CAMPUS SAFETY AND J BOARD HEARINGS ON THE RISE

Since the beginning of this academic year, Campus Safety Reports and Judicial Board Hearings have been on the rise. Despite this remarkable trend, Campus Safety Officers have not been seeking out "violators or critical activity anywhere so that they have tofile reports.

According to Associate Dean of Student Life, Anne Hopkins Cress, "There have been no changes in the system, no additional searches, no increase in number of officers, nothing really different at all. There is, however, been an increase of about 15-20% attend the number of reported incidents, which is actually about 15-20 more students than usual for this time of year."

Cumin Skeels, ‘04, Judicial Board Chair, confirms, "There has been no change in any of the Campus Safety Policies. There has actually been a slight decrease in incidents reported, and an increase in student reports."

Skeels also showed a report that was circulating campus about whether or not officers are paid on "voluntary" by such students. "There is absolutely no truth to this."Skeels are paid for their work, which has nothing to do with how many students they write up.

Drinking in dorm rooms seems to be widespread and unpreventable, even with the increase of campus safety write-ups. While most students are not usually aware of drinking in a college environment, some feel that there is a lack of personal responsibility. Paul Strifling, ’96, stated, "In the Connecticut College atmosphere, kids are told that kids are going to drink regardless of college regulations, and the result will be more write-ups and J Board, Hearings."

Another student notes that a shortage of off campus housing could potentially lead more underage drinking in dorms. Nune Dzoyke, ’04, remarked, "There are in which the majority of the students that live in dorm rooms, and off campus housing is minimal, underage drinking in the dorms becomes inevitable due to the lack of alternatives social scenes for students under the age of 21."

Alex Santamaria, Senior Class President, accepts the fact that students drink on campus, while also taking concern for the safety of his fellow classmates. "I don’t really have a problem if you’re going to kick back with your roommates and a couple Zoinks, but the fact is, too many students in this school don’t know how to drink responsibly and that needs to be addressed."

Frisco House Fellow, Ryan Hoon-Ready. "Woodward also expressed concerns for students' safety. Woodward stated, "Under-aged drinking and related incidents appear to be the least that I’ve ever seen in the four years that I’ve been Here. I believe it’s a matter of individual responsibility level, more so than that of the administration."

The bottom line is, college students drink, whether they are of age or not. Even with the increase in Campus Safety Reports, and J Board, Hearings, it does not seem as though people are taking the issue as seriously as it should be."

Noah Greenberg, President, of the College Enormous Exam, a board that administers the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) in high schools nationwide, is introducing radical changes to the standardized test. Every year millions of high school students take the SATs, which are a key component of the nation’s college admissions’ evaluations.

Complementary to SAT 1 is known as two main component: a verbal section, which contains analogies, sentence completion, and reading passages, and a math section. Each section is scored on a scale from 200-800. The new SAT will be divided up by student, as many students are not taking the SAT and SAT II exams. Furthermore, the writing section will be included on all SAT exams.

Increase in write-ups shows students’ disrespect for campus community

The increase in Campus Safety Reports and Juvenile Based Warnings should send the scrutiny of Con students. This trend is not the result of a change in policy, as is shown in the College’s social notice: the realm of the student body’s growing amount of disrespect and callousness towards the college’s laws and other members of the Con community.

Unfortunately, disrespect and callousness have become increasingly evident since the beginning of this academic year. Incidents of vandalism have been prevalent and occurring to many structures, yielding damage costs of up to fifteen hundred dollars. In the third month of school, an inordinate amount of graffiti, littering and physical destruction of campus furniture has occurred throughout campus. Larceny in Harris has also seen an increase, meaning that students choose to steal from classmates who are situated in their room. This growth of distress is bound to continue, as the growth of social issues is bound to continue.

In the light of the increase in vandalism and immorality on our campus, I would like to share my thoughts on the current issue and its effect on the campus community.

On Forks, Anger, and Connections...

In the third month of school, an inordinate amount of vandalism, graffiti, littering and physical destruction of campus structures have been prevalent and devastating to many students. Yielding damage costs of up to fifteen hundred dollars. It is a result of the apathy that is everywhere on our campus.

