Two new trustees named

Margaret Morgan Lawrence, M.D., a practicing child psychiatrist and psychoanalyst of Pomona, New York, and Frances Gillmore Pratt '60, a prominent Boston-area civic leader, have accepted appointment on the Board of Trustees of the college. Their election brings the governing body's total strength to 16 men and 10 women.

Dr. Lawrence at present directs the developmental unit in the division of child psychiatry of the Harlem Hospital Center in New York City and is associate clinical professor of psychiatry at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons. She also serves the Rockland County (New York) Community Mental Health Center as director of its child development center and is a consultant in pediatric psychiatry for Nyack (New York) Hospital. A graduate of Cornell University and the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia, Dr. Morgan is a director of the American Orthopsychiatric Association and an executive committee member of the New York State Committee for Children. She is a fellow of the American Psychiatric Association and the American Academy of Psychoanalysis.

She has written extensively on children's mental health and now has in press her most recent study, Young Inner City Families: the Growth and Development of their Ego Strength under Stress.

Mrs. Pratt is a Connecticut College alumna who last year assumed the crucial position as volunteer chairman of the library building fund committee, an assignment she enhances with her earlier successes in enlisting broad support for worthwhile projects.

She has been Cambridge-area chairman of fund-raising for the Boston Children's Hospital and organized two successful benefits for Action for Children's Television, Inc., a persuasive movement developed and directed by her sister alumna, Peggy Walter Charrey '48. Mrs. Pratt chairs the Boston Zoological Society's drive for funds to purchase a rare African iguana, an endangered species of antelope. She works actively for the Junior League of Boston and the Shady Hill School in Cambridge.

Dr. Lawrence and Mrs. Pratt will attend their first Board of Trustees meeting here on Feb. 14 and 15.

Margaret M. Lawrence, M.D. of Columbia.

11 million proposed budget for 1975-76
6% across the board wage increase $5000 comprehensive fee

by Walter Palmer

A balanced budget of $11,230,000 will be submitted this weekend to the Board of Trustees for approval. The budget represents an increase of $675,000 or 6.4 per cent over last year's budget. Rising costs and inflationary pressures contributed to the 6 per cent across the board wage increases and a $440k increase in comprehensive tuition costs (tuition plus room and board). However, student aid was increased by $82,000, equaling the 8.7 percent overall increase in comprehensive tuition.

The main components of the proposed budget for 1975-76 break down as follows:

Margolin on JB

by Bill Loessy

Judiciary Board Chairperson Leslie Margolin met with representatives of the Courier this week to answer questions related to her activities as third ranking member of the Student Government during the past year. Ms. Margolin, a candidate for re-election, responded with an overview of her administration, claiming that her announced goals had largely been realized in the course of her tenure.

Ms. Margolin scoffed at rumors that JB had become "intransigent" and "silly." "If anything, cases before the Board have been more routine this year than in the past, and they represent fairly serious infractions of the honor code. We had two suspensions this past year. Before, suspension was practically unheard of as a disciplinary action."

Margolin also referred to a development which has given JB a firmer hand to expedite those cases of a more serious nature. "House Councils have been able to take care of simple social problems and other matters involving purely personal concerns."

Margolin further stated that academic infractions had become the Board's most pressing concern, and listed the institution's new regulation designed to guarantee that the Board will have some leverage in dealing with the faculty in matters related to cheating and plagiarism as her most prominent achievement. "more, when the Board rendered its decision, guilty or not guilty for academic malfeasances, we had no guarantee that our ruling would be adhered to by the teachers involved. Now the faculty has to accept a verdict of guilty or not."

In the faculty meeting on Jan. 29, 1975, the general 1974 calendar was a topic of discussion. It was voted and approved to keep the existing calendar not only for next year, but also through 1978. The calendar was not submitted into the agenda as a result of numerons and unfounded rumors that have been circulating around campus that final exams would be scheduled after Christmas break next semester. The faculty calendar was concluded by referring to the present system of dispensing justice as "too structured, with new alternatives for disciplinary action besides outright suspension." Ms. Margolin suggested the institution of a work program to partly replace letters of censure leading to threats of suspension. "We need something in between." She remarked that her proposal had received lukewarm reception when she visited dorms to discuss JB activities, but she still holds to the belief that some circumstances dictate something more lenient than suspension but more punitive than threatening letters.

Fiscal Frugality and the Sacred Cow

One of the more pressing dilemmas presently confronting institutions of higher learning lies in the extent to which the desires of its students can be accommodated to the realities of economic hardship. Purely out of necessity, the present period of recession requires a firm adherence to the doctrine of fiscal frugality, and perhaps nowhere is the importance of cost consciousness more vital than in the allocation of Student Org. funds. We refer specifically to the recent decision of College Council to continue funding for Conn. PIRG subject to review in April. The decision was probably a wise one given the alternative: a vote of no confidence, an elimination of funds and the demise of Conn PIRG as a campus organization. But it is also a fact that the monies allocated to the Conn PIRG chapter constitutes a rather large chunk of the total student budget. Courier wants to know what the Conn PIRG chapter is doing with its funds. Is it spending them wisely? Is it spending them at all? Do the programs and the goals Conn PIRG espouses justify the spending of a full 10 per cent of the student budget? With 1600 dollars to call its own, the PIRG chapter did little more than prepare two surveys of local drug stores. It is true that the organization was not approved till the end of October, but six weeks and 1600 dollars to boot rather obviates the necessity to be charitable. One wonders whether the campus chapter serves only to support a broader statewide constituency. While the Courier does not object in principle to the funding of an organization whose thrust is above and beyond the more localized needs of this college community, we hope that, this semester, Conn PIRG will dispel not only that "a corner on the cash" inevitably results in grandiose plans of towering irrelevancy.

