New Guard House Will Be Completed Within Two Weeks

Mr. Corbin Lyman, College business manager, announced last week construction of several new additions to the campus.

Mr. Lyman said construction of the building to house the college guards is expected to be completed within the next two weeks. He said the new building will house about 30 guards and a security radio.

He also revealed that construction of a new parking lot south of Williams School will begin soon. He noted that it will accommodate 350 cars, replace the present parking lot which will be the site of the Music and Art Building.

He continued that in conjunction with the new parking lot, a new road will be built between the main campus and Lyman Allyn Museum. According to Mr. Lyman, the new road will have a sidewalk and will be well lighted.

Mr. Lyman also said that the college anticipates constructing a central service building south of the main campus to house the college security radio.

Fathers of Students to Speak At Soph. Symposium Sessions

Miss M. Gertrude McKeon, dean of sophomores, announced last week that the Student Government House of Rep. Straw Votes Approval Of Constitution

Miss M. Gertrude McKeon, dean of sophomores, announced last week that the Student Government House of Rep. Straw Votes Approval Of Constitution.

The Straw Votes Approval Of Constitution will be presented by the Connecticut College Chorus and the Yale Glee Club Wednesday, December 14, at 8:30 p.m. in Palmer Auditorium.

Three programs will consist of three parts. The Connecticut College Chorus, directed by James Armstrong and assisted by harpist Katheryn F. Sherman, will sing "A Ceremony of Carols" Op. 28, by Benjamin Britten (1942). Soloists will include: Pauline Schwendt '70, Shirley Hime '70, Karen Nick- sons '70, Nancy Barry '69, Estelle Williams '70, and Miss Pagano '70, Mrs. Elizabeth Brevort '60, Nancy Burt '70, and Diane Levy '70.

The Yale Glee Club, directed by Feenie Heath, associate professor of Choral Music, at the Yale School of Music, will follow with "In Es Ist Kindere", a Dutch Christmas carol. Tenor soloist Michael A. Barret '69 will be featured. The glee club will also sing the Hungarian Songs (1906), "When I Was One and Twenty," and "Lovest a Lassie, From a Shyfarnp Lad" by A. E. Housman.

Two Negro Spirituals

They will end their performance with two Negro spirituals. "He Never Said a Manlini' Word" and "In That Great Gettin' Up Morning," featuring tenor soloist John P. Mitchell '67 and baritone soloist Thomas L. Lotters '67.

The two groups will then join to sing four settings of the Medieval Carol in card, "In Dulci Jubilo." Mr. Armstrong will conduct the Connecticut College Chorus, produced by Seese Burtis '70, and Diane Levy '70.

A rough draft of the revised constitution was presented at last Monday's Cabinet meeting. One major change is the creation of Cabinet. Formerly it was composed of President of Student Government, Chief Justice of Honor Court, Speaker of the House, President of Student Government, Secretary-Treasurer of Student Government, President of the Athletic Association, President of Service League, President of Religion Fellowship, and the faculty advisor of the Chorus.

The revised constitution dropping from the rules of Cabinet. The present plan is to have the clubs assigned to one of the above groups.

The revised constitution of the Student Government Association has completed its tumultuous emergence from Cabinet and will soon be voted on by the House of Representatives.

The most controversial aspect of the constitution is the issue of the vote. Heated discussion and a Cabinet vote preceded writing of the first draft in discussion of the CONN CENSUS editor and student chairman of the Student-Faculty Academic Committee as a representative of the student body.

The prevailing argument against letting the CONN CENSUS editor and Academic Committee chairman vote is that they are not properly elected. They have been argued that allowing them to vote undermines Cabinet's function as a "representative" body. It is necessary, however, to consider the significance of the term "representative" in the discussion.

The purpose of the Student Government Association, as given in the revised constitution, is to serve as a channel for student opinion. The Association does not possess the power to legislate by itself. All proposals passed by the House of Representatives and Cabinet must be submitted to a faculty-student committee before they are presented to the body before Alumni. Cabinet and House of Representatives serve as constructive clearing houses for student opinion on matters within their jurisdiction.

The ideal student government, then, is one which best represents student opinion in its dealings with the faculty and administration.

In view of the above, it is necessary to ask if popular elections should be the sole determinant of eligibility to represent student opinion in a collegiate branch of student government. We think it should. Cabinet should be "representative" in the sense of representing major campus interests which do in fact register student opinion.

A case in point is the class president. She is elected by one fourth of the students. We think we can safely say that the class member holds his decision more on the candidate's potential and administration. The class president's decision more on the candidate's potential and administration.

The Theory of Physical Education used by the Michigan State Football team physical education majors.