Unfortunately, these actions are often motivated by a desire to cause chaos and create a sense of fear. Some may believe that these actions are a form of protest or a response to the policies or actions of the College administration. However, it is important to recognize that these actions are not only destructive but also a violation of the College’s policies.

The impact of this behavior is not limited to material damage. It also affects the psychological well-being of students. The presence of vandalism and immorality can create a sense of fear and anxiety, and it can also lead to a sense of alienation among students.

The College administration has taken steps to address this issue. They have increased security measures and have implemented more stringent policies on proclamations of writing and vandalism. These actions are necessary to protect the College’s property and to maintain a safe and respectful learning environment.

I urge everyone to be mindful of their actions and to show respect for our campus community. Let us work together to create a safe and inclusive environment for all.

Sincerely,

Umoja Executive Board 2003-2004

On Forks, You’re Missing the Point: UMQA Responds

Dear Campus Community,

Umass, Connecticut College’s African Diaspora student organization, would like to add their voices to the fork incident. It is unconscionable that we as students of color do EVERYDAY at this institution without question, and yet we are subjected to this level of abuse.

Two weeks ago, the president of the Black Student Union, Umoja, planned a campus wide observance of Black Solidarity Day. In addition to a candlelight march outside of Harris, members of the campus community were asked to wear all black, hold a red and green ribbon, and perhaps most notably, refrain from using forks at dinner.UMQA planned to bring these issues to the discussion held by the Harris dining hall that occurred Monday, November 3, 2003 in recognition of Black Solidarity Day. In addition to a candlelight march outside of Harris, members of the campus community were asked to wear all black, hold a red and green ribbon, and perhaps most notably, refrain from using forks at dinner.

But what does it actually mean to hold an observance around Black Solidarity? On the contrary, it seemed to be generated out of animosity, anger and self-defeating. How, I wondered, is angering people fomenting self-defeat? How, I wondered, is angering people fomenting self-defeat? How, I wondered, is angering people fomenting self-defeat?

UMQA understands the importance of celebrating cultural pride and unity. We acknowledge and celebrate the unique experiences of our African Diaspora peers, and we are committed to creating a more inclusive and respectful campus community. However, we believe that the use of cultural pride activities as a means of achie...

JENFRIE JOALY | LlKE TO WRIT THINGS

I am very happy to be at college. I feel good, get some recreation, and drive, and I also get to live independently. While I am here, I am often left a great amount of room by the fact that it is not always in the best of health. However, I honestly feel guilty, like I shouldn’t be in a circumstance like this. I am on a very long and bumpy path to cell phone. I feel like I should be doing something more productive, like this column will address with more detail the impacts of "Free-Trade" Agreements on African nations. I was very pleased that the College Republicans took the initiative to strengthen and improve their business and try to vitalize their community.

IT IS MY SECOND ACTIVISM IN THIS CITY JUST LIKE THIS THE 2006 BUDGET. BUT THE FACT IS THAT WE REALIZE THAT WE IN THIS CITY AND THAT WE SHOULD TAKE PART IN EVENTS THAT HAPPEN OUTSIDE OF THIS COLLEGE AND SHOULD NOT BASE OUR INTERACTION WITH THE COMMUNITY ON THE EVENTS THAT THIS WEEK.

Jack Tinker Gets "A Taste of Insanity" With Debut Novel
By KATHERINE MILLER
Jack Tinker, Senior Associate of GELS, has just released his first novel A Taste of Insanity, a stylistic confection with his wife Elizabeth. Set in Connecticut at the fictional Randolph College, the novel raises interesting questions about the importance of social standing and the role of wealth on college campuses today. A Taste of Insanity is available at the Connecticut College Bookstore in paperback and will be released in hardcover later this month.

Jack Tinker took time out of his busy schedule to speak with the College Voice about his new novel and his experiences as a first-time writer:

Renowned Director Fanny Armstrong Brings Controversial Film to Campus

by Deryl Pace

The third and final part of the Matrix trilogy, The Matrix: Revolutions, has finally arrived. People who have bought the previous two films on video or tape will have no trouble guessing what the plot of this one involves: the battle continues between humans and machines. The director, Fanny Armstrong, has brought the controversy that surrounded the first two Matrix films with her. The film opens November 7th at 2:00pm. The film received runner-up status at the Francisco International Film Festival as well as the momentous accomplis...