Policy Clarification

There are some letters-to-the-editor this week, written in response to Craig Chapman's creed printed last issue. One of these suggests there is no precedent for such an occurrence. In times past, the Courier, under its earlier names, published "Your Turn," "By-Line" by Request," "Campus Column," and "Topic of Candor," all opinion columns, not written by the Editorial Board, appearing throughout the paper.

Our first issue this semester featured an opinion by Dave Bohonon. No one complained. On page five, opposite the Chapman piece, appeared another opinion by Keith Ritter. No one complained. It would seem only when a nerve is struck do people dig back into their knowledge of constitutional law.

The Courier reserves the right to print opinion pieces not written by the Editorial Board. These will be opinions, considered by the Board to be of more general interest than letters-to-the-editor, but not necessarily reflecting the opinion of the Board. They will be printed in the two-column format used heretofore, and will be headed with a catchy logo.

Chapman grips

To the Editor:

Be the article "Leadership," by Craig Chapman, in the issue of February 6: The Courier has violated the principles of its own policies as well as those of general journalism by printing this statement as an article. The Courier should know better than to allow such a personally and politically biased statement to appear as anything other than a letter to the Editor. The Courier is not permitted to display any political preferences, whether campus or national; the printing of this article on any page but page two seems, by definition, to indicate a stance taken by the Board that cannot be reflected in their printed words. The Courier is not permitted to display any political preferences, whether campus or national; the printing of this article on any page but page two seems, by definition, to indicate a stance taken by the Board that cannot be reflected in their printed words.

The article "Leadership," written in response to Craig Chapman's statements, does not constitute 'news.' Mr. Chapman's creed printed last issue is merely announcing what is seen the accomplishments of the Conn PIRG chapter. Mr. Chapman's beliefs in the importance of diversity within the student body are in line with the principles of the Conn PIRG chapter, which was established to provide a voice for the underrepresented among the student body. The Conn PIRG chapter serves only to support a broader statewide constituency.

Student government's accomplishments include:

a. Student-Faculty Committee
b. Student-Government Committee

Student government's accomplishments include:

a. Student-Faculty Committee
b. Student-Government Committee

Despite his convictions, Mr. Chapman failed to present his rather serious accusations directly to Student Government, rather than having them appear in print, he could have perhaps obtained some satisfaction. Instead, he has only caused himself to look silly by amassing damaging allegations without furnishing any evidence to support them. Furthermore, one cannot help but speculate as to why Mr. Chapman waited a whole year, until the next election, to denounce the present members of Student Government.

An offer of "equal time" would merely help perpetrate the use of the newspaper as a medium for the waging of personal and/or political wars. It seems, however, that the Courier does owe Student Government an apology.

Sincerely,

Judy Boland
Class of '75

Dear Sir:

Upon reading Craig Chapman's article entitled "Leadership" in last week's Courier, I fail to understand the basis for such an article. If Mr. Chapman had attended more Student Assembly meetings as the President of Smith-Burlick he would have seen the accomplishments of the present Administration. Perhaps Mr. Chapman's belief in the ineffectuality of Student government is more a reflection of his own weaknesses as a representative of Smith-Burlick.

Despite his own convictions in the lack of success this past year, we believe to the contrary, Student government's accomplishments include:

a. Judicary Board decision with the faculty that gives the students more rights in plagiarism cases;

b. Student membership on the Tenure Committee which resulted from Student Government's request to the Executive Board's initiation and motivation;

c. Representation of Student-Trustee Committee which will be important in the consideration of the college budget;

d. Student-Faculty Committee reports for the Student Assembly;
We the Disenfranchised

by James McNeill Whistler

This gem will be short and sweet this week. I also reach the premise that they have their own phones. The campus phones are an important communication link between the-----

The aforementioned accomplishments reflect the Student government's efforts on behalf of the student body. To facilitate an effective student government, it is necessary to have a working relationship between the Executive Board and the Administration. Without this relationship, it would be most difficult to achieve results of any substantive nature. It is our hope that the student government leaders to be elected will do no less to the last needs of the community.

For the past week none of us in the Mohagen Ave. side of Larrabee have been able to sleep. When we wake up of a mind, we wonder if we have been by the phone. It is our hope that the professor will be able to get in touch with us.

Critique

Dear Sir,

Last week Courrier printed a lead article that announced this week's Commencement speaker. In all fairness to the senior class, I am responding to some mistakes and misquoting presented in the article. First, it was the class that decided upon the order of invitation of the Commencement speakers through a second poll. The class officers and Commencement Speaker Committee served only to organize the poll and offer suggestions of possible speakers. Second, Dr. Asimov was not the initial choice of the class.

Sincerely,

Ricky Cohn

Mr. Robins

Drownen's review of Sleuth last week. To wit: Oliver played a character named Andrew Wyke, a character named Andrew Wyke, the author of both the play and the screenplay was Anthony Shaffer, and the name of that famous mythical detective is St. John, Lord Meriden. The spellings of those names were obtained from acondensation of Sleuth in one of the Great Plays series at our own Palmer Library. A move toward all of five minutes to ferret it out, and even if that source was unfruitful, I probably could have found it at a local library available there with much difficulty. In other words, it would have only a small amount of time to obtain the same information.

The next argument our friend used, was that since the student in question would be taking money out of the area, that social and community questions would be taking money out of the area, that social and community responsibilities deserve that this loan should not be made. Further, he was worried that even with the stocks as security, the student would not repay the loan when it came due. Finally, he suggested the student go to a bank which he had some "clout," for a checking account certainly is not "clout," compared with a firm in New London who has been doing business with us for twenty years.

The usage of the campus phones has become a veritable mode of communication at Connecticut College, this year as bell desk duty is now looked upon as a farce. Whereas these campus phones were once manned from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. seven days a week and failure to answer would result in the solution of the problem. It is our hope that the professor will be able to get in touch with us.

