabwe. SOAR originated out of a deep felt concern about the problem of racism and the desire to exist here, in America, in Connectic-

For SOAR we are afraid or neglect to take a public stand the cause of democracy is severely weakened. This was especially true during the heyday of McCarthyism when individuals, regardless of political conviction, were afraid to take a public stand. The result -- a demagogue was able to run the United States almost as if he were his own private kingdom. Standing for one's convictions is not a question of participation rather it is an essential for the continuation of a visible democracy.

While all organizations have their flaws including SOAR (of which I am not critical), the author of the letter to the editor has discretion his criticism of SOAR by refusing to personally accept responsibility for his views.

Sincerely,

Neal Brandes

Voice's Political Bias

To the Editor:

As a parent of a Connecticut College student, I can understand the Voice with interest. Although I enjoy the paper very much, I was disappointed to read an article which reveals about the political bias of the editorial staff and perhaps a number of students. Allow me to explain.

Last May the Voice reported on a pleasant program to raise money to aid an elementary school in Nicaragua. Why Nicaragua? Surely there are elementary schools which are just as needy in Costa Rica, one of the most democratic of all Central and South American countries. El Salvador has had two democratic elections in recent years. Why not give aid to one of its needy elementary schools? The Sandanist government of Nicaragua has terminated civil liberties and unwarrantedly persecuted the Mosquito Indians whom they have forced off tribal lands occupied for hundreds of years. The economy of Nicaragua is being systematically degraded by its totalitarian "escuela" next to your library in support of such a government?

South Africa has understandbly occurred with the attention of students, faculty and administrators for some time. What about the Mosquito Indians of Nicaragua which is directly-ly responsible for massive starvation causing the deaths of a thousand people in the last year in a thousand times greater than caused by the repressive government of South Africa. The silence from Connectict College (and most other colleges) on this subject has been deafening.

Since 1979 the Russians have been maintaining and killing innocent civilians in Afghanistan with chemical warfare and helicopter guns. Not a word of protest appears in the pages of the Voice.

The United States Secretary of Education, William Bennett, on his recent visits to American college students and professors of leftist leanings. Unfortunately, the Voice apes the methods of Bennett's rhetoric.

The hallmark of a superior liberal arts college, as I understand it, is the ability of its students to debate and entertain a broad spectrum of political and social ideas. Often the political and social views expressed in the pages of the Voice are rigid and myopic.

Very truly yours,

Richard E. Miller

Global Peace

To the Editor:

Students for Global Peace will sponsor the Global Peace Week, November. Titled Ground Zero Week, our organization will attempts to educate the Connecticut College community about cer-

m the letter. We regret any trouble caused by our letter. Here then is the full text of the letter.

To The Editor:

I am deeply saddened that Mr. Kamara has done a great injury to the Memory of Bill Mayers. I not only read Bill Mayers' letter. We regret any trouble caused by our letter. Here then is the full text of the letter.

To The Editor:

I would like to extend an in-

for Students for Global Peace

 organizations which attempt to cloud the issues, hide the truth, or lead all actions and policies into the political arena do not need to be ridiculed by these writers. After all, the organizations ultimately ruin their own credibility and clearly ridicule themselves.

Respectfully submitted,

Mach Aron
Neal Brandes
Darwin Joyce Gerber
Sarah James
Jennifer Peace

Global Peace Executive Board

Global Peace

To the Editor:

Students for Global Peace will sponsor the Global Peace Week, November. Titled Ground Zero Week, our organization will attempts to educate the Connecticut College community about certain issues surrounding the threats of nuclear annihilation. Regardless of whether one is a liberal or a conservative, a member of Students for Global Peace or any other political party on campus, we would like to believe that all inhabitants of our world strive to live in peace.

Organizations which attempt to cloud the issues, hide the truth, or lead all actions and policies into the political arena do not need to be ridiculed by these writers. After all, the organizations ultimately ruin their own credibility and clearly ridicule themselves.

Respectfully submitted,

Mach Aron
Neal Brandes
Darwin Joyce Gerber
Sarah James
Jennifer Peace

Global Peace Executive Board
"Hold it! There's a car across the street—you sure you weren't followed, Mary?"

"NO!"

I noticed the difference. I'll air the editor.

I'm sorry. We lost lots to live for.

I'm sorry. We lost lots to live for.

There is nothing. I've noticed the difference. I'll air the editor.

I'm sorry. We lost lots to live for.

