ENDOWMENT RETURNS ENCOURAGING.

Thanksgiving Day, President Marshall made an announcement con cerning the status of the Endowment Fund as raised by the students. He left us with the impression that the left us with the impression that the vital thing is not the rather modest sum of $14,000, which has come into the treasury of the College since June 4th, but that this total is the result of the effort of many students and mem-bers of the faculty over a relatively brief period. The college asked its im-mediate constituents to undertake the underwriting of certain bonds sounderwriting of certain bonds, so-called, and proposed a period of five months, which meant, indeed, inten-sive work, and it is splendidly to the credit of all who have succeeded, and a fine illustration of the spirit of the place that so many definitely mode place, that so many definitely made their declaration to do this thing. More than twenty persons have com-

More than twenty persons have com-pletely fulfilled their obligation and are going on to increase it by more. Those objects, which President Mar-shall sought in the proposal have been definitely attained: 1. A demonstration of the faith of the College itself in itself. 2. A demonstration of the capacity of the students and faculty to raise money in honorable and dignified money in honorable and dignified ways without conducting a dramatic, specialized and highly organized and expensive campaign. The $14,000 rep-resents specific returns from only part of the student body and faculty; others are still working on their functor. are still working on their quotas, it being understood the time has been in-definitely extended.

This demonstration of loyalty and ability and confidence in the College ability and confidence in the College becomes a basis for urging a one hun-dred per cent. subscription to the fund by all students, faculty and officers of the College, and when that is accom-plished we shall have a warrant to go to the public at large to help us after we of the college itself have done all in our power first.

"COLLEGE LIFE AND FRIENDSHIPS," TOPIC OF DR. HANNAH MORRIS.

SILVER BAY LEADER WILL SPEAK INFORMALLY.

Dr. Hannah Morris, head of the Medical Bureau in the Central Y. W. C. A., in New York City, will give an informal talk under the auspices of the Service League on Friday evening, December 9th, in the gymnasium at 7 o'clock. She was one of the most in-teresting leaders at Silver Bay last summer, where her charming personsummer, where her charming person-ality made her extremely popular. It is a tradition at this conference that every college represented there adopts one speaker for its Honorary member; Dr. Morris was the one chosen to bring good luck to C. C.

She will talk on matters relating directly to college life, such as campus friendships; accordingly it would be greatly to the interest of every student to hear her. Her special purpose in coming here is to help the girls in their life at college; for this reason she is glad to answer individual ques-Continued on page 4, column 3.

DELIGHTFULLY INTIMATE TALK ON WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS.

MR. ROOD GIVES US GLIMPSE OF "MAN OF LETTERS."

When we go to a lecture, we do not want the table pounded, nor do we want the table pounded, nor do we want accusing fingers pointed at us. We want to be entertained, amused and informed at the same time. So, after hearing Mr. Rood speak, we de-cided that Convocation is a very ex-cellent institution that should be better supported by students who are interested not in knitting or sleeping Interested not in Knitting or sleeping but in the words of the speaker. Mr. Rood's easy, informal style was truly delightful and whether we had been interested in William Dean Howells before or not, he suddenly became of great importance to us. Mr. Bood's little interact of heav to form Rood's little intimate story of how he met Mr. Howells in a small French restaurant near Union Square in New York and how he introduced himself, gave an excellent idea of the approachability of the man.

The concrete example taken from the case of Quality of Mercy when Mr. Howells made a trip to Montreal to ascertain the methods employed in track-ing criminals there, made probably more impression upon us regarding his meticulous care in regard to details in his books than would a lengthy lecture on "Exquisite Care Displayed in Details."

The effect made by Mr. Rood is per haps most clearly shown by the large attendance at his exceedingly inter-esting informal talk on subjects of interest to amateur writers given in the evening.

MISS LOVELL TO TAKE PART IN "LITTLE WOMEN"

The New London Branch of the American Association of University Women will present a dramatized ver-sion of Miss Alcott's "Little Women," Saturday, December 10th, matinée and evening, at the Vocational School Au-ditorium Dichete en étre at the school Auditorium. Tickets are fifty cents and seventy-five cents. ### FORMATION OF INTERNA-TIONAL RELATIONS CLUB.