More of the obvious

Sirs:

We are writing in response to the letter to the editor in last week's issue of the Courier suggesting the construction of a new library facility. We felt the letter to be the most ludicrous piece ever to appear in this publication, Lauren Kingsley's notwithstanding. What is disturbing is the fact that the editorial board of the Courier continued on page eleven
The Primordial Grinder

"The Primordial Grinder" by Pam Allapoullos

The Earl of Sandwich, who is known for shipping a plate of food between two slices of bread, got a Cape Cod town named after him. Benedetto (Benny) Capaldo, the grandson of the first grinder in the United States in the 1900's, got nothing. Mr. Capaldo, who emigrated from Italy in the 1920's, frequented the Italian Sandwiches and was known for his sandwiches, which were called Italian Sandwiches. In 1907, he was recognized for his contributions to the field of sandwich-making in the United States.

It is said that the grinder was invented by a man named Benny Ferrante, who frequented the local Italian sandwich shop. Ferrante added sliced tomatoes and chopped salami (or boiled ham), cheese, sliced tomatoes and chopped lettuce, and a variety of meats and cheeses. The sandwich was served with a side of pickles and a hard-boiled egg. The classic grinder is still enjoyed today by many people, especially in the New York City area.

During the time of the Depression, when many unemployed workers were pushed to the streets, the grinder became a popular food item. Many working-class families would go to the grinder to buy a meal for their families. The grinder became a symbol of the working-class community in New York City.

Grass roots survey

Dr. Thomas E. Bryant, president of the Draft Council Independent Drug Abuse Council, released today the results of a national survey of marijuana use and attitudes. The survey, which was designed to provide independent Drug Abuse Council activities to provide a basis for the development of Drug Abuse Council activities to provide information on drug issues of concern, contains data about the use of marijuana by young people. The survey found that 18 percent of the adult American population, or 24 million people, have tried marijuana, and 8 percent are current users, according to the survey. The pool of respondents included 1,500 teenagers, age 12-17, 14 percent have tried marijuana, and 5 percent are current users.

Dr. Bryant said, "The distinguishing feature of our survey is that it is the first national marijuana survey to ask the public's opinion on a variety of marijuana issues. The survey was conducted by sending questionnaires to 1,500 adults, and the results are currently being debated by many state legislatures and the United States Congress." The survey shows a narrow margin between the number of adults who favor reducing marijuana penalties and those who favor imposing stiffer ones. 39 percent favor the elimination of criminal penalties for the sale and/or possession of small amounts of marijuana and private use of it, while 40 percent believe there should be tougher laws for possession of small amounts. Only 13 percent favor retaining the present laws. Dr. Bryant said, "Two thirds of the respondents believe that marijuana is a health hazard and that it should be banned."
Summertime program in French cooking

By special arrangement ACADEMIC YEAR ABROAD, INC. is offering a unique summer program in French cuisine (cookery) vins (wines), and fromages (cheeses) from 26 June till 11 August. This is intended as a non-academic course open to anyone of any age interested in learning basic French cooking, wine-tasting, and cheeses, but qualified students may obtain academic credit by arranging for evaluation with their own Dean and/or Advisor prior to departure from the U.S.A.

"Cooking is a living art." This is true in France where in the last 15 years cooking has evolved until it has reached today's level of refined simplicity at the hands of such master cooks as Bertholle who is the "tutelary genius" of this special program. Herein the student will be taken to the Bertholle who is the "tutelary genius" of this special program. Herein the student will be directly introduced to:

2. Utensils — in the famous Dehillerin store in Paris, the largest outfit for cooking equipment.
3. Menus—planning, table-setting, and service.
4. Lunch and a tour at the Ecole Technique d’Alimentation in Paris to see first-hand how chefs and waiters are trained.
5. An explanation on the spot how one of the more interesting restaurants of Paris plans and runs its day.
6. Sessions in wine-tasting at the Académe du Vin; aesthetic and technical.
7. Lessons in cheeses and sessions of cheese-tasting chez Cantio perhaps the greatest "maître fromager" in the world. All in addition to the regular demonstrations and practical application of the basic of good cuisine.

An effort will be made to relate the course to American ingredients and measures. Discussion time will be available to enable each participant to learn the theories involved and to question the Chef about practical details.

The course will run from 26 June till 11 August and will be limited to 14 persons. The cost will be $1,000.00, all-inclusive, except for transatlantic transportation. Mature students may, however, make their own living arrangements; in this case the fee will be reduced. Anyone interested should write immediately to:

The following survey was conducted on February 7th comparing Universal Food Stores located at Hodges Square and First National Food Stores (Finast) at the Shopping Center. Boxes in the upper right hand corner indicate different sizes from those in the parentheses. We have taken a variety of items which we feel are relevant to the college community. These prices are accurate to the best of our knowledge.

It is time to put aside all talk of the greater college community. Being a student at Connecticut College, or any other college, by definition, means certain conditions of life, attitudes and desires distinct from the other groups on campus. As in any imperfect political community, there are issues whose resolution we, the students, hold central to improving the quality and control of our lives over the 4 years.

1. The Student Activity Fee must be increased — 100 per cent if possible. If the Social Board is ever to be more than just bitched at, if WCN and the COURIER are to become more professional; if Student Governments are to have funds to function actively in the community; if prominent speakers are to be brought on campus; if the dorms are to remain solvent centers of recreation; the Student Activity Fee cannot just be reallocated, it must be raised. If that means substantially Schools of comparable size, stature, and price have Activity Fees 2-3 times our own $225, that is all the more reason to propose a budget, with its $400 increase in total fees does not include a raise in the Student Activity Fee lends credence to the argument that the proposed budget does not best fulfill the needs of the total community.

2. More Student Jobs.

3. Greater Student Participation in Academic Policy Making — The changes last year in grading and Latin Honors should never have gone through without student approval.