Meanwhile, Steve yelled and said very strongly:

I'm sorry. We lost lots to live for.

And at the beginning, let me add another reason.

I'm sorry. We lost lots to live for.

"If I don't, I'll sking the..."...

Somehow or another, I couldn't find a pack of other than giving your chances and climb across the next.

If I don't, I'll sking the..."...

"Heeey!!"

I have some scruples, dude.

And here we are last summer going south. Wait a minute, Irene! We went north last summer! The stupid slide's in backward!"
Conventionality

by Antonis Kamaras

The scenario is all too familiar. A university is organized, well funded band of activists expose a cause be it the free speech in South Africa, the privileges of minorities, or aniquethe rape, to mention a few. They put forth their demands: so many courses on etc., so many admissions from group x, y, z are not to be admitted. Their validity of their objectives is not subject to discussion, their views are supposed to be correct. Those who disagree with them are branded as reactionaries, racists, chauvinists. What happens when they meet with opposition is also well known. They build shanties; these constructions are as ugly and deceiving as the ideas they stand for, they occupy buildings, they molest the academic community with their shrieks which are supposed to be the voice of truth. Their vicious attack on academic liberty is disguised under the banner of "freedom of speech", resistance, which is inherently coercive. There are only two alternatives left to the academic community, when confronted with the vulgarity of a shanty or the incivility of a mob: Either they must submit to the demands of the few but brutal, or they must stand firm. "The college, thoughts, not muscles should prevail.

The first alternative is odious and blameworthy, the second, extended under such circumstances, in effect, legitimize incivility and mobocracy. The situation is founded on free iniquity, and intellectual discourse. There can be no room for those who, unwilling or unable to partake in genuine debate, enforce their own views. The only honorable and just solution is the second, the always easiest though. The use of force to counter force is understandable when presented in the fabric academicians often attract publicity. Furthermore, the imitations, when honestly and roughly treated, can be turned into heroes and portrayed as such from some perspective. Unfortunately, institutions have succumbed to these considerations: our college being one of them. Last spring, the administration gave credence to the protagonists of the Farming takeover by surrendering to their demands, and hail ing this act of submission as a welcome development for the College. So much for the Honor Code, and the integrity of the academicians.

We still have to ask ourselves what are the motives of these weeklong blockades. Why do these sloppy minds engage in such disruptive actions? They are certainly not by altruistic, as the pretensions of caring seem to imply. Rather, they are compliant with self-interest. They are not after a place because they never ar- rive at their own conclusions independently and not any well thought out accomplishment. In the end, it is contumacious that they serve, not real change.

Supporting Educators

by Victor DiGravio

American Education Editor
The College Voice

Recently I was talking with a friend of mine about various professors on campus. My friend had observed that many believed people became professors because they more or less could not find a "real job in the real world." I believe my friend used the terms "go-getters" and "world shakers" to describe what professors were not. I wrote of this conversation now because, unfortunately, I think, many Americans share this view.

When my friend made her generalization about the psychological make-up of professors I became somewhat uneasy. Leaving aside the fact that with just a few short sentences, you have described a whole profession of people who are being underachievers, there was as personal reason for my anger.

You see, my mother is a professor. She is a fine, upstanding citizen and a fifth grade teacher in the Boston Public Schools system. Now, I do not mean to compare other educators but I do know my mother became a teacher because she believed that she had the skills and knowledge to teach the children which she occupies as professionals. Proficiency and mediocrity are their trademarks. They are striving because their actions have as a para mount objective their own reputations and not any well thought out accomplishment. In the end, it is contumacious that they serve, not real change.

The Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) will be the most expensive, most complex, most dangerous project ever under- taken by the United States government. On March 23, 1983, President Reagan proposed a system that will never be able to protect us from such a nuclear attack. SDI will never be able to protect us from such a nuclear attack. If we, as Americans, allow our go in a system that would spend billions of dollars on a defense system that will never be able to protect us from such a nuclear attack, we are reducing the chance of ever signing an agreement with the Soviet government to reduce or eliminate offensive nuclear weapons. We must, as concern- ed citizens, be aware of the issue and put forth all efforts to stop the building of SDI.