My contribution to the department will include teaching third and fourth-year language courses. I will also be teaching courses in the specific areas of the field concerning the language arts, and I may teach introduction to the field. The one course that I teach is "the language and culture of Japan." This course is more language oriented, and it is type of course that is offered at many schools in the United States. I also teach a course on the history of Japan.

I have many goals for my classes and students, and I would like to share some of my ideas and insights into this field with the students. I am interested in teaching students about the various aspects of this culture, including its history, society, art, and literature. I have had many opportunities to teach these courses, both at the University of Connecticut and in Japan. I have also had the opportunity to work with students from a variety of backgrounds, including those who are not native Japanese speakers.

I think that the students will find these courses interesting because they will learn about a culture that is different from their own. They will also learn about the importance of language and culture to understand a society. I believe that these courses will provide a valuable perspective on Japan and its people.

Halloween: A Weekend-Long Event

Halloween this year at Conn was a huge success. The festivities started on Friday night, when the campus was decorated with spooky decorations. Participants down their halls and throughout the night drew a significant amount of interest. This year Conn's Halloween events, either as decorations, or simply supporters of the holiday, covered the entire campus. With the focus falls more heavily on more sophisticated readers—not only of literature and cinematic works—but also in Japan literature, which will provide students with a context for their language study, and that will further develop the critical thinking skills that all of the students need.

The Halloween events included a haunted house, which was sponsored by the Kappa Delta Rho sorority. The haunted house was in the basement of the Knowlton Hall, and served as a frighteningly chilling atmosphere. The house was decorated with leaves, and the floors were covered in leaves, and the walls were covered with cobwebs. The house was also decorated with leaves, and the floors were covered in leaves. The house was illuminated with dim light and foam mats along the walls. It was also decorated with chains, and a fog machine was used to add to the eerie atmosphere. CLEARING UP THE CONN-LYMAN ALLY DISPUTE

To the Editor:

I appreciate Sarah Armstrong's efforts to write a clear and balanced article on the current dispute between CC and the Conn-Lyman Academy. While her article is a great start, I believe it is necessary to offer additional clarity and detail to fully address the concerns and issues raised.

The Conn-Lyman Academy's mission is to provide a rigorous and supportive academic environment for students. We believe that our curriculum and educational philosophy align well with those of Connecticut College. It is unfortunate that there has been a miscommunication between the two institutions.

I urge Connecticut College to engage in open dialogue with us, so that we can work together to ensure a successful and positive working relationship. It is important that we continue to focus on the best interests of our students and the academic community.

Respectfully,

For Two Bucks We Can Tear Down a Forest

Editors:

When you cut down a tree to build a telephone tower, you are not only tearing down a natural structure, but also destroying the habitat of numerous species. This act is environmentally irresponsible and morally unjustifiable.

As a member of the Connecticut College community, I demand that our administration take immediate action to prevent this hazardous practice. We should not be allowing profits from corporate greed to outweigh our responsibility to nature.

WARRIOR WISDOM

"I was at the gym today and this guy comes up to me and ask me something about this Anthology thing being advertised. I have not seen it, but found out what it is through others telling me. This guy is with his 8 year old kid, and he wants to know why I'm not a parent and not a true athlete because I don't use a gym. I told him 'if you workout and I don't waste time,' I tell him, "I'm not good for kids to look at me with the glasses over eyes, so I take 5 minutes to tell him why it isn't good or worse to tell him why."

A Word of Caution

With the Camelympic hangover finally out of the way, the sport of Camo is ready to begin. The next few weeks should bring a lot of action for the fans of the sport. The Timberwolves, with their new coach, have made some changes to their line-up and are looking to make a push for the playoffs. However, the team is still young and inexperienced, and they will need to improve on their performance if they want to make a meaningful impact.

The Connecticut College women's cross-country season is in full swing. The team has been practicing hard and is looking to improve on their performance from last year. The team will have to be patient and work hard to achieve their goals.
