F. Newton Chiang, Chinese Minister, To Speak Jan. 14

The speaker at the 7 p.m. ves- per service Sunday, January 14, Dr. Chiang will be P. Newton Chang, professor of religious ed- ucation at Union Theological seminary, West China.

A native of Kashi, Chekiang, Mr. Chiang obtained his education in the Chinese classics, and graduated from high schools at Wu-hu and Chenshieh. He later attended the American school in Chekiang and also John's university, Shanghai, from which institution he received his B.A. with honors. After serving one year as prom- oted of St. Paul's Middle school at Anking, he returned to St. John's to study theology, and re- ceived his B.D. in 1928. He was then ordained a deacon and later priest in the Sheng Kung Hui Mission in Peking (Episcopal). In 1931, he did postgraduate work in religious education at Columbia University, New York. Always interested in work with youth, he has been in constant demand at re- ligious education institutes, and conferences on work for youth. He has served as confessor to the National Youth Commission. He is the author of a number of books and articles. He speaks English and French.

Dear Editor:

With February coming very soon, a group of us have been thinking about plans for Midwinter formal. Considering that this is the biggest social affair of the year, we want it done up well and for this reason, we would like to offer a few suggestions.

First and foremost, we would like an orchestr for the dance of this year. It might be embarrassingly last year when we got all dressed up formally, greeted our dates with the assurance that a formal proceeds, and then had to find a nickel to play ungraciously in Nowell. Nickel-odeons are fine for informal dances, but we do feel a formal should be formal—to the orchestra.

We have further ideas. Why not make it Midwinter weekend instead of Midwinter formal? All other colleges have at least one big weekend a year that not only includes a formal, but dancing and skating parties and sleigh rides as well. It seems a shame to invite a fellow way up from wherever he is and not have more than one thing planned for a 48 hour period. If the reason we can't have more big-dos is because there aren't enough people to manage it all, we are quite sure there would be loads of people who would volunteer to help. Aren't we right, kids?

We do not feel that that worn-out excuse that there's war on can apply here because none of the suggestions we have made can possibly be interfered with or affected by the war. The only exception is the entertainment of men, and we can take care of that.

As you can see, we want our big event of the year this time to be the Student Service League and CCOC help us make it so? Harkness Group

As We Greet 1945

We have said goodbye to 1944—and one more year of war has dropped into history. So that 1945 will see the end of the year that not only includes a formal, but dancing and skating parties and sleigh rides as well. It seems a shame to invite a fellow way up from wherever he is and not have more than one thing planned for a 48 hour period. Students Urged To Consider New Year As Another of War

The proper attitude toward the war in which we are now engaged was the subject of an editorial on the cover of the Feb. 4 issue of the Connecticut College News. It was emphasized that we must not lose sight of the fact that we must make and to appreciate both the present and the future. We are reminded that we cannot afford to change our routine because of the war, but that we must continue to live our lives as usual, and to enjoy the things that we have been denied.

A New Year's Day Editorial

The Connecticut College News, in its editorial for Jan. 1, 1945, urged students to make the best of the New Year. It was stated that the new year should be a time of planning and preparation for the future. The editorial encouraged students to make the most of their time and to use it to their advantage. It was also emphasized that the new year should be seen as an opportunity to make changes and to move forward.

Interne Tellsof Experiences At Institute of Public Affairs

(Editors note: This article was written by Ruthe Nash ‘44, who was selected to be an intern with the Institute of Public Affairs, Washington, D.C., last year. Further information on this organization can be obtained from the Personnel bureau.)

If you want to open the doors to government in action, right at the focal point, an internship with the National Institute of Public Affairs in Washington, D.C. is the key. Along with 500 other college and university graduates from all over America, I arrived at Washing- ton on July 1 to participate in the 1944-45 internship program managed by the Institute which is sponsored by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Sees Political Life

Before I’ve been “on the go” constantly leading a life of observing, talking, listening and participating in government activities.

I have visited practically every major department and agency where legislation is involved. The purpose of their organization and the public administration methods utilized in this process are unfamiliar to me. I have attended sessions of committee meetings, the Supreme Court, the Senate; conferences with other governmental functions. I have even been in a dance where exchange of internship experiences has brought us interesting and vivid pictures of government from all angles. Incidentally, I’ve had a number of lunches based on assigned reading in preparation for our sessions.

Administrators Trained

The officers of the Institute believe that no one can become intimately in government and through government, by which competent persons may rotate in different governmental agencies; and carry out practical assignments, good administrative material can be developed.

The first two weeks of the rotation period were taken up with the meetings at the various departments and agencies. We talked with Commissioner Arthur P. Lane of the Public Health Service; Commissioner, Fritz Monheny March in the Bureau of Education; Howard L. Shaw, then Assistant Secretary of Commerce, the Bureau of Fishes at F.E.A., U.N.R.R.A., Department of the Interior, etc.

Then after writing our “Statement of Objectives” (the theme of our 1944-45 internship song), and interviews we were all placed in the department or agency in which we wanted to intern on a full-time non-salaried basis. Since then we have attended weekly meetings designed to continue our organization experience.

Clear Area for Study

Each person has an individual advisor who he know what we have more or less created for ourselves. As our internship draws to an end, however, I think we’re pretty generally agreed that these seven months have been one of the most informative, exciting and enlightening periods of our lives.

Student Tells Of Activities At Jr. College

by Theon Esten '46

Two years when I arrived at junior college I thought myself to be very lucky to have chosen such an agreeable place to begin my college education. Although the buildings are not numerous, they are very lovely for the quaintness of their age lends to a pleasant atmosphere.

This junior college, located in Hackettstown, N. J., is one of the few which comply strictly to a hundred per cent collegiate basis. In opposition to a prevailing idea there are no restrictions which prevent it from the club plays of boarding or finishing school.

The individual programs are arranged carefully so that any one who wishes to enter nursing, dental work, or transfer to a four year college will have the correct requirements. Junior college is a preparatory school for the Navy, the Coast Guard and the Merchant Marine. The Junior College program includes the study of the following subjects: English, American History, Mathematics, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, Economics and French. The Junior College is also a preparatory school for those who wish to enter the Military. It is a place to begin one's college education.

Indication is given of the College's desire to attract less able students by its low entrance requirements. As far as extra-curricular activities are concerned, Centenary is a very active place. The Club plays are very popular. There is a large number of students who are members of the different organizations and therefore, the College is a very active place.

A very active organization on the college campus is the Glee club. The Glee club is a very active organization and is a very important club at Centenary. Members of it attend conferences and round table discussions which are within a reasonable radius.

The Club plays are very popular. There is a large number of students who are members of the different organizations and therefore, the College is a very active place.

Start your college education at Centenary, a place to begin one's college education.