The Leaky Umbrella

by Joyce Gerber
Special to The College Voice

The Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) will be the most expensive, most complex, most dangerous project ever under- taken by the United States government. On March 23, 1983, President Reagan proposed a system that will never be able to protect us from such a nuclear attack. SDI would be an extremely fragile and vulnerable system if ever completed. The mirrors, for example, could be placed out of commission by several relatively easy measures on the Soviets' part. Sand, for instance, sent into space and thrown on the mirrors would scratch the surfaces and render the system useless, according to some sources. SDI would be an extremely fragile and vulnerable system if ever completed. The mirrors, for example, could be placed out of commission by several relatively easy measures on the Soviets' part. Sand, for instance, sent into space and thrown on the mirrors would scratch the surfaces and render the system useless, according to some sources.

The initial reaction of so- me educators to this idea was to deflect accurately. Or, the Soviets could simply decrease their rockets with ashiniersurface. or the rocketsintimetodestroy them. The proposal system could in- clude lasers, battle stations, enormous mirrors, and computers all working in a space- based defensive system. Thus, SDI has been dubbed with the ti- tle. "Star Wars". SDI would be an extremely fragile and vulnerable system if ever completed. The mirrors, for example, could be placed out of commission by several relatively easy measures on the Soviets' part. Sand, for instance, sent into space and thrown on the mirrors would scratch the surfaces and render the system useless, according to some sources. SDI would be an extremely fragile and vulnerable system if ever completed. The mirrors, for example, could be placed out of commission by several relatively easy measures on the Soviets' part. Sand, for instance, sent into space and thrown on the mirrors would scratch the surfaces and render the system useless, according to some sources.
In today's increasingly modernized and technologically efficient society, it seems the only factors playing a part in influencing or guiding government initiative are the political or economic consequences of that initiative. There seems to be no role left in western culture for religion.

The traditional features of society that once governed and were held in such high esteem have lost ground. Yet, there is one country where this is still not the case, the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

In Arabia, Islam continues to be the state religion and the source of all political legitimacy. It seems the only continuing adherence to the traditional customs is upheld by the company.

Numerous complaints were made that the Coors Company was anti-women, anti-people who cannot speak English fluently, and that more improvements are expected in the future. However, for the time being, Branchini said that "for a small space, we'll get a lot" out of the addition.

London School of Economics and Political Science

A chance to study and live in London

Junior-year programs, Postgraduate Diplomas, One- Year Master's Degrees and Research Opportunities in the Social Sciences.

The wide range of subjects includes:-
Accounting and Finance • Actuarial Science • Business Studies • Economics • Econometrics
• Economic History • European Studies • Government • Health Planning • Housing • Industrial Relations • International History • International Relations • Law • Management Science • Operational Research • Politics • Population Studies • Public Administration • Regional and International Politics • Social Anthropology • Social Planning in Developing Countries • Social Work • Sociology • Statistical Methodology • Statistical and Mathematical Sciences • Theology

Application forms from:

EARN YOUR CREDITS ABRROAD.

Join the thousands of students who have earned college credits by studying abroad in CCIS programs.

INTERESTED IN?

• Compact Discs or Audio?
• Marketing?
• A Resume Builder?

Digital Sound Market Service

Does ambitious college students want to be computer representatives?

Call 1-500-223-6434 or 1-219-626-2756 9am to 9pm

SE

SPRING SEMESTER: E D U B L I N

St. Patrick's College, Maynooth
12-15 Credits
Summer Programs
All Tech Schools
Dublin

Dr. John J. McLean
Meogenic Community College
Norwich, VT 05055
886-1931 X243

College Consortium For International Studies
Features

CONN's Student Ambassadors

by Amanda Hathaway
Kathleen Trainer
The College Voice

The Admissions Office has recently developed the Student Ambassador Program to help educate prospective students about Connecticut College. Come to the Bookshop this fall to learn from their former high schools over fall break to talk to prospective students about the program. All of these students have been admitted to Connecticut College. As a student ambassador, you will have the chance to interact with these students throughout the admissions process.

Features

Connor Kercher, Admissions Counselor, said, "We and professional admissions people visit these high schools to meet with the counselors and students know that we’re professionals. When the student asks a question about college or air travel, this is either something we would ever say or any of our literature. So, therefore, you’re called a student ambassador, because you go back from your college and talk to high school students about majors or course selection."

Kercher continued, "the student ambassador can come back to the Admissions Office and find out about the admissions interview. The student ambassador can return to high school, and find out they are coming to your college returning to your high school."

"Applications come in," Kercher continued, "the student ambassador can come back to the Admissions Office and find out which of the students actually applied, so that it be some follow-up on their part. When the letters of acceptance go out, then the student ambassadors can contact back and see if any of their prospects got accepted."