If physical education is such a science the next thing you know there will be a physical education major at Conn. If regurgitating a golf club for 90 minutes a week will really help me get getting on the crew I am all for it. So sure would end the tournament all in one day. 3. Chasing after taxi's and 5. Warding off the advances of male admirers.

There seem to be some real distance in their letter which show how confined their point of view really is. If the "aboriginal society" and "physical education classes," requires regular attendance for a given period; then it is very "reasonable safety and progress are to be realized," then why are there fittings for grades at all? Students can make up missed sessions during the year in a different form of physical activity where the "logical progression" when a student can make up a missed tennis class from work on the months later.

RTC Mothers Find Courses Valuable Break in Routine

by Anne Palmer

To gain insight into what the Return to College Program means to them, several mothers were motivated to choose it. Some of them recently interviewed four participants.

As a faculty wife, an RTC participant, a former student, and New York University, Mrs. George Williams says she views Conn from several perspectives. Mrs. Williams, who had worked studied, or traveled in Paris, Spain, China, and the United States, is working to complete her Yale degree in French. Contrasting her academic situation at N.Y.U. and Teachers College, Mrs. Williams noted the huge size of N.Y.U. and its emphasis on choral music participation rather than on paper courses.

Students Too Polite

"It's a little difficult to get organized for writing papers," she said. She also noted that at N.Y.U. students challenged and heckled the professors, while at Conn the professors must heckle the girls to get them to produce intelligent work.

"The girls are too polite," she concluded.

Mrs. Sheila Lamb was a Conn student until she left in 1957 to marry a "Cowboy." While a student at Conn, Mrs. Lamb was president of the Connitoris's Club, a member of Religious Fellowship. In her absence from Conn, Mrs. Lamb has worked while her band earned her P.H.D. and is now the mother of three children, ages 3, 4, and 6.

Now that her husband has completed his P.H.D., Mrs. Lamb feels free to return to her studies and complete her degree in psychology.

"I am a lot more serious about my work now," she said. She enjoys taking just one course, Psychology of Personality, because she can devote more time to it and become more involved in it than if she had to divide her time amongst several courses.

Work Welcome Break

She finds her course at Conn a welcome break from her house-oriented life. After hearing hollering shouting all day, it's refreshing to hear intelligent, interesting conversation.

She noted that night is the best time to study, although she is unable to sleep from a long, "Instead of hopping into bed, I have to flop into a big bag."

Mrs. Mary Dunn, who has been provided through Student Org. a number of years, finds her course time to study, although she is the mother of three children, ages 3, 4, and 6.

"It's a little difficult to get organized for writing papers," she said. Then the added, "The Chinese people need and want change. Tradition holds the Chinese people back," she said.

"I don't think it was easy study. We usually study at the same time and are quiet together." She believes her studies provides a good example for her children and will help them to keep learning.

Along with her course in Chinese, Mrs. Williams helps teach a beginning course in the Chinese language. "I appreciate the opportunity I have in the U.S. to study and teach. I don't think I could do this in any other place in the world, including my own country."

CHRISTMAS CONCERT

voices by Archibald T. Davidson.

Caroll Through Campus

After the concert the concert the choral will proceed on the campus ending with a party at the home of Wenger.

The men will be guests of the chorus at the traditional Christmas dinner in the dorms.

The Yale Glee Club began at the Yale Musical Society in 1813. At first confining themselves to sacred music, the group expanded in both number and repertoire. In the early growth of the Club resulted from the efforts of Gustave Stockel, an outstanding Bavarian musician who joined the Yale faculty in 1855. The Club achieved national prominence by winning the National Championship in the Intercollegiate Glee Club contest of 1924 and 1925. In subsequent years the Club appeared in numerous American cities, winning various regional and national honors.

Performed in Europe

The Yale Glee Club has also performed in England and in Europe under Mr. Mouth. In the fall of 1941, the first student chorus from North America to travel south of the equator. Early last summer the Club participated in the Leipzig International University Church Music Festival, followed by the International University Choral Concert in New Haven.

The Club, which includes one of five choruses to represent the United States.

The president of the Yale Glee Club is James J. Stuart, '27, and the accompanist is M. Andrew Johnstone '88 and Walter R. Buhl '22.

In 1953 Fennos Heath was chosen Director of the Yale Glee Club. As an undergraduate at Yale, Mr. Heath was a member of the club and the Wiltonseeks. While in the army he conducted three Army choruses and was chosen by the Bach Festival in the Bacheke Arts degree.

During his sabatical leave in Heidelberg in 1946, he wrote music for several poems by A. E. Houseman, and arranged the two spirituals and "Er Ist Een Kindje" all of which will be sung in the concert.