4. An Increase in the overall responsiveness of the Infirmary.

5. Student Departmental councils should have a voting presence in departmental decision making, not just an advisory one.

6. More Practical Courses — From Journalism, film-making and more photography to carpentry and mechanics.

7. The Adoption of the new Student Government Charter and the frequent use of its referenced provision. Under the proposed new Student Government Charter, petitions on issues of interest, bearing the signatures of 10 per cent of the student body must be brought before the students for a vote.

8. A policy statement from the Administration on the open personal records law and a response to the allegation that students are often denied their scholarships in the senior year.

9. Return The Laundry Soap!

10. An increased administrative responsiveness to the various sections of the student body. From the vegetation to those who have no intention of going to graduate school and should be able to take all courses pass-fail.

These are some of the student issues I see as relevant to our lives on campus. In seeking to deal with these issues I am running for the office of President of Student Government. It is an office in an institution to which I hope to bring action against changes. I want to serve as the elected representative of the students, responsible to the students, in all aspects of life and death. Vote for me on Wednesday.

My qualifications are no formal education. However, as a member of the History, Student Advisory Committee, and as a member of the Constitutional Convention Committee of the Student Government, Academic year 73-74 I was on the Election Board and Student Government Academic, and this year I am on the Crozier-Williams Committee. I know what I'm talking about.

Richard Allen

The "official" duties of the President of the Student Government Association are outlined in the by-laws of our Student Gov't. constitution. The President shall call and preside over meetings of the Student Assembly, shall be a member of the Trustee-Student Committee, shall be responsible for the re-election of new students and shall oversee the election of the Departmental Advisory Committees. These "official" duties, however, only touch on the obligations that a responsible President must undertake while in office. A responsible leader must pursue the goals and purposes of the Association. That purpose, according to the charter, is to "organize and to seek out our concerns. I will be discussing these issues throughout the campaign and I urge you to attend the candidate speech amain on Feb. 13 at 7:00 P.M. in Harle.

If elected I will actively seek out student concerns and priorities and I will channel these concerns to the appropriate places. I pledge not to get bogged down with the "official" duties and thereby lose sight of the overall purpose of Student Gov't., of course, will need the cooperation of the Student Assembly and the student body to work effectively in realizing our interests. If that cooperation exists, we have a great potential.

Pierce McCormary

The office of"President of the Student Government at Connecticut College has shifted its priorities over the last year. Initially, the office of President serve as a liaison between the students and the administration. The intended purpose being to push for what the students wanted and not for what the administration wanted. Yet despite what appears to be a reasonably clear understanding of the President's functions, I am also interested in restructuring the social board on campus and giving the college a structured board an opportunity to provide the social activities required. I believe the social boards effectively to directly responsible to Student Assembly, with a rep. from Student Assembly on the board.

The finance sub-committee of the student's council, which I have presided over as Vice President, is considering the possibility of funding college clubs for next year. It is their intention to provide more money for the clubs to help them survive.

I assure you that after the sub-commitee makes its recommendations, the College open student forum will be called to discuss their recommendations. I also strongly recommend to you that candidates for the positions on this ticket should host the House Presidents.

There are many other issues, including the entire college budget, use of college space, increased class sizes, preregistration, and the future of athletics, that require us to organize and seek out our concerns. I will be discussing these issues throughout the campaign and I urge you to attend the candidate speech amain on Feb. 13 at 7:00 P.M. in Harle.

I believe that I can lead a healthy Student Government which will actively work for the benefit of the students of Connecticut College. All I need is your vote. Thank you.

"That is is not that, that is not that is..." — Rufus T. Firely

It's almost presidential election time, and many of you — yes, you, don't look away — may be wondering whom to vote for. This is not an unusual phenomena. It is certainly nothing to be ashamed of, Since there have been times when I have myself wondered whom to vote for. But, hopefully, I can put an end to this. For, I, Chip Cohen, the candidate you've all been waiting for, am running for President.

I have been asked, "What can you — one solitary person — really expect to accomplish?" What a dumb question! Someone once asked my Uncle Ebenezer that question, and do you know what Uncle Ebenezer answered? He belted the guy right in the kisser, that's what! But seriously, suppose someonethinkable had that attitude. If he had considered himself a Jose, power to accomplish anything, he probably never would have chopped down that cherry tree. And where is George Washington today? He's dead, of course.

So what do I expect, or hope to accomplish? First on the list is a severe reduction of industrial pollution in the state of Connecticut. Secondly, I would like to achieve true equality for everyone, total and unconditional elimination of pay toilets, and liberty and just by cutting out obvious unecessary expenses. The student government has in the past and will address itself to the "probability of centralized dining," but we will present a concrete plan that students themselves will draft. We will not accept a given proposal from the administration and faculty, because they do not eat in the completed weekends. If one takes a look at student government in the past it is obvious that promises will not be kept; I cannot promise anything. But you can believe this, with a determined leader you don't have to worry about the "traditional nothingness found in student government." The capacity of student government will be used to the fullest extent, we shall exhaust our flexible framework for self structure. Let's deal with concrete issues concerning us! Thank you.

Leroy B. Jones

Again it is time for you to elect your student leaders for the on-coming academic year. I assure you that I have told you what I have to say before you vote Wednesday.

After a year of socializing and passiveness, it is time for student government to be "concrete" concerns of students. You have been told in the past that student government is the supportive organization of student interest. Student Government is supposed to consider policy involving the student body, it provides the students with a flexible framework for self governance and excepts the responsibility in the education system. It is always the case to have an effective student government, one must have an effective leader. An effective leader is one who is totally devoted to the students that elect him. It is not a position to gain personal prestige or one that is easily manipulated by the faculty and administration. I consider myself as a determined person who can be very effective in expressing relevant issues concerning the student body and the college as a community. It is utterly important for me as a leader to initiate actions that we feel as students are relevant to us. It is not for us to set upon a given situation and do nothing, we must adapt ourselves to things to come. One can conclude that under my leadership there will no longer be a "sit-down and discuss" kind of student government as the goals of the proposed leadership would be an immediate rejection of the outrageous tuition increase. NO we cannot discuss it any longer, but we can act on it, we, (students, faculty, administration) can alleviate some of the increase.

