HUMAN ECOLOGY MAJORS PLAN WINDMILL

by CRIS REVAZ

While many of us merely worry about the dwindling supplies of energy and the high cost of running a home, a car, or even a college campus, two of Conn's more creative students are doing something about it. Joshua Lyons, '80, and Scott Kling, '81, have come up with what they call a "viable alternative" to other sources of electricity: namely, wind power. In conjunction with the Human Ecology Program and the Physics Department, Lyons and Kling are planning to construct a windmill on the roof of the college library, and they hope the electricity that it creates will be sufficient enough to run WCNI, the college radio station.

The construction of the windmill is an independent project that the two Human Ecology majors chose to pursue as a part of the Human Ecology Program. They are under the supervision and guidance of Sally Taylor, Botany Professor, and Dr. David Fenton, Physics Professor. Most other students work at the Thanes Science Center to fulfill the requirement, but Scott and Josh elected to be a bit more adventurous. They have applied for a $6,915 grant from ten various corporations and so far have received $3,000 of it from The Conservation and Research Foundation. It seems very likely that they will receive the rest of the money from other foundations and corporations.

Lyons and Kling have been spending the semester monitoring and analyzing data, and coordinating the resources of the college. They both feel very strongly that wind power, which is an indirect form of solar power, is one of the most economical, practical and dependable sources of energy available. Provided that the windmill, known as the EnerTech 1500, is installed in a windy location, it can supply 60 percent of the electricity needed to run an average American home. Kling and Lyons have established the five major goals of the project. In their own words, they are:

1. To perform research in areas of a) monitoring and testing the system’s efficiency and performance in the field, and b) the evaluation of the cost-benefit feasibility of using wind power as an economic source of energy in Southeastern Connecticut.

2. To increase public awareness and encourage widespread use of wind through practical application and demonstration. The radio station will advertise its utilization of wind energy. The project will also serve as an educational center and "environmental model" for the New London and College communities.

3. To save energy and reduce the operating overhead of the radio station by making the best use of available resources. Present studies indicate that Connecticut College is an ideal location for a wind powered system. The project

CARTER RECORD OR KENNEDY MYTH?

By WILLIAM A. FRASURE

It used to be fashionable to observe that Americans are naive about the relevance of private character to the public performance of political leaders. It was silly of us not to understand, so the argument went, that statements could live by the same standards as anyone else, but if they did then they would not be effective in this world full of dangers. Someone must have taken those arguments seriously, because even though the strange, unpleasant nature of Richard Nixon's character was part of the common lore, we elected him anyway, twice.

Now comes Ted Kennedy, reminding us that Jimmy Carter is not an effective leader, suggesting that our most serious problems are attributable to Carter's lack of leadership, and pleading that Kennedy, by family tradition as well as long experience in the Senate, is well qualified and likely to provide the leadership that we need. He's bailing out of the 1980 presidential race to support Kennedy's candidacy. Carter was not naive enough to make that fatal mistake.

One need not be a nostalgic, statist Kennedy lover to acknowledge that there may be something to his case. The essence of it is that it offers a necessary illusion. Perhaps enough people would have confidence in his leadership, that the problems of continued on page 5

PROF. WINTER INVITED TO WHITE HOUSE

By Terry Graves

Jerry Winter, chairman of Connecticut College's Sociology Department, attended a White House briefing on the SALT II treaty last Thurs. The briefing was one of several held for selected community leaders from various regions of the U.S. Mr. Winter is still uncertain of the reasons for his inclusion: he voiced a feeling that perhaps it was a fluke. He has been active in the Democratic Party and is a leader of the local Jewish community. Mr. Winter feels that the briefings themselves are both a reflection of the Carter Administration's policy of reaching beyond Washington, as well as an effort to gain support for the treaty.

The briefing opened with Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's advisor on National Security, who spoke for 30-40 minutes on the advantages of the treaty. Mr. Brzezinski feels that the U.S. is well qualified and likely to provide the leadership that we need. He hopes that we will therefore disregard the evidence of his flawed character and elect him anyway.

A major point in favor of ratification is that it will help the U.S. meet several objectives of their foreign policy. Failure would probably lead to doubts of the U.S.'s ability to protect not only its own interests, but also those of its allies.

The treaty would also help the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. in laying the groundwork for a relationship that would work through cooperation in areas of mutual interest without creating blinders to the very real competition between the two countries. Mr. Brzezinski made it clear that the treaty was not really based on trust nor did it propose that world peace was nearly at hand. SALT II is the device of two great military powers that at

Two in particular are now considered classics: "It's not fair," is the title of a subject with which Miss Omwake is still very concerned, and considers handicaps in their own right. The second study examined, and demonstrated, the significance of early education for foster children in difficulty.

In 1963, Eveline Omwake came to Connecticut College and in the course of her career here built a Hall Program for Children with Special Needs also can be an issue worth investigating. Danny's death was one of the many years of his life at the time of the study. He was 12 years old. Miss Omwake did not confine her efforts to academic achievement. She was very involved in the work of quite an impressive number of agencies, organizations, and unions related to early childhood education.

In 1968, she was appointed to the Surgeon General's twelve-member Task Force on Early Childhood Education, headed by then-President Nixon. CHRISTMAS CONCERT
SATURDAY
The Annual Christmas Concert of the Connecticut College Chorus, Connecticut College Orchestra and the Harkness Chapel Choir will be presented on Sunday, December 9, at 7 p.m. in Harkness Chapel.
Christmas Oratorio Part V by Bach; Concerto Grossi, Op. 6 No. 11 by Vivaldi; Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis by Shepherd; For Unto Us a Child is Born by Handel; and shorter pieces by Ralph Vaughan Williams and Gustav Holst will be performed.
Soloists will be Holly Burnett, Allison Butiers, Susan Pave, Jean Rodie, Philip Craft, Roger Grenier, Letia Davis, Allison Cromwell, and Diane Felix.
Paul Althouse, associate professor of music, will conduct the orchestra.
The concert is free and open to the public.