The concert will include the first performance of the NEW Bach Festival, a concert instrumental made in Germany and purchased by the college to make possible the authentic performance of early music.

DAVID SMALLEY SCULPTURE NOW ON EXHIBIT AT LYMAN ALLYN MUSEUM

The recent sculpture of Mr. David Allan Smalley, instructor in art, is on display at the Lyman Allyun Museum in a one-man show which will run until December 30. Mr. Smalley said he was first interested in industrial design rather than sculpture. His pieces, like those of the later David Smith, are almost of steel. The exhibition is partly dedicated to sculpture.

The sculpture is abstract and extremely geometric. The massive feeling conveyed by the bold geometric shapes is combined with half-circular shapes which seem to contract or envelop the surrounding space.

Painted Steel

His steel pieces are painted. The painting of the semi-circular shapes, as, for example, "Army I" are often accented with lighter or brighter shades. Although most of his pieces, small and large, gain the impression of heavy, strong solidity, Mr. Smalley has made a delicate use of the negative space. This is especially evident in the shadows cast by his "Belted".

Of all the pieces, Mr. Smalley noted that "Belted" represents the "idea" he is most interested in at present. "It is a contrast," he later, and we comment that it has as its base both the wall and the floor.

The "Belted" is a "Rolling Power"

Several of the pieces represent continuing ideas or modes of expression. The "Belted" and "Army I" seem to be almost smaller versions of the latter "Belted" and "Army I" respectively.

It is the balance in their powerful, massive shapes. However, Mr. Smalley warns, "Don't get trapped by titles." For example, "Army II" was named after it was completed.

This does not mean, he stated, that the title was purely arbitrary, but that the observer should not "look at the object merely as an illustration of the title."

Sculpture Vital Art

About sculpture in general Mr. Smalley stated that in the past sculpture was always a follow-up of the other types of art. Today the sculptor can be created, thanks to technical improvements, as rapidly as a painting. He also believes that it is now equally vital as an art. Of his own sculpture he says it is "landmark," that is, it is something like a "Buttress" and "Army II" in which he made a continued Crease or modes of expression. He said he made a conscious effort to reflect in his creations the things that most greatly affect him. He spends thirty hours a week on his own sculpture. There is, he pointed out, "no instant way of making a sculpture."

There are nine pieces of sculpture, three drawings, and one relief piece in the show; representing three years work. Thirteen, would seem, is Mr. Smalley's number.

Among the accompanists are M. Andrew Johnstone '88 and Walter B. Buhl '22.
ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICES COMPARE CONN'S PUBLIC RELATIONS MATERIAL

by Nancy R. Finn

Have you ever wondered how the new student College course catalogue comes into existence each April, or who compiles all the names and addresses for the College Directory?

These, and many other College publications, are the product of one, or a combination of administrative departments, including the President's Office, News Office, offices of Admissions and Development and Photographic Services.

Miss Viola Eastman, secretary to the President, explained that these offices cooperate to create the wide range of publications which form a vital link between Connecticut and its public-faculty, students, parents, alumnae and friends.

Prime Example

A prime example of this cooperation is the viewbook printed last summer, "Connecticut College: A Community of Inquiry." A viewbook, explained Miss Eastman, is "a tool for the serious prospective student who is interested in knowing what Conn's philosophy is." Excerpted for two pages of information, the book contains entirely of candid photos of members of the College community, accompanied, according to Miss Eastman, by introduction, quotations from articles and lectures by members of the College community. Miss Eastman pointed out that no quotation was written specifically for the book, but each was used with permission of the author.

The viewbook, Eastman said, the combined effort of the faculty, the President's office, News Office and office of Photographic Services.

Too Late for Competition

In publication come too late for entry this year in the American College Public Relations Association competition, in which annual awards are presented for outstanding publications in various categories. This viewbook will be included next year.

Miss Eastman noted that Conn has won several first prizes and honorable mentions in past ACPRCA competitions.

Another example of inter-departmental cooperation is a brochure issued this year explaining the Return To College program. Its copy and format was prepared by Mrs. Margaret Thompson, director of the News Office, in cooperation with Mrs. MacCord Ford, student financial officer and director of RTCC, and Philip Brickey, school photographer, who took pictures.

Other publications are prepared with the help of Mrs. Margaret F. Herrman, assistant in publications. They include the President's Report, which keeps the public up to date on the state of the College; and long range plans, special bulletins on College affairs; and pieces to be used by alumnae groups in talking to prospective students.

Academic departments also cooperate in the preparation of brochures concerned, with special events, such as recitals in the music department.

