EUROPEAN STUDENTS IN TERRIBLE NEED.

Student Friendship Fund Giving Aid to Thousands.

The needs of the students in Central Europe and the Near East were vividly described by Mrs. Morgan at the meeting of the college when Rev. Morgan Noyes spoke. Mr. Noyes has just returned from an extended trip abroad, and, therefore, his first-hand information was graphic and convincing.

Despite the fact that the Student Friendship Organization is giving aid to ninety thousand students in twelve countries, the needs are greater than ever before since the financial situation is unsolved. The students from the middle classes are eager for food and clothing in great need, because it is chiefly those of the middle class who are suffering from decreased incomes and increased living expenses.

The student situation in Russia is worse today than a few years ago. Mr. Noyes speaks of the situation for education among the Russian youth, and told of seeing an immense freight train filled with returning student refugees who fled at the time of the Revolution. Their return journey took one month, but because they realized that Russia’s only hope was in them, they were glad to endure a difficult journey and unendurable privation on their return to the universities. The need for food and clothing is insurmountable, often a group will carry one overcoat, one pair of shoes, or one suit. There is no money to buy books, and as many as two hundred students are forced to use one book.

In the Near East the suffering is multiplied. The college at Smyrna has been wiped out. All over Europe there are thousands of students. One-third of the entire student body in Austria is made up of refugees. The results are seen in part from the student who fled from his home in Austria is made up of refugees. The college is making his first visit to the college where he plans to study, and is giving help to those whose need cannot be overshadowed.

THE NATIONAL STUDENT FORUM.

From the News Bulletin of the League For Industrial Democracy.

The National Student Forum, the successor to the Intercollegiate Liberal League and the Students’ Conference for the Limitation of Armaments, has been described as the first step in awakening college students to the importance of social and economic problems. The Forum publishes an ably edited bi-weekly, The New Student, and conducts a valuable lecture service.

THANKSGIVING OBSERVED ON CAMPUS.

Gradually the campus grew emptier and emptier until finally only a few girls—who could not get home for the Thanksgiving recess—remained.

Wednesday afternoon was rather dull. Movies, shopping, work, or sleep took up all the time. Then about seven o’clock found the fulfillment of all hopes when those boxes were opened and the contents devoured. It was a wonderful, hungry, and a jolly crowd, a combination which proved that even a Thanksgiving day away from home can be filled with fun.

By the time all had returned to the starting point, it was nearly the hour for dinner. The dining room had been transformed. Tables were pushed together, center-pieces of fruit shoals out. The faculty and the faculty wives and children arrived. The turkey in all his browned and ornate glory was brought on. Everyone ate and laughed. Then President Marshall took the floor and carried on a questions-and-answers session, finding out how many states were represented among the guests. And alas, there hung over the heads of each of the faculty a terrible task of naming the guests with whom they should be familiar. The meal ended rather predictably, and were waiting eagerly by the gymnasium for the hike which the C. C. O. girls had crept from their warm beds for.

Mr. Noyes, a world problem, not an individual one. The Student Friendship Fund is creating a feeling of friendship among students in forty different countries, and is giving help to those whose need cannot be overstated.

TRACES OF EARLY INDIANS DISCOVERED.

Mr. Root will speak on libraries.

At Convocation on December 5th, Mr. Azariah S. Root, Field Director of the Archaeological Survey of New England, told of his exciting trip on the rivers of Maine and Connecticut, and illustrated his lecture with interesting slides. In his opinion canoeing is the best method of making discoveries since by this means he can see the lay of the land from the point of view of the Indian. One of the great helps in his archaeological work is the fact that the earth put back by men’s hands after being removed (as for graves) never looks the same as when touched only by nature. In this way it is possible to know where to excavate.

Large quantities of ashes left by the Indians have preserved all sorts of relics in the graves. In many cases the bones have entirely disappeared, but stone hatchets, arrow-heads, knives, and other implements of war have been excavated, and help to complete the picture of Indian life.

This excavation is a slow and intricate process. Mr. Moorehead and his company of ten men have spent eight summers in exploring Maine for Indian remains, and now have started work in Connecticut by way of the Connecticut and Housatonic rivers. It is through these explorations that we learn about these early inhabitants of New England, who are now nearly extinct.

Mr. Moorehead is interested in giving the Indians their correct place in history. He pointed out that the causes of the Indian wars are often traced to the white men themselves. In closing his lecture the speaker urged that we use our influence in granting the Indians of our country today their rightful privileges as citizens of America.

CHRISTMAS SALE SUCCESSFUL.