LEADING DISSIDENT TO SPEAK
The Women's Studies Lecture Series will continue at Connecticut College tomorrow with "Leading Dissident: Lydia Chukovskaya." by Helen Rusan, associate professor of Russian at the college, on Thursday December 6 at 11:30 a.m. in 400 Bill Hall.
Lydia Chukovskaya, an outspoken dissident for two decades, lives and works in Moscow. A critic and author, she has written two novels, The Deserted House, which Mrs. Reeve will discuss in her lecture, and Going Under.
Mrs. Reeve, chairman of the Russian Department at Connecticut College, received her B.A. from Northwestern University and her Ph.D. from Columbia University.
The lecture is free and open to the public.

J.B. CASE LOG VOL. 3
In the past two Judiciary Board case logs we have stated, "JB reserves the right to withhold any case from publication which may be detrimental to the parties involved as a result of publicity." Such a policy does not give an accurate picture of the type of cases the Judiciary Board hears. Therefore, the log and all future case logs will contain information pertaining to all cases from concealment to expulsion. In cases where too much description may give away identities, we will withhold such facts, and instead give a vague description. See your Judiciary Board Packet for definitions of recommendations.

Case No. 15
a) Breach of the Social Honor Code in the form of destruction of school property.
b) Not Guilty 9-0

c) As there was no evidence to prove the student guilty of a social infraction, no recommendation was given.
Case No. 18
a) Breach of the Social Honor Code on four counts.
b) Guilty 7-0, guilty 7-0, guilty 6-1

c) Due to the extent of each of the infractions the Judiciary Board believed a recommendation above Censure was unnecessary.

Case No. 19
a) Breach of the Social Honor Code in the form of theft.
b) Not guilty 8-0

c) As there was no evidence to prove the student guilty of a social infraction, no recommendation was given.
In addition to hearing our normal case load, the Judiciary Board has sent out twenty two letters of warning to students who have been on campus. Such letters request students to obey Residence rules and remove their pets from the College. Failure to do so after the first warning can result in additional warnings. If the pet is not removed. Any students with questions concerning the JB log or any other Judiciary Board matter should feel free to direct their questions to members of the Board.

Windmill continued... provides an alternative to fossil fuels and nuclear generation of electricity.

4. To present a new, innovative, technical solution to the problem of wind energy for a radio station and college. The system will generate river energy by backhauling wind-generated electricity into the college's power grid.

5. To provide the opportunity to remove institutional barriers and develop wind energy policy in support of widespread application. This project has been the focus of some research on the history of wind power plants, particularly in the area of government.

Lyons and Kling will also be writing a manual on all the research they have performed which includes a complete description of the entire project. This manual will be extremely useful in coordinating resources and starting similar endeavors in other areas.

The pair of energy enthusiasts are setting their sights on April 1, 1981 for a dedication goal. There is even a chance that John Aristotle and Bonn Kid will be able to speak at the dedication ceremony. Before that day rolls around, however, it is going to be done. Lyons and Mr. Kling are extremley confident that their project will succeed, and judging from their determination, it seems very likely that it will.

energy and inflation would be affected by the sheer force of that confidence. It might be argued that a salient contributor to inflation is the pessimism with which a growing majority of Americans view the future. It is unlikely that this could be sustained while people severely discount the government's ability to come to grips with any of the difficult problems which it is expected to solve.

The most traditional perception of Carter's leadership -- by people in power, as well as the political, ineffectual, uncertain, and directionless, is itself a failure to control the public. In this context, as a forceful leader, a skilled politician who knows how the other game is played, the most obvious job to do is to get it done.

At a time when the country's major problem is inflation, it may be that the illusion of consensus and stability that is shared in the head of the government is more important than any underlying reality. If that is so, then the case for Kennedy is a strong one. If the perceptions are accurate, however, Carter's case is of necessity upon itself.

Carter's case depends upon good intentions and a well-tempered vision. He has done as well as anyone could have done, given the circumstances. He has been in almost total disarray, a collector of intellectual enthusiasms, unable and afraid to engage in sustained deliberation of the hard choices. To those problems, both personal and philosophical, he has done little.

The failure of his leadership is not primarily attributable to a lack of professional capacity. Carter, however, represents the interests of congressional incumbents to so characterize it. The problem comes from the undermining of the prices of Democratic tickets in 1978. In this case, Congress by reforms in election laws and congressional procedures. Those reforms, in turn, were prompted by abuses of power by former presidents.

While Carter has been the first elected president since Eisenhower who has been driven by ambition to clinch the deal in the office, a Democratic Congress has taken every opportunity to peck apart his reasonable proposals for energy legislation. We are left with a story of more stringent measures to make up for lost time and increased dependence on foreign oil. It is little wonder that we seek "leadership." It is the designation and reelection who will serve as a signal to Congress that the American people, in particular, appreciate the difficulty of maintaining energy policy. One must consider, Carter's approach to those problems to be sensible, and expect Congress to responsibly cooperate with him, even to accept some of the hard work in legislating an energy policy.

Unfortunately for Carter, there is not much chance, despite the general validity of his case, that it will all be easy for voters Democratic politicians. Carter cannot tell Americans that we can maintain the style we were before the war, 50 years ago, because we are convinced that we cannot. His appeal is what styles it will, seem apologetic: "I've not been as bad as others, after all, might be able to solve your problems if others could." The voters might have bought that when the other party controlled Congress, in a year like 1948, but not now.