In the News Office, Mrs. Thompson, and Mrs. Dorothy Eastland, assistant to the director, prepare such items as the monthly calendar, listing events to be held at the College; CC News, printed four times a week, which Miss Eastman said, "is sent to our entire community, 20,000 people" and bulletin announcing or explaining special programs, such as The School of Dance.

Departments Cooperate

The Admissions Office, under the direction of Dr. Robert Coblentz, is responsible for brochures which explain admission of transferring and the early decision plan.

John Detmold, director of development, annually issues a booklet listing the previous year's contributors of gifts to the College.

These are only a few of the specific pieces which make up Conn's store of public relations material, and only a few of the people involved in the complicated process of preparing each piece for printing.

Naturally, Miss Eastman said, there are many considerations to be made in the procedure, "We must always keep in mind the size of the piece and its unit cost, and we must determine how and by whom the piece will be used." Not least among these problems, she continued, concerns differences in individual tastes. However, she added, "It's this diversity in people contributing to each publication that makes the whole field so interesting.

Collection of Victorian Toys

by Ann Milly

The Barns Emporium has opened at the Lyman-Allyn Museum. Donated by Mrs. Miss Burton, the collection consists of Victorian toys as they would have been presented in a toy store of the period.

At the entrance a wreath, miniature Christmas trees and a converted whale oil street lamp from the New London streets of the 1860's contribute a spirit of Christmas to the display.

The interior is the dream of every Victorian child. Marbles, lead soldiers, banks and mechanical toys in their original boxes would interest the boys. For the girls there are toy sets, a large assortment of dolls, miniature furniture, doll carriages and doll sized cooking and cleaning utensils. The collection also includes a miniature piano and an old Franklin store.

Mrs. Burton has collected the toys over the past 35 years, buying old toys from toy stores when they went out of business and storing them in her home. She agreed to donate the toys to the museum if the museum would display them in the setting of a Victorian toy store.

The exhibit will be on display until the end of the month, at which time the toys will be added to the collection of dolls and doll furniture in the museum's permanent doll house display. This display contains two large doll houses, one in the style of 1850 and the other a Victorian brownstone, which house a complete family of dolls and interior furnishings.

The larger doll house is about ten feet high and has three floors and ten rooms. It is complete to the smallest sewing machine, silver and crystal services, and a small Christmas tree decorated with doll clothes and ornaments. Though the Victorian brownstone is on a somewhat smaller scale, the furnishings in its seven rooms are every bit as complete.

Pastry Chef Observes Girls From Other Side of Counter

By Patti Bernstein

One of the most unsung heroes on campus is probably Arthur Bahoum, College pastry cook, who practices his culinary art in Harris Refectory. Originally from Brooklyn, Man.

Winged Defeat. Donovan's Sally, the Arcopolis, the White Elephant, Gate-A-Go-Go, the White Whale and the Elptive Marbles are among the nominal gems that we have heard around the campus. Votes of confidence and new suggestions are welcomed by Conn Census. Submit your ideas to Box 1867.

Conn Census will announce the Guard House’s most popular hands in the first issue after Christmas vacation.

Mr. Bahoum has been working at Conn since 1927. He said he begins as chef but switched to pastry cook two years ago. Nevertheless, he said, "I enjoy baking on a small scale.”

Providing dessert for 1,500 girls, however, is hardly "small scale.” In addition, he noted that we do not have particularly small appetites. Reminiscing about his experiences as chef at Amherst many years ago, he said, "the girls here definitely eat as much as they do..."

One example of his artistry is a gingerbread house which he bakes every year at Christmas for one of the local hospitals. Although Mr. Bahoum noted "work is work,” he admitted that his job has many good points.

When asked for his opinion of Conn girls, as seen from the other side of the counter, he quipped, "You don’t really want my observations on that!” However, he quickly added that although he has to gaze on multitudes of ravenous girls three times a day, "they're a bunch of dolls.”

STUDENT GOVT.

(Art. from page 1) name and composition of the Faculty-Student Committee on Student Organization. Now called the Student-Faculty Committee, its composition is increased from three to four student voters to four with the addition of the vice-president of Student Government. Formerly the student member of the Committee was: the President of Student Government. Students who attended the House of Representatives meeting last Wednesday were the President of the Sophomore class. If passed, this action would make the Committee composed of four student and four faculty voting members.

Change in Warning

Other changes include the wording of the purpose of the Student Government. Previously the purpose was to "control all appropriate matters of the social and conduct in the student body which do not fall under the jurisdiction of the faculty.” Now the Student Government "provides a channel of student opinion regarding matters of general interest to the College.”