This person must be vocal in support of the code. The chair man of the Board must have a clear understanding of the challenge of the honor code and the burden it places on every student. He/she should never lose sight of his/her as a student and his/her ultimate responsibility to the students, not to the Administration.

Finally, in the hearing of cases, the chairmen should never abandon his/her humanity. Penalties imposed should balance the best interests of the community with those of the individual. One year ago on the proposed leadership had taught me that it is imperative that the Board hear each case individually, upon its own merits. I refuse to take an unbecoming, lenient, or severe posture that will prevent me from giving each case a full and open hearing. In all cases where a penalty is levied, it must be considered necessary evil; a system built only on kindness is ultimately unworkable.

The Judiciary Board is a vital organ in our community and its leadership must be in balance with the students. In the year ahead the college community must be aware of the dedication to the honor code. A Chairperson committed to workability is essential.

Lynda Ban

Few of us realized the responsibility we were assuming to uphold the honor code when we were elected as freshmen. The commitment to abide by the honor code is more than promising to not cheat, plagiarize, steal, or vandalize. It is a commitment to help build and maintain an atmosphere of action and inaction is actions are both socially unacceptable and intolerable. Without this, an honor code is a joke; it is just an excuse to keep self-scheduled examinations and an open office hour. A honor system we have now is meant to act as a source of growth in which we all learn the meaning of responsibility: the commitment to a set of values. This commitment is fulfilled in walking by someone we see shopping or in shutting our door if we hear exam questions. It means recognizing the value of our commitment and bringing it into effect, despite our personal discomfort. If we let the offenders go by unchanged, we are fostering the environment most harmful to an honor code. Such an environment is not conducive to growth, rather it is harmful and an embarrassment to our own claims of maturity.

The rule of Judiciary Board chairperson is instrumental in a rededication to the honor code.

Leslie Ann Margolin

After many weeks of thoughtful deliberations, I have decided to seek reelection to the Chairmanship of the Judiciary Board. I assumed the office approximately one year ago and have worked diligently to make the Judiciary Board a respectable, viable segment of our college organizations and concerns, functioning as a separate framework for self governance. It is not a position that needed to be made have been occurred throughout this past academic year. The Board no longer sits in the Student Government Room one evening each week reviewing cases and imposing penalties in situations with little, if any, insight into the real problems facing the modern student. The Judiciary Board no longer dissociates itself from other college organization and functions as a separate and independent entity.

Throughout this past year we have worked in conjunction with the Student Assembly and the College Council, advising on actions for security and the student lunch program. One of the most significant contributions of the Board this year was its role in in seeking that the Judiciary Board's decisions to be totally devoted to the students and can discuss it any longer. We can act on it, we (students, faculty, administration) can alleviate some of the increase.

Thank you.
Reflections on Edward Weston

by Seth Greenwood

In the course of a recent conversation, while reclining in my warm abode one wintry evening, musing over pomegranates and quaffing ambrosia, my companion turned to me and said, "Do you know who Edward Weston is?"

The snow was falling softly outside the window and I heard the murmur of a barely discernible wind. The fire crackled as it danced in the hearth. Thoughts of artists were not dancing in my head like so many sugar plums.

"No," the photographer, my friend answered, "obviously desirous of pursuing the point."

"Oh," I said, "What about him?"

"Well," I've been invited to a preview of an exhibit of his works at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. I thought you might like to go with me.

Summoning up all the chivalrous instinct lying dormant within me I replied that I would be delighted to escort her to this within me. I said revealing my boundless sophistication and command of romance languages.

A scant few days later, after procuring a blue tuxedo and matching floor length cape, and looking somewhat like a cross between the Count of Monte Cristo and Dracula I proceeded into the Big Apple with my friend. Having every intention of doing the evening up in style, we partook of a sumptuous repast at a well known Manhattan watering hole, (which shall remain anonymous lest I be accused of name-dropping), prior to attending the show.

Finishing our aperitif we strolled down Fifth Avenue past the St. Regis, past the Plaza, past Tiffany's and, feeling at this point quite like two characters in a Fitzgerald novel, made our way to the museum. To my barely concealed chagrin no sea of flashbulbs illuminated upon our entrance and, unrecognized by the assembled multitude, we checked our outer garb and proceeded into the exhibit. As we pushed through the throng of art appreciators on hand I noticed that works by such notables as Bill Blass and Yves St. Laurent were far more apparent than anything by the likes of Picasso and Klee. To be expected, I suppose. After all, this is New York.

It is necessary to attend a New York art preview in order to fully appreciate the goings on. They are gala occasions affording the metropolitan elite an opportunity to rub elbows and show their acquaintance how aesthetically inclined they are. Most of the patrons at this particular affair seemed more interested in socializing than looking at the exhibit. The combined effect of the behavior of the great majority of the people in attendance coupled with their sheer numbers (they went overhead on the elevators of the building) produced an effect somewhat similar to the one they would have achieved had Grand Central Station been chosen as a gallery and the works only exhibited between 4:00 and 6:00 P.M. Despite these distractions, I pressed on and managed to get a good (under the circumstances) look at the photographs.

The exhibit opens with a group of Weston's early platinum prints including one of his more well-known works "Prologue to a Sad Spring," a misty figure of a shrouded woman standing near a tree which appears to be dissolving.