Baron Korff's visit has suggested the means of enlightening our ignorance of international matters. A group of C. C. students organized recently, under the auspices of the Institute of International Education, for study and discussion of the problems of the Disarmament Conference. Next Sun-day evening this group will meet with Professor Lawrence in Room 216, New London Hall. It is the Club's intention to take up the study of China under the Republic, after the ending of the Disarmament Conference.

The Institute of International Edu-cation (a child of the Carnegie Foundation) is to send speakers from time to time to assist the Club in its study. It also furnishes syllabi and reference books.

Every student in Connecticut Col-ge is urged to become actively aslege sociated with this Club.

IS YOUTH BLIND?

"What a pity it is that we have to what a pity it is that we have to wait till we are old before we can en-joy the deepest and sweetest pleasures of life. When we are young, we are always worried about things. . . Our hopes and ambitions blind our eyes to the things actually present be-fore us." Thus read a few brief some fore us." Thus read a few brief sen-tences in a recent number of the Atlantic. Is the author right in saying that youth is blind to the immediate possibilities of the world?

Young persons are generally thought to be alert, keen, eager to accomplish. Yet it is true that all their achievement seems to have a direct bearing on some far-distant dream. To be sure, it has been generally conceded by kind and gracious folk that dreams have a definite place in the universe. We ac-cept that concession. Yet there are other folk who preach the necessity of attention to present conditions only.

Therefore, since eminent men have thought the matter worthy of consid-eration, we, too, might start a little, "personally-conducted" tour of inves-tigation into the regions of our own consciousness to see whether we, as young persons, are blind to the exist-ing facts of life. If we walk from one class-room and into another with no slightest effort to discover the relation of the lectures either to one another or to life, there is a possibility that we are fulfilling the conditions of blindness

Again, if we daily wander through Again, if we daily wander through the Library and never stop to glance at a newspaper or magazine, we might imagine ourselves ready to join the "Ranks of the Blind." Finally, if we remain totally unaware of the fact that there are still dozens of ways in which college—life, spirit, atmosphere —can be improved, then we certainly are blind, mentally and physically. Plans for the future have their place, but that place should not fill the entire

Plans for the future have their place, but that place should not fill the entire horizon of any young person. Life is uncertain; we may never see "the future." Moreover, if we cannot utilize "today," neither will "the future" have any value. As Horace always said, Carpe diem. '23.

"BULLETIN BOARD BLUES." Our old friend the Bulletin Board is again clamoring for attention. Time was, and not so very long ago either, when this "information bureau" of ours was arranged in orderly columns with proper headings and with papers of a uniform size. But now the head-ings, which used to mark off sections for each class of notices, are gone, or covered with posters or pictures which crowd the class notices down into the lower or less prominent part of the Board. The uniform papers are re-Board. The uniform papers are re-placed by papers of many sizes, rang-ing from three inches to two feet in length. To be sure, a placard stares out from the center of the Board in-forming all that no paper should be used except that provided, and that every notice must be dated. You look for paper, and find only a weak little string dangling like a fishline on one side and a similar weak string dangfor paper, and nud only a weak little string dangling like a fishline on one side and a similar weak string dang-ling at the other end, this one baited with a long pencil having no point. The neat columns have changed to a promiscuous array of notices without regard for order. Why cannot the ad-vertisement and pictures occupy an al-lotted section at some less conspicuous place on the board, leaving the places of honor for more important items? This disorderly arrangement has its evil effects, for it not only causes one to overlook important notices, but it causes, also, a waste of time, and, finally, it is liable to give to an out-sider a wrong impression of the way in which Connecticut College does things. ### CURRENT EVENTS.

It is the opinion of many editors throughout this country and Europe, that the Hughes' program for scrap-ping capital ships is not sufficient.

Aerial warfare and chemical gas de struction are not considered in the program, and their possibilities are enormous. The Hughes' program proin the enormous. The Hughes' program pro-vided that within three months after the acceptance of the program the three principal navies of the world would number, in capital ships: United States 18; Great Britain 22; Japan 10. Recent developments in the Washington conference have placed the ratios of the navies at 10, 10 and 6. Japan page mode a strong protect 6. Japan has made a strong protest for her ratio to be increased to 7. To the argument of the Hearst papers that the Hughes program is uncon-stitutional, the New York World re-plies that "for more than 103 years the naval strength of the United States on the Greet Likes has been limited by a the Great Lakes has been limited by a treaty, regardless of the constitutional power of Congress."