Compulsory Analgo meetings will now be held whenever necessary instead of every month. Joint meetings of the Student-Faculty Committee on Student Organizations and Cabinet have been deleted from the Constitution.

Article VI on Referendums and Article VII on Parliamentary Authority have been taken out of the Constitution. Also, amendment to be voted on at Amalgo meetings must be posted any time prior to the meeting instead of the former required two weeks before the meeting.

If the revised Constitution is passed by the House of Representatives next Wednesday, it will go back to Cabinet, then to "Student Org.” If passed by that committee, the constitution will be voted on at the January Analgo.

Student Cuts Two Records; Plans Tour, Singing Career

by Dilys Blum

Connecticut's folk-singer-in-residence, Jackie Follett, '66, last summer cut several records for MCM-Verve/Folkways, two of which will be released Dec. 8. The first tune, "That's a Good Enough Reason," was written by her producer, Rick Shorter, and the second, "There's a Moment," she composed herself.

Jackie explained that a friend who attends Antioch College invited her to record a demo-recording with his band last March. They took the recording to the William Morris Agency in New York, and Jackie was then sent to the E. B. Marks Music Company, where she met and rehearsed with Rick Shorter.

Jackie said she is not under contract with any specific recording company, but is free-lance. This allows for more mobility in her work, she said, but she is obligated to these recording how- ever. She has been a member of Conn Chords since her freshman year, and last year she sang several times at The Barn with a local band from Waterford, "The Wind- jammers." The group is affiliated with the Haddahallah Club and was featured in Life Magazine last summer.

Momunt," she composed herself.

Miss Kerwin's primary interests are medieval and American literature. She said she finds her courses "challenging and rewarding." for the encouragement which she has received from her instructors. Her interests are Renaissance and Restoration literature.

Miss Mallindine also receives tuition aid by working part-time in the News Office. Almost one-half of the students are part-time. They take fewer than three courses and complete degree requirements in two years. Thirty-four are full-time students and attend three or more classes a week.

DEFEATED INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE ADDRESSES PEACE CLUB AT CONN

by Ellen McCulloch

"I appeal, not to your prejudices, but to your ideals; not to your fears, but to your hopes," stated Robert Cook, Independent candidate in the recent campaign for Congress in Connecticut's third district. Mr. Cook reiterated his views in a discussion of his campaign at a meeting of the Peace Club, Dec. 7.

Mr. Cook first spoke about his basic platform as a candidate running on the American Independent Movement (AIM) ticket. He said he firmly believes that "non-partisanship does not mean non-political."

Success Not Expected

Mr. Cook did not anticipate success in this year's campaign against Democrat incumbent Rob e rt Giamo and Republican challenger Statio Salmo. Cook said he was encouraged, however, by election results. He received 5,361 of the vote (8,500), the highest of any independent candidate in the country. In 10 wards in New Haven, he gained from 10% to 25% of the vote.

The Independent Cook stressed the fact that the maximum goal of any campaign is to gain votes and get elected. A most pressing concern of Cook's Independent Political Action Committee (IPAC) was to build an effective political organization in the community. "We understand this will not be done in a year."

Plans Unsure

The future plans of the Yale professor are unsure, but he said he plans to learn from past failures and to continue to work on the political contact built up.

"A campaign can't be too intellectual," Cook commented. "You have to work with actual problems. A political organization should actually help people and change their lives.

Mr. Cook said his independent campaign was not interested merely in opposition politics. Although he did not gain representation in Congress, Mr. Cook could cite several goals which he believes the IPAC can achieve. He said that the maximum goal of any campaign is to gain votes and get elected. A most pressing concern of Cook's Independent Political Action Committee (IPAC) was to build an effective political organization in the community. "We understand this will not be done in a year."

Government Data Discloses Increase In Graduate Study

WASHINGTON (CPS) - A higher percentage of today's college graduates is going on to receive post-graduate and professional degrees, according to data released recently by the U.S. Office of Education.

During the academic year ending June 1965, when Americans won more college and university degrees than ever before, master's degrees showed a greater rate of increase than bachelor's degrees. Bachelor's degrees, at 17,500, were up 5% from the previous year. Master's degrees totalled 112,200, up 11% per cent, and doctorates reached 10,000, a 14% per cent increase.

First-professional degrees, granted chiefly in medicine, law, and religion and requiring more than four years of study, went up 10 per cent to 46,000.

The 115,700 bachelor's degrees in education accounted for nearly one-fourth of all bachelor's degrees. The 43,700 master's degrees in education represented about two-fifths of the degrees in this category. The physical sciences led in doctoral degrees, with 3,600. Education was second with 2,700 and engineering third with 2,100.