To Democratic politicians, Carter's case is irrelevant. Those who abandon him, do so not because of any inability to accept the impact of his energy proposals, nor because they feel that stronger leadership comes from with individuals. They flee from him because they feel their own tutelae in the fire.
LETTERS

To the Editors:

On November 30 I had the privilege of viewing one of the best concerts I have ever seen. It appeared to be all of you guys enjoying the show because I have never seen people dancing in the aisles of Palmer Auditorium before. Unfortunately, only about 400 other students elected to partake in what might very well be the last concert on this campus. It is also worth noting that a majority of students would prefer to spend $5 on a new CD than $10 on tickets or watch the fights, of which highlights can be viewed on Wide World of Sports. I would like to see a concert sponsored by Social Board.

Many students told me that they did not go to the concert because they would not pay $5 to see a band that they have never heard of or to see B. Willie Smith again when they can attend a party for free. It's sad that these people have no faith in Social Board's judicious band choices. In retrospect, looking at all the concerts so far this year (Vassar Clements, Orrin Starr and Gary Mahelick, and the one we just saw), I think the only thing I appreciated was that almost all those who attended the shows had a good time. The main complaint about the concerts in the Maryland area are well known, such as the fact that B. Willie Smith is known here. If B. Willie Smith played at a smaller venue like the East Studio, I'm sure that they too would have drawn poorly, even though we know that they are a quality act.

The point I'm trying to make here is just because you've never heard of someone before doesn't mean they aren't any good. A few years ago no one ever heard of Billy Joel, but look what happened. If I result Social Board lost money and the concert did not sell out. Could they afford him now? Would the show sell out? Or perhaps the poor attendance is what made them think that they don't want to see another concert at the Palmer Auditorium. It may be time to realize that there is a certain amount of people that will go to any and all concerts in Palmer Auditorium. I think that the Palmer Auditorium will never be able to afford something like a Bruce Springsteen or Marshall Tucker Band. I realize that not everyone likes rock and roll or blues for that matter, but I'm sure that there are more than 400 students who do. It's simply not worth $5 for someone to throw a concert for 400 people. The concerts that are right now are booked, but the new booking risk will be available for a concert. Hopefully, the risk will be able to seat 2000 to 2500 more than Palmer. This means that we is sold out, a concert could theoretically spend about $500 more for concert it would be made by taking money from the sell out concert at Conn. is absurd since it hasn't been done (or come close) for over 5 years. If a concert in the risk does become a reality I know I can expect to see a really great show and Social Board taking another financing.

Sincerely,
Lauren Banilower

PANDORA'S BOX

To the Editors:

Under the heading 'A step in the right direction? ' an article from Martin Alpern '82, which praised the New Jersey school which refused a diploma to "a senior who is a leader of the Ku Klux Klan," I wish to differ with Mr. Alpern and suggest that his endorsement of this injustice is two steps in the wrong direction! A student's graduation from high school, or from any institution, should depend only on the fulfilling of the requirements for graduation and nothing else. Imposing either

POOR MR. REVAZ

To the Editors:

On April 12, 1980 the new hockey rink opened in New Jersey. In just such a Pandora's box is, and this regrettable event in New Jersey is just such a Pandora's box which should be closed as soon as possible. To fail to recognize this is to be one of those who would "applaud" this "courageous stance." And sooner or later we could expect something particularly fanaticism and injustice is more fanaticism and injustice. Sincerely,

Twice is Equal to One Cut was a welcome relief. Some comment on the fact that the piece was humorous is necessary! Lastly, Kahn needs to think about his interpretations of some of the dances. He states that the Zero Sum Game was "somewhat repetitive," without realizing that that was one of the major points of the piece. In the Riddle is Round both Jeff Silverman and Aaron Joyner were not contending for Robyn Silverman, she only went to Aaron Joyner. Such crass reviewing should not be printed in any newspaper. I personally feel Kahn owes the College Voice. Alice Wilding-White

To Whom It May Concern:

I wrote this letter particularly because I was not one of the people involved in the dance concert. I was not offended by Andy Kahn's review as a senior dance major, but as a reader of the College Voice.

To The College Voice. People's OP-ED article I found disappointing. The article was written with sarcasm, attempting a humour that has all too well been trampled into the ground. It mentions that the meal descriptions are "thin, knife-like flash of light when compared to the rest of the food system," and that the meal descriptions are something that should be "more important. The worst an open door to any and all extraneous, criteria for graduation would be the right to have a meal description. If it today is 'right' to deny this student the diploma because of his involvement in the Ku Klux Klan, then tomorrow it is just as 'right' for Connecticut College to deny the diploma, for example, to someone convicted of using or selling illegal drugs, or a professionally educated and activist homosexual (and already one can hear those who would 'applaud' this "courageous stance")."

Extravagant, criteria for graduation is all of this, a confusion and an worst an open door to any and prejudice and discrimination. Maybe staple foods would be a valid idea. But hamburgers and holdigs are no longer a cheap alternative.

The dining hall does keep close account of how much is eaten; I'm sure they want to keep the leftovers down to a minimum also.

What's more, Mr. Revaz, the foods you suggested as preferable to you are expensive, and you want sixteen hundred people to be served individually? Let's be serious.

LITERARY CONFLICT
To the Editor:

In a recent issue the College Voice included several poems of which had already been submitted to the Connecticut College Literary Journal for possible publication. One of these, in fact, had been accepted by us before your issue appeared. The editors of the Journal feel that this kind of overlap is detrimental to both publications. We request that anyone wishing to have material under consideration for the Journal check with us (or have the College Voice check) before printing the work in the College Voice.

The C.C. Literary Journal is exclusively for creative writing: poems, plays, fictional prose. Since the College Voice's primary emphasis is not on these kinds of writing, it seems fair that duplicated submissions should be reviewed by the Journal first, and, if not accepted, then passed on to the Voice.

To the Editors:

As I should have known, my final semester's work isn't going well at all and my only alternative to poor study habits was to escape to Cape Cod for the weekend and to focus my mind in my own out-of-work. I had spent the previous weekend on the Bay State's Cape, enjoying both the unseasonably warm weather and our 17 pound stuffed bird. But as I walked on the beach this afternoon, I knew there was no calling summer back. Indeed it was a cold and desolate sun which vanished on the horizon, and it made me reflective, as a powerful sunset often does.