One of his early cloud compositions is also, the picture of his young son's ears were also in the first gallery. Both of these were simple compositions that appeared to be the beginning of a new way to become his distinctive style. Proceeding through the exhibit I was very pleased to notice that Weston saw relationships between clouds, rocks, vegetables, shells, sand, dunes and the human body.

The some 280 prints that comprise the exhibit were selected by Weston's friend and one-time disciple Wilard Van Dyke. Van Dyke did an excellent job in determining the order in which the photographs were to appear and he certainly did a very good job in the use of juxtaposition. Six photographs of peppers are shown in a row each revealing Weston's talent for drawing the meaning out of something normally considered mundane. Weston treats the human body as if he were trying to make the body appear almost as if it were a member of the vegetable kingdom. In another gallery of works done primarily in the 1920's nudes and bodies in fullness of body, all strikingly seamless and impersonal, are shown with a selection of his sand dune landscapes and sand dune nudes. These works were to appear and he compiled a portfolio of photographs and a picture of his wife taken in 1948.

The Bacchae of Euripides

The School of Communications theatrical and documentary film students will direct the work, which will be on sale at the box office on Saturday, Feb. 25, and at a 2 p.m. matinee Sunday, Feb. 28 in Auerbach Auditorium, on campus.

Wine and cheese will be served gratis after the Feb 21 performance, when the audience will have an opportunity to meet the University Players. Tickets will be on sale at both office and performance dates. For reservations, phone (203) 245-6353 during the week.

"The Bacchae" tells the story of Dionysus, also called Bromios and Bacchus, the mythological god of wine, into the Grecian city of Thebes to establish a matrariach, or women-dominated, religion. Dionysus is opposed by Pentheus, the king of Thebes, whose established religion is patriarchal. When his daughters, Maenads, women followers of Dionysus, eventually visit upon Pentheus a classically Greek Fate.

The role of Dionysus will be essayed by James Sutton, a sophomore in political science, Sutton, who comes from San Juan, Trinidad, West Indies, had the leading part of Rhinen, the playwright in Jeanan Wade's play "The Bacchae of Euripides," the tragicomic play by Euripides, the classic Greek poet, has been adapted and directed by Gerald B. Forbes, director of the University Players, University of Hartford.

Forbes has adapted and will direct the work, which will be staged in contemporary fashion, with an electrically-charged score. The Bacchae will be presented at 8 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, Feb. 19-22, and at a 2 p.m. matinee Sunday, Feb. 28 in Auerbach Auditorium, on campus.

NEW HAVEN and NEW LONDON, CT. Balloons are flying these days at Yale and Connecticut College as the Yale Symphony Orchestra and the Conne. College Theater Studies Program rehearse their production of Poulenc’s opera Les Mamelles des Tiresias (The Breasts of Tiresias) which will be presented as part of a fully-staged opera double bill (the other opera is Ravel’s L’ Enfant et les Sortilèges) at Woolsey Hall on the Yale campus, at 8 p.m. Feb. 14 and 15. On Feb. 22 the entire production will travel to New London, CT. for an 8 p.m. performance at Connecticut College in Palmer Auditorium.

The reason for the balloons is that the libretto by Apollinaire concerns a heroine, Thérese, whose long in advance of today’s Women’s Libbers decided that she had had enough of traditional women’s roles. She was so weary of childbearing, of cooking and domestic duties that she decided to shed her womanhood and become a man. She makes the move by disposing of her breasts, which she then puts away in the form of balloons, during the course of an aria in which she sings “Fly Away! Fly Away!” This startling aria, during the course of an aria which soars away in the depleted population was also desired.

When the Poulenc opera is given its U.S. premiere at Brandeis University, the noted American soprano Phyliis Curtin sang the leading role, winning national attention — not only for her breast-shedding, but also for her remarkable singing performance — in magazines and newspapers everywhere. When the Poulenc opera is given its Connecticut premiere in the Woolsey Hall performances in mid-February, one of Miss Curtin’s star pupils at the Yale School of Music, Soprano Sheila Barnes, will portray the ambisexual Thérese who becomes the “male” Tiresias. Miss Curtin who not only enjoys one of the most successful singing careers of our time, but also for her remarkable singing performance — in magazines and newspapers everywhere. Keith’s Column

Late Flashes

By Keith Ritter

I have been remiss in not reviewing the latest offering of Joni Mitchell. After all, if Time magazine sees fit to place her on their sacred cover, who am I not to include her in my literary offering?

Ms. Mitchell’s latest album is entitled Miles of Aisles and is the result of her tour last year. I saw her twice on that tour, once at the start and again at the end. What struck me the second time that I heard her perform was the fact that she was tired. Her voice had lost the airy brilliance it had displayed the first time around and as a result she had rearranged many songs to cover her lack of enthusiasm or just plain weariness.

This quality comes across in spots on the live album. The album was recorded in the middle of the tour, a time when she should have been at her best. The banality of her performances of “Circle Game” and “Both Sides Now” spoil those two beautiful songs. Ms. Mitchell was clearly performing them only because she felt she had to and the songs lack because of this.

The two new songs she intro- duced on the album, “Jerico” and “Love or Money” are excellent poetry but are spoiled by the rock arrangements. Perhaps the success of the rockish Court and Spark album made Joni think that she had to add a heavy bass and drums to be successful.

Obvi- ously, that is a fallacy.

Now that I’ve put down this record, let me speak its praises. The freshness of “Your Sister Taxi” and the rearrangement of “Woodstock” are great. The vocal display that Joni puts on during “You Turn Me On I’m A Radio” is good, but is very differ- ent from the fresh performance she gave of it last February when I first saw her. I listened to my tape of that early concert and I became distressed that this album wasn’t recorded earlier in her tour. She spoke a lot to the audience at the concert and established a good atmosphere about her performance. This was lacking the second time, as well as on the record.