Miss Lovell’s tea, given for the benefit of the Connecticut College Endowment Fund, was held Friday, November 24th, from three until nine, in the basement of Plant House. The rooms were gay with crimson streamers and seemed aglow with the real Christmas spirit. Christmas bells hung from the ceiling, old Saint Nick laughed out from the table and window decorations in his customary jolly fashion, and his

A THANKSGIVING THOUGHT.

Traditionally Thanksgiving is spent in coming over all those things for which we can be thankful, ourselves, and for other people; in close intimacy with our families, in relaxation from the hurly and business of the world. Actually in this modern day, Thanksgiving is a time for review, a time for suspension. We try to crowd all the fun and frolic that we can into these twenty-four hours. We either go home or visit friends, devour turkey and cranberry sauce to an unnecessary and dangerous degree, dash off feverishly to a play or a dance and return to college jaded and disinterested.

Have many of us ever stopped to think that at Thanksgiving we should not only number our blessings but we should also try to find and relish in a colorful picture, a lovely poem, or a rare, stark hillside—some beauty? That old world of ours is beauty. This old world of ours is beauty again all too much so for the good of art and beauty. These two, rather shy and different quantities, cannot flourish where there is sordidness and horror. If there are no ari nor beauty? Why, half the joy of our existence as sophisticated as it would be lost. But if we spend our Thanksgiving or another vacation in the ceaseless pursuit of jazz and instead of beauty. Consequently it becomes impossible to make a place in our world for the worthwhile things that make life a lovelier, pleasant experience.

"While the great world goes its way
I am in wonder all day long.
All the night my spirit sings
For the loveliness of things."

IN AND OUT THE LIBRARY.

It is not necessary to leave our campus to take many alluring trips. Just mentally get between the covers of F. W. Aldrich, or the Gimme the All." The hint of a God in the tint of a rose, The beauty of the Master which sunbeams disclose. The beauty of soul—in the dark orbs so mild. No atoms could form themselves of that beauty, Consume the consummate beauty of Nature so fair.

The announcement of the coming conference called by this Forum during the Christmas holidays follows:

I. Who actually pays the social costs of education?

II. Does the financial basis of higher education in America involve problems in higher education in America?

II. If the American student is confronted with a moral problem arising out of the social and economic basis of his education what is he to do about it?

Those are questions which a number of students will ask themselves when they meet at the Carolina Country Club Hotel for Social Workers, Hartsville, South Carolina, December 26th to 29th, under the auspices of The National Student Forum.

IPSE DIXIT AND GALILEO

There was much learning but little real knowledge in Galileo's time (1564-1642). Aristotle was swallowed in bad Latin translations. Ipse dixit. No one checked him by what seemed vulgar, coarse experiment.

Galileo fought against the dead hand of tradition. He did not argue about Aristotle, but put him to the test. Aristotle led his readers to believe that of the two bodies the heavier will fall the faster. Galileo simply climbed to the top of the Leaning Tower of Pisa and dropped two unequal weights. The "best people" were horrified; they even refused to believe the result—that the weights reached the ground in equal times.

"Look at the world, and experiment, experiment," cried Galileo.

The biggest man in the 16th century was not Galileo in popular estimation, but Suleiman the Magnificent, the Ottoman Emperor, who swept through Eastern Europe with fire and sword and almost captured Vienna. Where is his magnificence now?

Galileo gave us science—established the paramount right of experimental evidence. Suleiman did little to help the world.

Hardly an experiment is made in modern science which does not apply Galileo's results. When, for instance, the physicists in the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company study the motions of electrons in rarified atmospheres, or experiment to heighten the efficiency of generators and motors, they follow Galileo's example and substitute facts for beliefs.
TO REMIND YOU.

The following rules were adopted May 25, 1922, at a joint meeting of House Fellows and House Presidents:
1. That each girl living in Branford, Plant, Blackstone, Winthrop, North, and Vinal (if possible) at the beginning of each year be required to get her closet key from the Bursar. That President Marshall be asked to have made duplicate keys for the one closet in double rooms so that each girl may have her own key.
2. That he be brought to the attention of the girls at the beginning of each year that they must not leave their valuables unlocked.
3. To remind the girls that they are honor-bound to leave a note when they enter a girl's room in her absence. (House Presidents should see that girls keep pads on their doors.)
4. To arouse public opinion against borrowing by having it a topic for the Open Forum, the Year, and by other means.
5. That all losses be reported immediately, in writing, to the Director of Residence. That full records of all losses be kept at least four years by the Director of Residence.