The Rise and Fall Of Anarchism

by Michelle Conlin
The College Voice

Aside from the occasional sight of a tattered black leather hard-cover jacket with the inscription "ANARCHY" in red ink scarred on the back, the term Anarchism is seldom heard of or referred to today and is the exception of classroom study.

This is an appropriate year to reflect upon the failure of the Anarchist movement because it is the one hundredth anniversary of the Haymarket bombing, an event of major historical significance in the history of the Anarchist Revolution of the late nineteenth century, in which the National Guard, Police and labor unionists resulted in the trials and eventual hanging of several Anarchists.

Anarchism, as a concept, term, and ideal was misconceived and acted upon with constant contention, agitation, and persecution by the U.S. government in the late nineteenth century.

Today, a century later, the term anarchy is still sometimes misunderstood as an ideal that poisons the public, violence, terrorism, lack of control, and anarchy in society. When, in fact, anarchism paints a picture of an ideal utopia based on freedom from government control.

What exactly is Anarchism? Like most modern ideologies, values of the French Revolution: liberty, equality, and fraternity. More than that, Anarchism, sometimes stresses the value of individual liberty; more than liberalism, it emphasizes individualism. "Anarchism then really stands for the liberation of the human mind from the domination of religion; the liberation of the human body from the domination of property; the liberation from the shackles and restraint of government," said Emma Goldman, a major leader in the attempted anarchist counter-revolution.

Today, anarchism, as a political ideology, sometimes carries with it a negative connotation. Yet, the Anarchist Revolution of the late nineteenth century has major historical significance because it served and continues to serve as a model to the American capitalist system, despite the fact that it failed as an organized form of revolution.

Understanding the attempted Anarchist Revolution is great value today because it is one of the many historical examples that has shown that the revolutionary destruction of an authoritarian state to create a more concievable society in its place. The freedom of a society from a coercive force is an evolutionary process. It can be obtained effectively by focusing on the areas that have failed under the present system, rather than overthrowing it completely and neglecting all laws as Anarchists proposed.

The practical application of the revolutionary ideals through the methods of volunteerism and cooperation are effective means of moving away from the authoritarian government by spreading the roots of the revolutionary anarchy into a real projected that would prevent chaos.

By Kent Marrs
The College Voice

Defending Spending

With subatomic ships and Electric Boat right next door, it is not surprising that many people in the New London community are concerned with national defense spending.

On October 28, in the chapel library, Daniel Peppard, Associate Professor of Economics, spoke on the relationship between military spending and the economy. His lecture was the second in a series of lectures sponsored by Options, dealing with avoiding nuclear war.

According to Peppard, an initial cut in defense spending would increase unemployment by 5.5% percent or, roughly translated, 9,000 people would be out of work. These unskilled workers would have a great deal of difficulty finding new jobs.

On the other hand, a major drawback of defensive spending is "that since 25 percent of all research and development spending this country is defense-related, we have a significant proportion of research and development spending that is not going to improve the production of the civilian sector," said Peppard.

He hypothesizes that the lack of growth in the economy is caused by the diversion of scientific away from the civilian, in defense research. A cut in defense spending could leave thousands unemployed and military facilities unused.

A possible solution would be to convert these facilities into consumer factories.

However, with this solution arises the major problems. First, what could be done with facilities like Electric Boat developed for purely military industry? Second, while converting to civilian industry, where could the laid-off workers find work? Moreover, the continuously changing market makes it nearly impossible to predict what future production may be demanded by the time the reconversion is completed.

In defense spending hurting the economy? Freshman Julian Schwab, who attended the lecture, said it is. "(Defense spending) is hurting the economy because it's not making the economy productive -- (the money) is not going anywhere. It's just sitting in a bomb."

Sophomore Roger Plassner agreed with Schwab. "The idea of spending ten-digit figures for technology that will destroy us if it is ever used is ludicrous. We should be spending money to preserve and enrich life in America; instead we are facilitating its extinction."

"I just think that although defense spending, money spent, takes up a large amount of income and resources, it's not very efficient," said, "it also creates jobs for people -- it drains the economy but boosts our employment."
null
Orchestre national de Lyon

by Brian Field
The College Voice

The Orchestre National de Lyon, conducted and directed by Serge Baudou, performed its first North American concert at Palmer Auditorium last Saturday. The program included the following romantic/early contemporary symphonic works from primarily French composers.