I've had a lot of thought to talk my brother and I have had over nuclear power and weaponry. This is uncomforting news as you descend into the pit of finals. This above all would do much to save money. Furthermore, I feel lucky enough that we have something to eat. It's too easy to complain. As I've stated before the food isn't great, but I look forward to better food with the advent of a meal plan. By the way, Mr. Revaz, I hope you participated in Oxfam, as I did.

HARKNESS DEFACED

Dear Editor,

I would like to comment on the recent destructive events which have occurred in Harkness Dormitory. As a resident of Harkness I find the atmosphere warm, friendly, and extremely comfortable for the most part. One complaint we made to our Residence chairman regarded the unshightly peeling paint in the dormitory entrance way. Physical plant had just finished stripping the old paint and priming the walls.

Last weekend some Conn College women armed themselves with brightly colored magic markers and proceeded to deface nearly every wall of first and second floors. The language used is not only offensive, but the imagery is nauseating. Why some students at this school have nothing better to do with their time on weekends is beyond me. It is sad that these women are so pitifully bored, and sadder still that they feel the compulsion to let everyone who enters and leaves Harkness experience the disgust and filth they walk in.

Signed,
Janis Abrams

At 11:02 on August 9th, 1945, the U.S. dropped an atomic bomb on Nagasaki City, Japan. Within the span of a minute, 70,000 people were killed by the blast; over 100,000 would ultimately die as a result of the bomb, not to mention the thousands of Hibakusha (survivors of the bomb) who lived to suffer from the effects of radiation. Nuclear warheads in use today dwarf those dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The Trident generation submarine will carry 14 precision-maneuvering missiles with the range of 4,000 nautical miles. Each MIRV missile will have the potential to destroy 14 individual warheads, each with a yield of 75 to 100 kilotons, five times that which ripped into Nagasaki, within 300 feet of their separate targets. One Trident submarine will be able to destroy 48 cities or military emplacements on over half of the world's surface. Each Trident submarine commander will have at his fingertips an explosive force equal to 2,000 Hiroshimas.

The first Trident submarine will be launched across the river from Connecticut College sometime next year. Studies have called the submarine the ultimate first-strike weapon; the true lethality. It has the total mobility and power of discretion to render it the most effective, lethal weapon to date. While the Poseidon submarine undergoes planned obsolescence, a Trident will be manufactured every 18 months and by 1998, 30 will be in operation. Simple multiplication will show the potential strike power of 30 Trident submarines.

The USSR's Delta submarine with a missile range of 4,200 nautical miles, has been said to be the counterpart of Trident. Although the Russians lag in multiple warhead missile Hibakueka continued... technology and overall accuracy in strike power, their potential is still formidable. The Soviet Union literally has every city and town in the U.S. with a population of over 25,000 people within its reach. Strike New London would be the third city hit in the event of a Russian nuclear attack. The plant is virtually sitting on a powder keg. I did not believe this until I read it myself. Information of this information understandably, has been suppressed by the military complex and your elected officials in Washington.

Local power is another side of the same coin; the purportedly safe, clean, economical, futuristic, positive energy source is not safe or economic or futuristic. Insurance companies, which should be a valid gauge of dependability, will not insure them. Plants are insured by the Price-Anderson Act which means that power companies have only a limited liability in the event of an accident.

This means that you and I will pay for any accidents and the people in Harrisburg are paying for Three Mile Island already in increased rates, as are the people of Pennsylvania.

The cost of a toll-down will be billions of dollars. Are you prepared to pay for something like that? It may cost twice as many deaths and the ruination of an area of land as big as a state or more. It's bad news. It's not even cheap.

It's bad news. It's not even cheap. The Soviet Union is formidable. The Soviet Union is 400 million and I have no reason to believe even that is an accurate figure. Want until genetic defects turn up in the area and the law of averages be counted, and go for all the people of The World. Our purpose is this: to answer the question: Who do you think is involved in many kinds of political activities, such as lobbying and writing, and the last seven students and Connie Sokalsky on matters concerning wages, and benefits, equipment and supplies, taxes and permits, insurance, rent, retirement of indebtedness and miscellaneous. A certain amount of the revenue is reserved for operating cash, summer pro-rated salaries, and cash flow purposes. The bar was created under a break-even proposition. Prices are kept as low as possible. Consequently, the bar does not reap tremendous profits. After all the expenditures have been paid, any remaining profits are supposed to be turned over to Crozer Williams, for student use.

Mr. Regolo is the Cro Bar's treasurer. He is entirely responsible for the operation of the pub. Mr. Regolo is a paid employee of Connecticut College, which sponsors the liquor license. Mr. Regolo does not receive any commission on the amount of beer sold. He is responsible for the bar's functioning and he reports directly to Mr. Leroy Knight, the college treasurer.

What is YAF? Young Americans for Freedom is a national concern for college campuses, with chapters in all fifty states as well as Puerto Rico and has more than 20,000 members. YAF's advisory board includes many politicians and judges at all levels of government.
Here they are not militant, though there will some time be need for militancy in their lives. Here their meetings are publicly attended, though "Comprehensive Cro" on February 14 and May 15 of 1978. The Cro Committee gave away $3,380.85 profit. The Committee assumed that this cost would be covered by the profits from the previous years ($1049.69) and was temporarily absorbed. The Director of Crozier Williams' Operating Budget.

The Director spoke to both Margaret Watson and Dean Johnson to see if they could have the area behind the bar turned into a lounge by means of bar profits. The person who would have ultimately completed the transaction was Mr. Knight. He never did. A small portion of the 1977 bar profits should have been used for this purpose. The Operating Budget of Crozier Williams would never reimbursed. Mr. Knight stated that he did not recall why this happened but it was not possible to figure it out now.