In September Joni came out on stage dressed in a glittery Bettie Miller costume. She said “Don’t let the glitter fool you.” All I can hope for is that she doesn’t fool herself and that on her next album she returns to her brilliant self.

Speaking of foolishness, The Firesign Theater has a new release. Called “Everything you Know Is Wrong” it is their best work since their Porgy and Mudhead days. The album concerns a loose takeoff on the way Danishmian theory that aliens are already here and among us. The routines of a darts (even guess who) jumping into a crevice and an Army training film are very good. Any fan of good comedy, especially radio comedy, should pick up on this record.

Since I’m reviewing “old” albums, Loggins and Messina have produced their best album since the Little In disc. Mother Love is the duo and band at their best, especially Be Free and Greatest. I was pleased to hear that they had not given up on two beliefs, that they had been hopelessly lost to front-page news. However, they have restored their faith and this album is a fine contribution to their musical careers.
President Ames's Analysis

The Proposed 1975-1976 Budget

To understand the pressures we face in preparing next year's budget, it will be helpful to note that close to 70 percent of the College's expenses are for salaries, benefits, and other student support aid, while about 25 percent of our revenues come from the total fee (tuition plus comprehensive fee plus room and board). Thus any salary increases that we make in an effort to offset inflation in the cost-of-living must be paid for in large measure out of an increase in the total fee.

Inflation last year cut almost 12 cents off the purchasing power of the dollar. The dilemma is obvious. We want to raise salaries as far as possible; on the other we want to avoid large increases in the cost of attending college. There is very little "running room" under these constraints!

The proposed budget calls for a $400 increase in the total fee - $330 for tuition, $70 for room and board. If we compare ourselves with the other colleges in the Twelve-College Exchange, this raise matches, on the average, what our sister institutions are doing, and maintains our relative position among them.

By keeping our costs in the other-than-personnel category to a minimum, it will be possible to achieve a 6 percent across-the-board increase in faculty and staff salaries.

The proposed 1975-1976 operating budget is $11,230,000, $675,000 larger than last year's budget, and, like that one, it is balanced. Only $280,000 of the $675,000 increase is for personnel costs, and of that, $80,000 is for an anticipated increase in personnel. The remaining $125,000 is necessary to cover expected escalation in the cost of food and other

It is my estimation that President Ames is a great leader of this institution experiencing a critical period of survival. It is this situation which initiates my candidacy for the position of Vice President. As critical as it may seem, it is my goal to pursue positive action to strengthen this college as a unified body. Among the policies which I consider essential for a healthier institution are: Operational Budget reform, Pre-Registration, Closer Student-Faculty relations on the one hand and the Practical Development of Campus Facilities. At first notice these categories might appear rather general, so permit me to present the basic facts behind these concepts without boring you with my monologue.

The modern cliche of the "hill" has vastly deteriorated in Connecticut College has reached a more democratic institution. Inflation last year cut almost 12 cents off the purchasing power of the dollar. The dilemma is obvious. We want to raise salaries as far as possible; on the other we want to avoid large increases in the cost

Menu for Vegetarians.

We need something extraordinary. New ideas, dedicated individuals, call it what you may. But we need it now. The quality of life on this "hill" has vastly deteriorated in the past two years. Social activities have been few. More than "cheap" bands, taped music, and beer simply no longer make it. And unfortunately, New Englanders really don't make it either.

So we are left with a dilemma. Do we accept a lackluster, if not depressing, social program, a series of academic speakers which come to our campus occasionally, an FM radio station struggling to be professional, but hardly functional, and a social function that doesn't function as a congenial academic policy decisions, our life around here a little more exciting, weekends might even offer a little variety; a good band for a change.

What I have proposed here are essential Items. It should be emphasized that the room and board fee is calculated to exactly cover the cost of the dining halls and the dormitories. As you may know, we have been considering the possibility of consolidating our dining plan so that only Harris and Smith-Burdick would be used. However, it is our judgment that this time that the present dining plan is too valuable a part of campus life to be abandoned. For the future year the pressures for consolidation may well be greater. I am asking the College Development Board to study this and the advantages and disadvantages of such a move before this time next

The Student Government at Connecticut College has reached a turn in time in which it must re-examine old policies and goals and come to a rededication of the needs of this community. These new goals will be an aid and will influence the college budget-making process, so that our needs as students in relationship to the community can be administered effectively.

The primary aim and goal of the student government should be an effective voice for the expression of student sentiments in all areas of the college, including academics, the budget, faculty and the setting of policies for the college. Student Government is and must continue to strive to be a viable vehicle for student participation into the overall quality of life on campus.

One major problem affecting this community is the lack of sufficient and varied activities at this college. Student Government must continue to strive to be a viable vehicle for student participation into the overall quality of life on campus.

Social Board. It is apparent that this fee is not large enough to support these events. The fund totals to approximately $64,000 while $47,400 have been authorized by the financial sub-committee of College Council for club requests amounting to $47,400. The Activities Fund must be enlarged to increase the number of activities on campus and to provide both a socially enjoyable and intellectually stimulating environment. The proposed budget will effect the need for immediate change in the structure of the Social Board. In previous years the board has been run informally and successfully for the size of the college. With an increased budget, the board will need to enlarge in size and scope of responsibility. Personally I would like to serve as a clearing house for events planned for the campus. The board should be comprised of the four class social chairmen, eight members at large, elected by the student assembly and one chairman nominated by the president of student government and approved by the student assembly. The Function and authority of the board and an increase in funding will create a body which can plan and control our yearly budget, as well as a co-ed institution our size.

I have briefly mentioned a few of the major problems that I see affecting this community. As Vice President of Student Government, my efforts will be directed toward solving these issues. Even more importantly my efforts will be directed toward increasing our understanding and participation, in order that our needs and concerns will have an effect on our life in this community. Student Government is your voice and tool, and with strong leadership it can incite change, but only if your voice is heard.

