OXFAM: No Food, No Thought

Oxfam: a well-needed break for Harris employees, a new start for campus community, a time to make a change. Oxfam provides a new opportunity for students to reflect on the issue of hunger and the responsibilities we all have in fighting it. Oxfam has set up a food drive this week on campus, and it is important for students to take part and make a difference.

The Honor Code has its problems. The C-Book misleads students by stating that only a student who has not taken a class in the Honor Code is required to report a violation. Friends and students who do not report violations are not respectful for the honor code. The Honor Code is a tool that is part of our school's traditions, and we must respect it. The College Voice touts our tradition of shared governance, but if we wish to reestablish a relationship of trust with Oxfam, we must understand for the root causes of starvation and hunger.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

The College Voice should not have run Hirschman Responds to Voice Article, Bieluch Letter. The editorial on the front page of the Voice should have been a story on SGA Finance Committee. Both had printed both pieces in the same issue, so that all involved would have the opportunity to respond within that issue, yet it seems the same issues were revisited.

Sincerely,

A Meridian Student

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. Supreme Court justices heard arguments Tuesday about whether the University of Wisconsin-Madison could bar smoking in the dining halls. The university argued that smoking is a health hazard. The students said they have a right to smoke in their dining hall. The Supreme Court justices will hear a case that could set precedent for smoking bans at public universities across the nation.

The arguments were held in the University of Wisconsin-Madison's Road Runner Diner. Students reported that the smoking ban has caused some of them to find other places to eat. They said the school was forcing them to pay for their meals somewhere else. The school also offered a smoking section. But students said they were not allowed to smoke there. They said the smoking ban was forcing them to find other places to eat.

The court justices heard arguments from two sides. The university argued that it was trying to protect the health of its students. The students argued that they had a right to smoke in their dining hall.

Managing Editor...tain and make viewers think, and it Christ works at an abortion clinic, definitely succeeded in makin...It was a busy Saturday night. It wouldn’t be a stretch to say the staff was quick and friendly, and the food was fast and came at a reasonable price. In fact, if you’re looking to catch the local flavor and some decent Italian food, head to Hughie’s, but don’t let the décor fool you on the way out. Each piece from the show communicated a sense of connection to the audience, displaying emotion through gestures and body language. The most striking example of this was after the first act, performed by Adrian Clark ’93. The piece began with the chaotic sounds of conversations, followed by band and mocking laughs, and a full house every night of the performance and the audience response was overwhelmingly positive.

With stance, but more than I knew. I've been told a great number of people were concerned about the film being a bit predictable and formulaic. However, I personally found the film to be quite engaging and well-paced. It certainly keeps you on your toes and leaves you with plenty to think about. Overall, I would give it a solid B+ rating, which is an excellent score for a film that takes risks and challenges the conventions of the genre. If you're looking for a thought-provoking crime thriller, then I highly recommend seeing this film. It will definitely leave you with something to talk about afterwards.

Spicing It Up: Conn Learns Salsa

Salsa. I'm moderately familiar with this indoor dance of the Caribbean. I know that the music consists of cumbias, boleros, and danzas with snazzy hooks, an occasional brass instrument like the trombone, and a drum beat that's a cross between the snare and the conga. The inscrutable lyrics have a way of entwining and unentwining with each other in ways that are simultaneously confusing and intoxicating. It is definitely an art form that I wish was more prevalent in the world. My only problem with the acting was the casting of Jimmy Page. Although he is a gifted musician, his acting is not quite up to par. He needs more experience and training in the craft. Other than that, though, I think the film is a success. I give it a B rating out of 10 and recommend it to anyone who enjoys well-crafted crime dramas.

Joe Henry's Fuse under Appreciated Gem

By NERINIOE PAGE

It never ceases to amaze me how much the world has changed over the last few decades. From the rise of the internet to the decline of the movie theater, there have been many changes in our society. However, one thing that has remained constant is the power of music. It is a universal language that connects people across cultures and generations. Joe Henry's latest album, Fuse, is a testament to this timeless truth. The album is filled with music that is both raw and refined, blending elements of rock, folk, and soul to create a sound that is uniquely Joe Henry's. I highly recommend this album to anyone who loves good music.

The "Rage" Lives On in Rage Against the Machine's The Battle of Los Angeles

By JESSE ERDEM

Rage Against the Machine's debut album, The Battle of Los Angeles, has left a lasting impression on the music world. It is a record that truly captured the spirit of the times, and its influence can still be felt today. The band's message of social and political injustice resonated with listeners all over the world, and the album continues to inspire new generations of musicians and fans. I give it a solid A rating, and I encourage everyone to check it out if they haven't already.

Deutsche Kammerphilharmonie Offers an Impressively Performance

By TENEGYNY TSENGELRODEN

Last Wednesday’s, concert by the Deutsche Kammerphilharmonie, under the direction of conductor Gerd Albrecht, was a musical gem from the Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony. The performance was simply stunning, with the orchestra playing with great passion and urgency. The ensemble was led by a conductor who truly captures the spirit of the music. The orchestra played with a great deal of energy and conviction, and the results were simply mesmerizing. This was a performance that will be remembered for a long time to come.

The women’s basketball team at Connecticut College has high expectations for this season. That’s not based on any pre- season predictions, but rather the success of the women’s basketball team in the past two years.

"We had a good season last year and we have a lot of returning talent," said head coach David Goodrich. "It’s really exciting to see everyone come together." The Lady Camels were good this year, and the coaches are excited for the upcoming season.

The key to this year’s team will be their play in the backcourt. The guards must play well for this team to win. "Our team has a lot of depth in the backcourt," said Goodrich. "We have a lot of options in terms of who plays the point." The team is expected to have a good season, and the coaches are optimistic about their chances of improving over last year.

The players have spent a lot of time in the gym this summer, working on their conditioning and improving their skills. "We have a lot of experience returning this year," said Goodrich. "We have a lot of players who have been here for a few years and have a lot of confidence in their abilities."