In the season of September 1976 to June 1978 the bar saw its first big loss. The deficit was $1005.32. Mr. Knight counteracted this deficit with the 1977 profits ($1049.69) which were previously used by the Committee because they were never turned over.

The profits from September 1976 to June 1978 were the biggest Cro Bar has ever seen. A total of $3306.28 was made. Approximately $780.00 was spent to replace damaged furniture. The Committee now has $3,525.00 available this year. It is more than has ever been available to the Committee, however Crozier Williams needs many repairs for which money is not entirely adequate.

The Committee is discussing such plans as rearranging the paddle tennis courts, purchasing new bleachers for the gym, having the architect draw professional plans for bar expansion (and setting aside sufficient funds for that purpose) and funding among other things, drapes and furniture for Cro Main Lounge, badly needed folding chairs, and a mural painting contest. If you have any suggestions as to how the Committee might best spend this money you might drop chairman Bates Children, 30, a note. His box number is 225.

The Cro Committee has recently met with Mrs. Marjorie Geiger head of Residence, to discuss plans for the first half of the year. She intends to renovate the snack shop by expanding the dining room, dividing it into a faculty and student union areas. These are long range plans, for the fiscal budget will not permit immediate action.

Mrs. Geiger has expressed tremendous interest in having students work to win the profits to work with the students to make Cro a more comfortable student union. Her efforts, the energy and guidance of Connie Sokalsky, and the optimistic drive of the Cro Committee, we shall see continuous improvements over the next year as well as students too.

If you are in favor of bar expansion and other major projects in Cro attend the Roundtable Forum Discussion and speak up. Let us know if you are interested and perhaps we'll see some action. Come Friday, December 18, at 8:00 p.m.

A HARRIS ALTERNATIVE

By ANN C. ALLAN

Let's imagine it's Friday at 5:30 p.m. How many times have you been part of the following disgruntled scenario? A: Look at this line! I can't deal with it. B: What on earth is that smell? A: Oh, please, just tell me it's fish. C: Now don't complain, it could be worse. Plenty of people in India... A: Oh, stuff it! If they want it that badly we can send it to them. I don't pay eight thousand dollars a year.

If you are among the legion who flee from Harris as from some dreaded and highly contagious disease, yet have a massive sigh of boredom when scanning the menus of those time-worn favorites, Mr. G's and Ocean's, take heart. The culinary discovery of the semester is about to unfold before your eyes. Henry and Marion's, in Ledyard, is absolutely positively incomparable both in quality and price. The variety of the menu boggles the mind, the prices are very reasonable, and the food is out-of-this-world delicious. And for the slightest munchies, everything that you can eat in the restaurant is packed for take-out.

The restaurant features every kind of delicatessen spontaneously imaginable, including seven different varieties of New York cheesecake. This writer's favorite is the chocolate chip, but the Almond Black Bottom varieties are mouth-wateringly tempting. They also serve fresh sea-food, steaks and breakfast omelettes. The restaurant is spacious, well-lit, the waitresses friendly and efficient and the food is GREAT.

DANCE DEPARTMENT

FACULTY TO PERFORM

The Connecticut College dance department faculty will present a concert of modern and jazz dance Thursday and Friday (Dec. 8 & 7) at 8 p.m. in Palmer Auditorium.

Six pieces, ranging from solos to group works, will be performed by the instructors and their students. Mark Taylor, a guest artist from New York City, will perform "Parade for a Solo Dancer," choreographed by Rosalind Newman. Taylor has also choreographed a group work for nine Connecticut College students. A graduate of Swarthmore College, Taylor has appeared with the companies of Ruth Barnes and Hannah Kahn and, for the last three years has been a member of Rosalind Newman and Dancers, a New York City dance company.

Carolyn Coles, assistant professor of dance, will perform an original piece entitled, "Gamelon's Anonymous." A graduate of Miami University, Coles received a M.S. degree from Smith College. She has taught dance at the University of Maryland and at Swarthmore College.

Robin Baker, a visiting instructor in dance and a graduate of Connecticut College, will perform a piece entitled, "Child's Play." Accompanied by a film, the piece was choreographed for Baker by Carolyn Brown, former principal dancer with the Merce Cunningham Dance Company.

Other pieces in the concert include a group piece choreographed by Rick Rose and a solo choreographed by Kathy Borstek-Jensen. Rose and Gruber are both Masters of Fine Arts Candidates at the college.

Also included in the concert will be a piece entitled, "Spirit's Delight," composed and choreographed by students in Wall Matthews' "Music for Dance" class. The piece will feature dance and music improvisation.

Admission to the concert is $2.00 for the general public, $1.00 for students.

THE STRONGER

IS A SUCCESS

By Ann C. Allan

The Stronger, a one-act play by August Strindberg, was presented to an enthusiastic audience in the Smith College auditorium on Tuesday afternoon. A humorous and well-written play, the Stronger is a tale of two women, Mrs. X and Miss Y, on a set that is the living room of the X's.

Mrs. X was compelling, understated and completely convincing. Stage cold, the audience was led on a painful understanding of the whole situation. Letty Selkovits' Miss Y, on the other hand, had an aloof, austere quality about her that made the audience wonder who she was. After all, she was the stronger for the transformation of her personality.

The one-act play was so brief that it had to be repeated. It was not a tautly, tightly directed piece, and compellingly enacted that the spectators' attention was never allowed to wander. Cathy Sprengle was unforgettable and efficient as the audience was.

The costumes, done by Patricia Howell, were beautiful evocations of a graceful era long past. Altogether, a very fine performance. It is my hope that more such delightful plays can be performed for the community in the future.