The program opened with the Symphony No. 3 by Arthur Honegger, a unique composer who, along with French composers Milhaud, Poulenc, Auric, Daruy, and Tailleferre constitute "Les Six." Composed in 1945-1946, this third symphony contains liturgical names to each of its three movements as well as Italian tempo markings.

The first movement (Allegro marcato) is entitled Dies Irae (Day of Wrath). Opening with a great string glissando and a solid volley of brass, the beginning of this movement is powerful and almost suggests the Berlin "Requiem." To the second third of the first movement, the color of the piece lean away from the menacing introduction and point toward the contemporary, then slowly melts back into some of the liturgical, romantic motivs.

The second movement (Adagio assai) is almost a piano solo with a very slow and continuous movement. The piece had a waltz-like quality and was performed with a brilliant sonority. Seasoned with snare drum rolls and a quick rhythmic symphonic finale, Presto, was filled with much of the same flashy piano runs and the "Gershwin" harmony of the first movement. Roge was master of the instrument necessary to perform this piece with great passion, and it was performed in a very good style.

The third movement (Allegro vivace) is the most interesting. At first glance, the piece seems to be a simple form of music written in a more modern style. But, as was the case with Baudou's almost dance-like conducting, the piece comes alive and, at times, brings the audience to a moment of pure excitement. The piece features a very good variety of early 19th century symphonic music. Not only were they performed with excitement, but also, due to Baudou's fine abilities, shaped into a very expressive and teaching musical treat.

Hard Core Halloween

By Doug Shank
Operations Director
The College Voice

Anyone who wandered into Harkness living room on Friday night, Oct. 31st, witnessed a somewhat different Halloween party.

Sure, there were the normal Halloween party amenities: beer, costumes, people, and general craziness, but there was also a dance.

"The true slammers came out," said sophomore Jamie Forbes, Slam dancing is exactly what the term infers: a group of individuals assemble on a dance floor and slam into each other as fast as you can.

There is no such thing as a wall flower at a slam dance party. Everyone in the general vicinity is likely to be pulled into the interminable Slam dancing to the top of any party's activities and it takes an interesting time.

Harkness on Halloween night was no exception. The evening began with the Violent Barretts who were followed by a duo of John Davis and John Howard. Though the talents of these bands must be appreciated and noted, they did not play "Hardcore." True "Hardcore" play, is a dance, a lighting, brain piercing, ear polishing type of music which causes you to slam directly on the dance floor.

Phil's Head and the Donahues, the third and final stage, played bands in the style of "Hardcore" it's purest form. The meeting looking for a confronta-

Ginny Vancil, Houseoorl of the Abbey, said, "It makes me see that SGA can be so con- tradictory in it's policies. For years they've been trying to get people to attend their meetings and finally when they do at-

"It didn't matter what I did, I was embarrassed if I let them vote on the motion or if I didn't. All I wanted was for the House to take the information on Coors back to their dorms and get a sense of what the students wanted," said Gyebi.

Pacem attempt to represent a growing militancy and frustration in the man, world, and the transformation of human beings into programmed robots.

"There is no such thing as a wallflower at a slam dance party. Everyone in the general vicinity is likely to be pulled into the interminable Slam dancing to the top of any party's activities and it takes an interesting time. Harkness on Halloween night was no exception. The evening began with the Violent Barretts who were followed by a duo of John Davis and John Howard. Though the talents of these bands must be appreciated and noted, they did not play "Hardcore." True "Hardcore" play is a dance, a lighting, brain piercing, ear polishing type of music which causes you to slam directly on the dance floor.

Phil's Head and the Donahues, the third and final stage, played bands in the style of "Hardcore" it's purest form. The meeting looking for a confrontation.

"Ginny Vancil, Houseoorl of the Abbey, said, "It makes me see that SGA can be so contradictory in it's policies. For years they've been trying to get people to attend their meetings and finally when they do attend, this is how they're treated.""

"It didn't matter what I did, I was embarrassed if I let them vote on the motion or if I didn't. All I wanted was for the House to take the information on Coors back to their dorms and get a sense of what the students wanted," said Gyebi.

"If [Gyebi] can ignore past procedure for his own personal reasons, then why couldn't he ignore procedure this time as well?" asked Law.

"Your people," Gyebi said to Law after the break-up of the demonstration, "came to the meeting looking for a confrontation."