Next to the proposition by Hughes for disarmament, perhaps the most im-portant event at the Washington Conference was the announcement by Dr. Sze, China's representative, of Ten Points, indicating her attitude in for-eign and domestic affairs. Editors are led to believe from Dr. Sze that China does not coordider her territory to be does not consider her territory to be bounded by the Great Wall, but to in-clude Shantung, Mongolia, Manchuria and Tibet. She calls for open diplo-macy; for the abolition of extra-terri-toriality; and relief from tariff auton-omy omy.

omy. A contributor to the Constantinople "Orient" outlines a plan for taking Constantinople, the greatest interna-tional city in the world out of the pre-carious web of politics. He suggests that it be made a neutral city under the government of an international commission composed of delegates from three countries known to have no aims for its political control; and further that it could conveniently be made the seat or capital of the League of Nations. "Constantinople is certain of a great commercial future. Lying of a great commercial future. Lying as it does at the gateway of two con-tinents and at the union of two great seas, its possibilities are limitless. Under a neutral, just and stable gov-ernment and as the seat of the League of Nations, it should itself become one of the most important factors in preserving the peaceful stability of the world."

EXCHANGES.

Goucher-This college firmly established a cherished tradition when it held its third annual Thanksgiving held its third annual manusgiving dinner in the Gymnasium on Satur-day night, November 19th. Speeches were given by the faculty, and by the eldest and youngest daughters of the so-called "Goucher Family." Princess Tsianina, the famous Amer-ican Indian marga songano and Charles refiness Islanna, the famous Amer-ican Indian mezzo-soprano, and Charles Wakefield Cadman, composer and pianist, appeared in their All-American Program of music and songs in the Goucher Auditorium on November 22nd.

Bryn Mawr-The Sophomore class

Bryn Mawr—The Sophomore class very successfully presented to the class of 1925, Maeterlinck's "Interior" and Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion." Mrs. Amelia McCudden, the British war-mother who came to attend the burial of the unknown soldier on No-vember 11th, visited Bryn Mawr recent-ly. While there Mrs. McCudden planted a tree on the campus.

Wharton School—Final exams are a thing of the past in the Wharton School of the University of Pennsyl-vania. Dean Johnson believes that the time can be better spent in co-ordinate class work rather than in pre-paring for exams. Two weeks of each semester will be saved in which more profitable knowledge can be gained by the students.—From the Radcliffe News. News.

FOG.

I sit by the fire and dry my hair. And watch the gray fog creeping in, Through the mist there drifts a mournful wail,

A warning of peril, distant, thin.

I sit by the fire and dry my hair In all the comfort and quiet of home, But a thick, damp cloud hides the waters where

The men of the sea and of ships must roam.

I sit by the fire and dry my hair, 1 sit by the hre and dry my hair.
And think of your eyes with their haunting pain.
Oh, to be shut away from them In the danger, the fog, and the pattering rain.

LOCAL CUSTOMS.

The very best way to discover a local custom is to disregard it, uninlocal custom is to disregard it, unin-tentionally or otherwise. You move into town; innocently, you clean house on Thursday. The neighbors hear the whir-r-r of the vacuum, they see the floor mop waved madly from a rear window; by these signs they know you are cleaning. But they cannot believe it, can not imagine such a thing possible, cleaning on Thursday. That afternoon they send a delegation to call. She comes into your brown living room, all shining and bright with waxed floors, polished fire irons and a huge bowl of yellow jonquils. She sits on the extreme edge of a fire-side chair, made deep and soft for comfort's sake, and seriously chatters about the price of eggs, your new hat from New York, the length of skirts. You wait patiently for the real object of the cell to the price of eggs. You wait patiently for the real object of the call to make itself apparent. of of the call to make itself apparent. "Having guests from the city? Saw you cleaning today. Look all spic-and-span, don't you?" You gravely assure her that you are not having week-end guests from the city, that you merely added a little vacuum sweeping and floor-waxing to your usual morning routine. She looked puzzled; she asserted weakly, "But it was cleaning," and went away. The neighborhood buzzed its disap-proval over the telephone, at its dinner proval over the telephone, at its dinner tables, in the markets. You heard things yourself; the maid heard things yourself, the maid heard things; you imagined more things. Then Saturday came and the village cleaned. It put its rugs on the lawns; its gardeners swept them once up, once down on the wrong side, once up, once down on the right. It pulled up its shades; it pinned back its curtains and opened the windows wide. It scrubbed its cellar stairs, its kitchens, its refrigerators. It "washed down" the tiling in the bath room; it wiped the dust from the electric light bulbs; it brought forth the ancestral silver and polished it bright with paste bought at the annual church fair, for the aid of the Missionary Society. It sent the children out to "tidy up" the wards of Sunday. It statis brown yards for Sunday. It ate its brown bread, its beans with pork, its apple sauce and crullers; it bathed and went to bed.