We are greatly concerned about the effect that the proposed 8.7 percent increase in the total fee may have on the College’s ability to continue attracting a diverse and talented student body. The proposed budget calls for an 8.7 percent increase in student aid for next year, and we will continue to explore every possible way to enlarge our student aid program.

It should be understood that I have been discussing a proposed budget. None of the figures will be firm until the budget is approved by the Board of Trustees.

The works of Edward Weston are considered classic, a situation that, though certainly personally satisfying to the artist, sometimes tends to undermine proper appreciation of the art itself. People often take the virtues of a classic for granted and everything that was once daring and original stands in danger of being consigned to the realm of the ordinary. Weston was one of the original artists of his generation and his place as one of the greats of photography is secure. The art of photography may have taken down new paths and opened new doors since the demise of Edward Weston but it’s never lost its appeal. Like that of all great art, remains significant. Weston’s work was exemplar and it merits a sharp focus pieces that isolate a permanent place for the greats in the history of photography.

Four out of the six members of the Italian International Team are rejoicing today. They celebrate Italy’s sensational team from behind Greece to win the 1973 World Championship. The other two members, Gianfranco Facchini and Sergio Zuccelli, have nothing to be happy about. Earlier in the week, the World Bridge Beth reprimanded them, without actually rendering a verdict of guilt. For sending illegal foot signals beneath the table. Then, they played very poorly for the first sixteen deals of the final match. USA and were bunched by the team captain for the remainder of play.

It is now known for sure whether they did cheat. The WBF ruling on this subject represents a curious abdication of responsibility.

mugs are less expensive than a cup and saucer, thus making them a good way to save valuable budget monies. Ms. Voorhees explained that this plan and others, such as the drop to regular cups, attributing the remainder of play. Another campaign currently being pursued by the Food Services is to stop waste in the dining rooms. Essentially, the program is to impress upon students the harm in taking food that they are not going to eat. This cause is being supplemented with student posters that appear in obvious places in the dining rooms.

Ms. Voorhees explained that this plan and others, such as the returning of silver and china, will not succeed unless there is “a real desire to live in a viable community. Waste not, want not.”

decided to publish what we consider to be an assault on the intelligence of the entire New London community. It is almost impossible to believe that two members of the student body submitted such an obvious piece of tripe. Why is it, editorial board, that two names were signed to the letter, yet it was composed in the first person singular? Was this their mistake or your’s?

Besides this abominable “mistake” in grammar, some of the suggestions made by Mr. Fyre make good sense. But would it be wise to place the new library in back of the student body?

By MARK MCCKRYSTAL

On February 4, in its biggest game of the season, the Conn College hockey team ousted Columbia, University and proved that it is a serious athletic organization capable of competing on the intercollegiate level. The game was characterized by rough play, penalties, and goals by Paul Sanford, one of the team's outstanding freshman prospects. The brackets were filled with loyal fans and the Conn connections responded to the great display of support by overpowering Columbia 8-1.

Columbia scored early in the first period, but the tally served only as an incentive to the Conn team. Minutes later, wing Gordie Milne emerged with the puck from a violent scramble in the goal crease and drove it home to tie the score at 1. From that point on, the Camels took control of the game, as the Columbia end, far less effective in the Columbia game, as relentless forechecking by forwards Todd Bates, Chris Bowden, and Martin "Shemp" Lammett baffled the Columbia passing attack. Other first period scores were notched by Captain Alec Farley and defensemen Charlie Castele.

A second and third periods brought further success to the Conn Skaters, much to the delight of the fans. The defense of Eric Birnbaum, Mark McCrystal, Dave Reid, and Charlie Castele held Columbia to only a few shots on goalie Ben Cooke. In fact, the defense was so tight that Cooke complained between periods that he was not getting enough work.

He posed the plan that his own players take a few shots at him during the game to keep him awake. The idea was quickly vetoed by Captain Farley and General Manager Dave Merves. Except for a first period goal, Columbia was unable to put the puck past Cooke, who turned in an excellent game.

But the real story of the game was not the rough play, the defense, or the goal-tending. It was the five goals scored by Paul Sanford. Sanford managed continually to find openings in the Columbia defense and to free himself to unleash his extremely accurate shot. The result was five goals and a locker room shower of beer. Sanford is one of six excellent freshman starters who will make the Conn hockey team into a powerhouse as they gain collegiate experience.

On behalf of my teammates, I would like to express our deepest thanks to all the fans who rode the team bus to the Wesleyan rink. Fans are essential for team morale and the results of Tuesday's turnout can be seen in the 8-1 score. Hockey has come a long way at Conn, perhaps the 8-1 smashing hounded Columbia is a sign that it is here to stay as a sport. The fans saw the game sure think so and the players hope that more people will now take notice. Furthermore, the team hopes Administration will recognize this great achievement and respond with more financial aid to a sport that is apparently here to stay at Connecticut College.

Camels down Mohegan Community

by Anne Rebillard

The men's basketball team recorded their second victory of the season, defeating Mohegan Community College in an "NBA type" game with lots of scoring. The final score was 106-97. This brings their record to one game above the .500 mark at 5-4.

The Camels were losing 9-3 at one point in the beginning of the game but proceeded to pull away and build up a 17-point lead in the beginning of the game but proceeded to pull away and build an 18-point half-time lead, 53-35. During the course of the second half they widened their lead to 26 points. Some sloppy play in the last few minutes of the game allowed Mohegan to begin a comeback but they were only able to get within eleven points. Conn used a balanced scoring ability that has worked to their benefit with six players reaching double figures. Peter Bellotti had his highest scoring night of the season leading the Camels with 24 points. Jeff Bellotti had his highest scoring total of the season with 21 points. Mike Franklin is at 11.5, Kevin Copeland has 10.66 and Peter Bellotti is scoring 10.12 points per game.