NIGHTHAWKS AND SMITH ROCK PALMER

By Stephen Busher

On Friday evening Connecticut College experienced the blues. The show featured the B. Willie Smith Band. The group's act was their typically flashy swing and blues show. I always feel that their stage presence is lacking. Their unified spins often seem uninspired. If they had sharpened the choreography, they might appear more comfortable themselves; thus the audience would enjoy them more. Nevertheless, their music was both lively and very good.

The Nighthawks Band followed. The group of four tattooed men played hard driving, traditional and original blues. The most outstanding parts of their show were the long, hot, fingered, tongued-in-the-tongue the mournful wailing on the "Harp." The small crowd thoroughly enjoyed the show, bouping and screaming to each beat. The audience though unsuccessful at the box office, was successful in showing that Palmer Auditorium could indeed come alive in the sound of the blues.

The Nighthawks' Jim Thackery whals his way through a riff.
SPORTS

B-BALL TEAM REACHES TOURNAMENT FINAL
TOPS MIT BY 3

After three games, the Connecticut College basketball team has played a season's worth of basketball. The Camels have progressed from a humbling 19-point defeat to the rarest of sports, a standing ovation after a double overtime victory.

Opening night against Curry was played exactly like an opening night game should be: Turnovers, missed opportunities, cold shooting and an excess of fouls marked the first half for both teams. The second half saw a different Connecticut College basketball team. The Camels were able to lead most of the first half. A patented outside shot by Mal and a driving lay-up by T-Bone (Tom Barry) put the Camels ahead 41-40.

During the seven minutes, Curry was held to one point. The obvious lack of height hurt the defense of Drew. Drew was down 14 points at the end of the first half. Against Drew, the Camels scored their next point. The game was tied up at the 7:30 mark, 37-37, following a Mike Weiss foul shot.

The game was a total team effort. The Camels outscored the home-towners 43-42 lead. MIT managed to put the lead to 44-44, and with two seconds left had the ball on an inbounds pass. The ball was passed to their second leading scorer, Keith Baker (8 points), who missed the corner jumper. T-Bone garnered the rebound and drove the length of the court, sinking a lay-up which gave the Camels a 47-44 victory. It was an emotional and well-deserved victory. The team maintained their poise down the stretch. The result was a heartbreaking 84-77 loss to the rarest of sports, a standing ovation after a double overtime victory over Wesleyan on December 1st.

A considerably large crowd was on hand to witness the AquaCamels take ten places in the 83-87 victory. Ann Sayre and Isa Rubin were triple first place winners. The former, co-captain of the team, set a new pool record for the 50-yard freestyle with a remarkable time of 25.8 seconds. She also took first place in the 100-yard freestyle and the 100-yard individual medley. Isa Rubin placed first in the 100-yard freestyle, the 50-yard backstroke, and the 100-yard butterfly.

The 200-yard medley relay, team composed of Jenny Burns, Liz Gargant, Linee Speers, and Jenny Davis outswam Wesleyan's team to take first place.

Co-captain Jenny Burns also won the 100-yard butterfly, and Linee Speers won the 50-yard butterfly, setting a pool record with the time of 31.4 seconds. Conn's tenth first place went to Linee Speers, Isa Rubin, Jenny Davis, and Ann Sayre, who combined to conquer the 200-yard freestyle relay. In the diving exhibitions, there were three Conn divers competing against a lone diver from Wesleyan. Wes took first, however, in both the required and the optional events. Freshman Royse Shanley from Conn took second in both events, and the Squid Jula Peterson, took third. Kathie Bannister also competed in the diving.

Two seconds places and three third places were also earned by the AquaCamels.

On November 17th, Conn lost to Clark University in their first home meet, but by a margin less than half of last season's. This, along with the outstanding performances in the Wesleyan meet, shows the excellent improvement of the players and excellent coaching being done by Louise Heldman and Commander Hotchkiss. The last home meet will be another toughie against Amherst on December 5th.

DOUG ROBERTS:
BRINGING ENTHUSIASM & IDEAS

By Jill Eiler

Hockey and ice skating rinks are nothing new to Doug Roberts, director of the new rink and coach of the men's hockey program. Roberts is a New Engander, Whaler, and hockey player. He was stick boy for the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League. Years later he played on the very same team.

Hockey has not always been Roberts's forte. He attended Michigan State on a football scholarship but played both Varsity football and hockey. Graduating with a degree in education, Roberts had signed a teaching contract when the Red Wings called him up. Later he played for a few years with the New England Whalers, who signed him at the same time as his brother, Gordie. Gordie, still plays for the N.H.L.'s Hartford Whalers.

After a busy, tiring, and cut-throat youth, Roberts decided to settle down in one place with his wife and three children. Jobs in coaching are hard to come by, but through his brother Roberts learned that Conn was building a rink. The opportunity to plan a hockey program from the ground up was too attractive a challenge to turn down.

SWIM TEAM UPSETS WESLEYAN

Excellent swimming and diving skills have been displayed by the College's intercollegiate team this season. The current record of 4 wins and 1 loss includes an unexpected victory over Wesleyan on Saturday, December 1.

A greater irony to the current crisis in Iran than the fact that the United States is accusing someone of breaking a bunch of rules. We have been conspicuously quiet when the U.S. government has broken those same rules. Now when someone else's country plays dirty, the United States is crying "Touche!" If the U.S. government and the United Nations can't or won't review recent history they might then be seeing sound so self-righteous in their attacks on Iran.

It is the ultimate hypocrisy that the seizure of the U.S. embassy in Tehran should be viewed with more contempt than the deadly meddling of the U.S. in other countries' domestic affairs. The Ayatollah Khomeini has violated the sanctity of a foreign embassy, but does that act compare with the violations of the sanctity of entire countries that U.S. policy has perpetrated with no regard to international law and principle that the Iranians have committed in a drop in the phosphorus compared to Uncle Sam's rat sheet.