Sunday morning, coming down their Sunday morning, coming down their clean steps, in their clean clothes, from their clean homes, they glance disdainfully at you—you the heretic, who had presumed to clean on Thurs-day, and such a cleaning—merely a frantic rush of an electric cleaner, thru' the house, a little dusting, all finished! Hump! You live there longer: you learn

Inished! Hump! You live there longer; you learn more.—People make calls, formal calls, on newcomers; you are expected to serve refreshments, it is customary. But the kind of refreshments makes all the difference in the world—or the village. You must not you find by sad village. You must not, you find by sad experience, serve anything to drink, save lemonade or home-made root save lemonade or home-made root beer; the men may look longingly; but the women raise eyebrows, purse lips and assure you that "they don't drink." You shrink before their eyes and bring out grape juice. Then, too, after "May Storms" comes housecleaning. You, poor ig-norant soul, look on with dismay while "they" whitewash the hen houses, clean attics and cellars, paint kitchens, come out the firenlaces wash the curscrub out the fireplaces, wash the cur-tains and beat the rugs. They meet you in town, flinging a remark about "House cleaning" at you as they run to the store for more paint as they run to the store for more paint or scrubbing powder or canned tongue. You sit at home and read in absolute complacency. Then, as the entire neighborhood bustles in unison, a sus-picion enters your mind. "Ought you not house clean, too?" But your attic is almost bare; your cellar is always clean and you have the curtains laundered when they begin to look rumpled. The suspicion grows; you are getting visibly worried. You search for a ladder and a can of white paint. The telephone rings. You an-swer it; the woman next door rumbles, "Well, I'm finished at last and I'm swer it; the woman next door rumbles, "Well, I'm finished at last and I'm dead! How are you getting on?" You murmur that you haven't, that is, you can't, well really, you aren't doing any this year. She sniffs and says "Of course!" You firmly decide—then and there—never to house clean. You go back to your brown living room with its cheerful gold curtains sit in your deen cheerful gold curtains, sit in your deep fireside chair built for comfort, and contemplate upon the inexplicable cus-toms of the Village. The Christmas party this year will be held on Dec. 14, on account of the concert on Dec. 15, Mary Snodgrass has charge of the dramatics for the evening, and in addition, suitable mus-ical numbers are being arranged.

Miss Lovell is the only faculty rep-resentative in the play Little Women, which is to be given by the A. S. A. of New London. She is to take the part of Grandfather Laurence, and as we have already seen her as the elderly gentleman in "The Garrotters" and know how well she did, we are assured that the play as far as she is conthat the play, as far as she is con-cerned, will be a success.

A QUESTION.

Without the pane lies darkness, Thick, black night reaching long groping arms Into the crevices.

Within, soft firelight flickers on the walls. A man laughs low, a woman croons, A wee lad kneels to lisp his evening prayer.

Will the black shadows slink without the pane, Or must they enter here?

Rivalry is keen now, in the matter of raising individual quotas for endowof raising individual quotas for endow-ment. If it isn't hair-nets, its shirt-waists—or wool. We suggest that the male members of our campus com-munity may reap large financial bene-fits by dispensing with hair cuts for a time. The charming effect produced would considerably enhance the dig-nity of their office.

The Crown certainly rolled in the shekels last week.

At 8.25 a. m., one day last week, every class in New London Hall sat spellbound while the pointers of the various clocks sped madly around the dials as in a frantic effort to make up for lost time.

We shout for joy, we also sing, for there really is to be a Faculty-Senior-Soccer game. The Seniors simply Soccer game. The Seniors simply would not graduate before winning one more game. And besides it is said that Dr. Leib is prepared to exhibit even more speed than he has shown on previous occasions, and that Miss Lovell has developed a remarkable capacity for kicking goals.