"So you're telling me that SGA can be so contradictory?" asked the House President from the floor.

"Yes, sir," Gyebi replied, "SGA is the first time that SGA has been brought up as a topic of discussion."

"Terror in Tulea" could be on the agenda.

"It didn't matter what I did, I was embarrassed if I let them vote on the motion or if I didn't. All I wanted was for the House to take the information on Coors back to their dorms and get a sense of what the students wanted," said Gyebi.

"If [Gyebi] can ignore past procedure for his own personal reasons, then why couldn't he ignore procedure this time as well?"

"Your people," Gyebi said to Law after the break-up of the demonstration, "came to the meeting looking for a confrontation."

"SGA doesn't know how to handle confrontation," said Gyebi. "They keep coming back to the same thing over and over again."

"So you're telling me that SGA can be so contradictory?" asked the House President from the floor.

"Yes, sir," Gyebi replied, "SGA is the first time that SGA has been brought up as a topic of discussion."

"Terror in Tulea" could be on the agenda.

"I think it was a very cathartic experience. Now we have a group of people who know how to vote, and not just do it for show."

"They're people who let loose and allowed themselves to slam. The evening was very enjoyable."

"Hopefully we'll have another show soon."
Art Opening

By Sharon Kahan
The College Voice

Once again, the Cummings Art Center at Connecticut College is host to an array of professional art work, this time in the area of photography and watercolors. Running from November 2 to December 12, the show highlights the photographic work of Roger Crossgrove, Bevery Dickinson, David Katzenstein, and Jeff Silverthorne, in addition to the watercolors of Judah Randall.

The photographs, especially those by Roger Crossgrove and Jeff Silverthorne, are quite impressive, with a sense of composition and a careful selection of elements that make the photographs stand out. The watercolors, on the other hand, are a bit more subtle, with colors that blend together in a harmonious way.

Doubt, there was a part of each of them that heaved a sigh of relief when the closing notice was posted. By the end of the year, all the students have left, and the room is once again empty. But the art work remains, a testament to the talent of the artists who created it.

In Next Week's Issue - review of Preservation Hall.
Women's Basketball
Coach's Preview

by Bill Liou
Head Coach

The Connecticut College Women's Basketball Team will be looking to win its third straight NIC Division III Championship this season, and with excellent returning players and incoming talent, they have the potential to do so.

The goals of this year's team are to establish a strong inside game complemented by a successful fast break. CONN will be without graduated seniors Laura Brunner, Jill Zawacki, and Suzanne Murti this season. Brunner, a three-time All-American, is CONN's all-time leading scorer with 1,509 points and 1,009 rebounds. Zawacki was an Honorable Mention All-American and along with Brunner, earned All-New England Honors twice.

The backcourt combination of Senior co-captains Tracy Finer, (2nd team All-American), and Lynne Quintal, (Honorable Mention All-American), are expected to lead the Camels in 1986-87. Finer, the team point guard, will direct the offense and lead the fast break. Quintal, last year's top scorer (14.3 points per game), is an excellent outside shooter and a good rebounder from the guard position.

Sophomore Wendy Merk and Junior Beth McKiernan should control the forward positions. Merk is leading returning rebounder and should be a force underneath the basket. McKiernan will be relied on for smart defensive play and capable outside shooting.

Pam Mitchell, a 6'2" Freshman should step into the center position and with some hard work, she has the potential to achieve the level of Brunner.

Strong contributions are expected from Sophomore Kathy Matthews, a versatile player who handles the ball well and can lead the fast break; and 6'4" Junior transfer Bridget Lawrence, who should add depth in the frontcourt.

Sophomore guards Betsy MacDonald and Jennifer Fulcher have shown tremendous improvement this year and should play key roles in the backcourt for CONN.

The Lady Camels open their season on November 24 at home, versus Simmons. The team will be aiming to continue its 16-game Division III winning streak, which is currently the nation's longest.

Senior co-captains Tracey Finer, Cathy Irons, Kirstie Rice, John Pitt, Cathy Irons, Kirstie Rice, and co-captains Donna Peterson and Margaret Douglast graduated. The group from last year hold 14 team records and their departure represents a severe loss to the team.