Ever since the U.S. attained super-power status in the wake of the World Wars, America has been led by Teddy Roosevelt's "big stick" with all the treacle from the Quakers. Be it a bearded, charismatic rebel from the mountains of Cuba or a newly independent China, the U.S. has been quick to act, or in Castro's case, quick to say, to subvert the government of a foreign country. Back "progressive" usually means subvert the government of a foreign country. Back "progressive" usually means religious zealotry of the Ayatollah foreign country. Back "progressive" usually means.

"president" Marcos, and the late "president" Allenda and Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini have violated international law, been quick to act, or in Castro's case, quick to say, to subvert the government of a foreign country. Back "progressive" usually means religious zealotry of the Ayatollah foreign country. Back "progressive" usually means.

The Iranians have a justifiable hatred for the U.S. It was the U.S. that supported the Shah when no one else would. As the shah's secret police, SAVAK, terrorized and murdered thousands. American presidents praised the shah as a great progressive leader. As shocking as it is the justice of the Islamic tribunal, it may never catch up with the shah's infamous reign of death.

There is something to be learned from the current crisis. Americans must realize that they are feared and hated by much of the Third World. Situations like the one in Iran are likely to continue unless the U.S. ceases its出入境 change to that image. A greater willingness on the part of the U.S. government to allow each nation its own self-determination would be an important first step.

Most of the Hockey games are scheduled for weekend nights. The rink itself, being open to the public, will draw more traffic to Route 32, thus making it even more dangerous to run across. Had the original planning for the rink included construction for this concern, then construction would have been delayed until 13 funds had been raised to cover the cost of a skyskate, or 2) the city and state had approved the application for the installation of a traffic light and a crosswalk.

By Marsha Williams
Mixed emotions about the construction of the skating rink still exist despite the fact that the new building is scheduled to be open in just a few weeks. Some students fiercely await its opening; some adhere to vows made never to step inside; others consider whether opposed to its construction or not, anticipate entering the building with chills. As an opening day for the rink draws near, I find myself drawn to the opening because of another worry: the safety of the students who plan to frequent the building.

Many members of the college community are probably aware of the fact that no physical changes have taken place to indicate an attempt to make crossing Route 32 less hazardous for pedestrians, i.e. a skyskate or a traffic light, specifically designated for rink traffic. Few students, however, have time and the precaution to walk to the legal crossing, the DeBar French, and cross on the red light, then walk back down to the rink. It is much more efficient to cross across half of the highway, leap the divider, and run across the other half - more convenient and more dangerous.

On November 16, pre-registration was held in the gym. Many have described the experience as "frustrating," and "physically uncomfortable." The following is a list of suggestions for making the registration process more efficient.

1. Set up the registration check-out table to be more visible from the pre-registration line. Department tables could then be placed further apart from one another to provide more space for orderly lines.

2. There should be more people working at the registrar table to speed up the check-out procedures.

3. In the departments that offer numerous sectioned and/or enrollment limited courses, there should be more professors sitting at the tables participating in the pre-registration process.

4. Each department table should be more organized. Each professor should have a checklist of courses they have signed up for. These students would then know that they would have to decide to alter their course scheduling or courses and would have to check back at 2:30.

3. Prior to pre-registration, lists should be made of students who have been possibly closed out of courses they have signed up for. These students would then know that they would have to decide to alter their course scheduling or courses and would have to check back at 2:30.

THE SEVEN YEAR FUND DRIVE -

By ALEXANDER REID BRASH

Oakes Ames is shopping this year, and praying to find a Santa Claus. As president of the college his chief function is to raise the needed funds to insure the school's survival, and continued growth. How well is he doing?

To some, the new unnamed library represents the college: slick and fancy on the outside, yet here some progress has been paid off the debts incurred for the new library; in fact if you have $3 million to spare the college will name it after you. The Palmer (old) Library, "the queen of our academic buildings" as described in a glossy fund raising binge. Purportedly to fill out these hollowed halls.

To review the college's shopping list: the first priority is to increase the school's overall endowment, this includes $2 million for student financial aid, $3 million for faculty salaries, and another $1.5 million to maintain the new library and hire more young teachers. Next, of course, is the money still needed to remodel, to "modernize" the electrical system in the building, and the hearty blueberry blintzes tossed salad and baked potato with sour cream. And that's one of the most expensive things on the menu! The sandwiches are superb, and the hearty blueberry blintzes melt in your mouth so as to make crepes pale in comparison.

Henry and Marion have been in the restaurant business since 1961. They have operated restaurants in Gorton, Norwich and now in Ledyard. The current restaurant will be four years old in February. According to Marion, "There is a certain warmth and friendliness here because it is a Mr. and Mrs. operation. We take an interest in every one of our customers. Henry just doesn't like to refuse people. The main thing is the food. Everything is fresh. Henry takes a great deal of pride in preparing and serving the food. We really do try our best to please."

"Grateful customers have called from as far as Washington, D.C. Clearly, everyone is a regular at Henry and Marion's. Even in these tough times it's the same old story. People line up in front of the restaurant business since 1961. The current restaurant will be four years old in February. Garlic customers have called from as far as Washington, D.C. Clearly, everyone is a regular at Henry and Marion's. Even in these tough times it's the same old story. People line up in front of the college. Although working light sockets are nothing to laugh at, it would be used for parties, dances, and concerts was the placing bone tossed to the students in that "risky forum" so long ago. Now the administration, according to social board, has already balked at this $300,000 extra. Finally, $100,000 to build a new field north of the Complex, and $500,000 to revamp the Alumni Center, add a theatre workshop to Palmer, and renovate Thames Hall. This in two years (or 30 percent) of the seven year drive, President Ames has raised only 10.5 percent of the needed $7 million. However, he has effectively changed the features of the campus by adding a new library and a hockey rink. President Ames then outwardly waited for the first faltering step, then where will we go? The crunch will appear in the '80s when there are fewer students applying for college, and with Conn. leaning on the drive to escape Harris-induced nausea. One reminder-it's a good idea, even for upperclassmen, to bring your I.D. if you want to imbibe with your meal. Also, Henry and Marion's closes at 9:00 p.m., often a little earlier, so get there early. Happy eating - you won't be disappointed.