In spite of this, the team should do well because of the arrival of a group of newcomers, including two seniors: Julie Fredford and Caroline Ratcliffe; sophomores Cesca Genio, Anne Scatton, and Tracy Adams, and 10 freshmen: Lisa Allegretto, Rachel Arp, Amanda Geller, Galen Grossman, Anne Limura, Cindi Lehman, Anne McLaren, Niki Naviaser, Sarah Rosenblatt, and Louise Van Order.

The team's major goal this year is to have each team member achieve a personal best time for at least one event. If that happens, the team should be able to place 10th or better at the New Englands, which represents an improvement over previous performances and the dual meet season should be a winning one.

Senior Auction

Wednesday, November 12th at 7:30

Dean Gene Gallagher: Auctioneer
Free door prizes for the first 100 people there

The Action is at the...
Sports

Men's Soccer
Heartbreaking Finale

by Gregory Long
The College Voice

In the rain-soaked finals of the New England Region of the ECAC tournament on Sunday, CONN's Men's Soccer Team lost a heartbreaking match to a persistent Middlebury squad, 2-1 in overtime.

CONN had reached the finals by besting fourth-seeded Westminster State on Friday, 2-1 on goals by Freshman Ken Geddes. Sophomore Todd Langevin and Sophomore Jeff Taplin assisted on goals by Freshman Ken Geddes. Sophomore Todd Langevin and Sophomore Jeff Taplin assisted on goals by Freshman Ken Geddes. Sophomore Todd Langevin and Sophomore Jeff Taplin.

CONN's Head Coach, Matt Schoppke, assisted on goals by Freshman Ken Geddes. Sophomore Todd Langevin and Sophomore Jeff Taplin.

Coach's Preview

I'm looking forward to this year more than any other in my coaching career. We have a lot to prove to ourselves after last year. After being considered one of New England's best teams for six years, we slipped below .500. Our team goal is to think we have the talent to do it. The McCabe Tournament opens on November 2, the Connec-ticut Intramural Flag Football Super Bowl was played on Chapel Field. Our team goal is to reach our goal of making the ECAC Division 3 South playoffs and we hope to have another crack at the title game in March.

The game promised to be ex-citing, matching the second-ranked Smith-Bruzick/Branford Team up against the Park/Lar-rabe/Freeman squad. Though ranked only fifth in the league of eight teams, the Smith-Bruzick/Branford team managed to fight its way into the Super Bowl, winning 1-0 in overtime.

Coach's Preview

Junior Davvid Schott is penciled in to replace former co-captain Devin McGann as the point guard. The shooting guard spot is wide open. Last year's starter, sophomore Pat Violette, broke his wrist playing soccer and will be out until January. Challengers for the spot include junior Terrice Powell, sophomores Kevin Bellavance and Frank Lombardo and freshman De'rick Small. Sophomores David Blair, 6'9", and Bill Brewer are also expected to be major contributors.

For the first time in many years, the New England basketball picture is cloudy. There is no pre-season consensus on the region's top team. I would not be surprised to see us make a bid to crack the New England Top Ten.

On December 6 & 7, we will host the Whaling City Ford Tournament. In the opening round CONN plays Safford University of Benton and Coast Guard plays Curry College. On January 9 & 10 we travel to Union College to play in their tournament. CONN opens up against WPI and Union will play Gettysburg.

On January 16 & 17 we will play Eastern Connecticut in the first round of the Liberty Bank Classic at Wesleyan University. Trinty will play Wesleyan in the other first round game.

For the first time in many years, the New England basketball picture is cloudy. There is no pre-season consensus on the region's top team. I would not be surprised to see us make a bid to crack the New England Top Ten.

Coach's Preview

Women's Gymnastics

Conn College Women's Gymnastics Team

CONN's Women's Gymnastics Team has the potential to be strong again this year. The team is working very hard so far in the pre season. There has been additional conditioning and weight training this year. Our Juniors are equals as experienced and twisted. Fritz Trey frey holds the all-time record with ten individual titles including third place in balance beam and All-Around. Kon Elissauer has two titles, in including a second place in vaulting and a team record score of 9.8 on vaulting. Frey and Elissauer have 12 New England and ECAC individual titles between them.

Sophomore Alison Hobart distinguished herself last year by winning four individual titles in the New England Championship, including second place All-Around. Her name was named to the All-New England Team.

We have two Freshmen. Man-dy Harshorne and Debbie Lan-don who show great promise in their first season and come from fine high school gymnastics programs.

I think we have all the ingredi-ents for a fine season. It will depend on each person reaching her potential, good health and a pinch of luck.

More coaches' previews on page 11.