Address: 181S Route 12. Gales Ferry.

WILL WE MAKE IT?

For $6.50 you can get the Scallop Newfangled, which is a generous portion of huge, sweet scallops broiled in butter with cheese, a tossed salad and baked potato with sour cream. And that's one of the most expensive things on the menu! The sandwiches are superb, and the hearty blueberry blintzes melt in your mouth so as to make crepes pale in comparison.

BRUNO GANZ as Harker has a droopy-at-the-edges aloofness which contrasts comically with his final fate.

ELI KISCHI as Dracula is a marvel. His rodent-like features unite the monstrous and the human in one persona. He is both pitiable and repellent, and his performance forms the palpitating center of the movie.

Werner Herzog has made a horror movie that manages to be intelligent, memorable and very entertaining. Nosferatu is one of the best films of the year.
POEMS BY JOHN TERENZI

to someone upon departure

all things said and done most roads crossed and travelled on and yet — people still stop and wonder
"I can't believe they're still friends" everything special take time from the beginning and hopefully never ending we've had our ups and downs the good bring laughs — the bad — courtesy to the past naming the memories seems trite considering all the parties — loves — and fights for good friends — discussion of events always sound better in a bar — drunk — late at night

I've learned a lot — I've taught a lot you teach best what you must need to learn we've added new dimensions to one another idiocyncracies and faults fade fast even in a world where things are so small parting distances seem large and tall

I've been many places — had many friends what we have is too special to let end good-byes aren't bad — only necessary if we are to meet again

Just remember — always — a thought till then live — laugh — and especially love — my friend.

Come back to me.

Here I sit:
A stranger and afraid

In a world I never knew.

Called by a name given;

Playing the games not chosen.

Then I stand:
Wishing Humpty-Dumpty had jumped;
Shocking the system into a scandal.

So other people take the fall.

And change the world before it's too late

Crawling now:
My realities were once my dreams

But this old man's hobbies
Were once his boyhood toys
Having resigned to live in a world of one.

Life Uneasy

Living,
Dying
The seasons
Do begin.

Frowning,
Crying,
My moods
Go round.

Stopping,
Starting
Neither here
Nor there.

Losing,
Winning
The circle
Never ends.

Ugly-hollow,
Empty-shallow;
Anything I am,
But the way I feel.

AN EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW

BY JONATHAN D. ROBBINS

For my article this week, I decided to talk to God. Usually, I only see God after All-Campus parties and Speakeasies, but I took a late night shuttle to Heaven. Heaven looked the same since I was last there, although there are many new condominium developments going up all over town. God's desk is in a skyscraper that goes to infinity; the elevator rides in the weeks.

I always thought that of all the offices that I've been in, God's is the nicest. There's a 'T.V. in the waiting room on which you can see everything that goes on down on the Earth. There's plenty of magazines to read and his secretary is an angel. My turn came up and I went into God's office. He was wearing a Lacoeste sweater and bright green cor-duroys and a pair of Weejuns. On his desk were stacks of papers strewn about. It was an unholly mess.

"How do you keep track of this?"
I asked.

"God knows," shrugged the Magnificent Deity. "What can I do for you, Jon?"

"Well, God, I needed material for an article and you always seem to have the inside stuff, if you know what I mean."

"I am the all-seeing, all-knowing, all-mighty," he answered.

"Yes, I know. But do you think Connecticut College will fare in the coming decade? The National Enquirer has its own psychics, but the Vatican only wants to print reliable predictions. Can you clue me in on anything?"

"You know, my son never went to college."

"I know that. How come?"

"Well," answered the Cosmic Ruler, "he did alright on his grades but he got nailed by the Board."

"Oh, I responded with utter awe.

"Well, did you know that the Ayatollah Khomeini and Idr Amin Dada are one and the same person?"

"God how can I be sure?"

The Holy Father said "Well, you've never seen them photographed together have you?"

"Gee, God, I never would have thought of that before."

"What about Conn College?"

"I know.

"What about Connecticut College?"

"I interrogated the Infinite Creator.

"I suspect you're wondering about the food. It's not going to get any better. It would take somebody with censored to get that food system going right. As it stands now, there's a severe shortage of censored as it is; I have to stump somewhere. The hockey rink is another story though. I think Conn. College will produce a superstar hockey player!"

"Did you say you were from Conn College? I thought you said Canuck College in Saskatchewan corrected the Universal Presence."

"What about the Social life? It's been pretty genteel this year, if you know what I mean."

"There is good news and bad news. First, some will call up the school and say that four English men named John, Paul, George and Ringo want to play a concert in Palmer for free."

"The Beatles! Here at Connecticut!"

"The bad news is that there will be a freshman dance recital in Palmer scheduled for the same date."

"Conn God, how about some good news."

"What do you want to hear? That the world will be expanded? That the pinball machines will be subsidized by SGA so that you can play for free? Get specific with me!"

The Holy One, Blessed Be He, was perturbed.

"Academically? I stuttered, "what about an academic?"

"Everyone will get perfect 4.0's this semester," promised the Glorious Shepherd. "Really?"

"As long as they stop drinking, smoking, sleeping around, throwing food in the cafeterias, gossiping, stealing, snoring, lying, cheating on exams, buying papers, washing clothes on 'T.V., staying up late and acting 'holier-than-thou' "

"Is that all?"

"If the line to get into Harkness Chapel next Sunday, there might be Jobs for All After Graduation," teased the Blessing Ruler of Heaven and Earth.

"Any last message for the students of Conn College?"

"Drink three glasses of water every day."

"Thanks, God. You are always an inspiration to us."

"I know," said the Omniscient King of the Universe.
