Research on Women's Education Lists

Top Colleges: Connecticut By-passed

Elsewhere on this page there is a news item about a Made- moselle story on women scholars. Readers will note that Conne- cton College is not mentioned as one of the top six wom- en's colleges in the production of scholars. Nor, according to an article on this subject in the January 4 issue of the New- York Herald Tribune, is it even among the top seventeen.

Our first reaction to this article is...what? It seems to us that this is but one method of ranking colleges, and per- haps not of artistic importance. College students intend to become valuable members of their community, and not necessarily scholars.

We won't deny the importance of scholars in discovering the facts that our children will someday learn; knowledge that will act as a corn to become capable and informed citizens. The more than five out of every thousand women college graduates who become scholars are thus serving a necessary function in our community.

Education is not, however, confined to the classroom. Post- college education has a place as a broadly-defined subject matter matter, and is an integral part of the learning of skills for a specific task—whether that task is paid employment or a volunteer job as a Sunday School teacher or a Girl Scout leader.

Salary and the appointment of associates will replace grades in this broader education. You may also find that one reconciles for being a job capable is an increased demand for your services.

Although you have left the college environment, you can continue to encounter other individuals as individuals who have not lost the capacity to think. Intellectual conversation takes more effort, of course, than does trivial dormitory and neigh- borhood chatter, but shows that you can think for yourself, to- privilege not solely reserved for scholars. Dinner-table argu- ments are the rule, and truth need not be confined to intercol- lege conferences.

Since there was a ranking, we're personally glad that wom- en's colleges made a good showing. It justifies the faith that pioneers in education for women had in our sex. It is not par- ticularly important that Connecticut College failed to head the list. Real beauty is in the beauty of the story of women schol- ars. Do you have an "external obligation to ask questions and find out"—SWW?

Study of College Women

And Their Schools

Appears in All-Male

Which are the scholars' colleges? MADEMOISELLE (in its January issue) is the first publi- cation of any kind to call the findings of a recently completed study as they relate to the educa- tion of women.

Research on Scholars

The complete study (due for publication in the near future) is The Younger American Scholar. His College Origins, by Robert J. Koenig, of Minnesota, and Ernest Greenbaum, both of Wesleyan University. As reported in MADEMOISELLE, the study included twenty-one college women in the production of schol- ars are Bryan Mawr, Barnard, Raddish, Vassar, MacMurray College for Women, and Mount Holyoke. Scholars are defined as women who go on to graduate school.

"All but one are small liberal arts colleges, all are privately controlled and non-denominational. All choose students not only for scholastic aptitude and what they can learn from this college, but for their broad-mindedness to each other... All are intercollegial and non-segregated.

Women's Colleges Ahead

The fifty-three women's colleges as a group averaged 5.6 graduates per thousand students, or 5.6 per thousand students—well above many of the men's colleges graduating 5.5 per thousand students. All of the women's liberal arts colleges and universities. Perhaps it is that women's colleges are more selective and more effective.

Organized Sports Offered to Girls

In Reading Period

During Reading Period, a young girl's mind turns to thoughts of a dismal nature—studies. Endless streams of words, thirty hours worth to be exact, pass before her bewildered and watering eyes. To provide a colorful diversion during this period, sports have been organized to help students concentrate on other things besides books. Badminton and volleyball are the two sports that are being offered to all Connecticut College students. Check the AA bulletin board for the time of the next practice.

Mr. Holyoke Playdate

On February 14, Mt. Holyoke, Wesleyan, and Connecticut are participating in a playdate at Mt. Holyoke. A representative from each college has proved highly successful. Remember to sign up in the gym if you are planning to make February 14 a day of athletics and fun.

Train Practises

This week has been taken up with practices in some of the winter sports in preparation for the contest between the classes which will take place after the mid-semester vacation. On Wednesday night, basketball practice was held for all classes. On Thursday night, volleyball practice was held for the seniors and juniors. The schedule for each week is planned for June 27. Nancy Clapp '51, Barbara Perdue '53, and Kent Driggers, a first classman at the Coast Guard Academy, for early July. Wendell met Jean Ann Hallows '53, has been acquainted with his Personnel Director of Connecticut College, a planned program of work and study paid off in the case of a recent graduate, Nancy Clapp, CC '51, of 562 Boulevard, West Hartford. Nancy came to Connecticut College from the Old School in Hartford.

NANCY CLAPP

Early in her college career, she came to the attention of the Personnel Director of Connecticut College, a planned program of work and study paid off in the case of a recent graduate who is interested in earning a part of her college expenses, both during term time and in her summer vacation. For three years she was awarded scholarships and was selected as one of the student guides working in the Admissions Office for four years.

During 1949 and 1950 her work record showed that she had made the fifth highest earnings in her class. Part of each summer found her on a job: first, as a waitress; second, on an assembly line; and third, a housewife. In early July Nancy Schoeffel '53, has come to the attention of the Personnel Director of Connecticut College, a planned program of work and study paid off in the case of a recent graduate who is interested in earning a part of her college expenses, both during term time and in her summer vacation. For three years she was awarded scholarships and was selected as one of the student guides working in the Admissions Office for four years.

Movies Comprise Future Psychology Club Events

Movies will be shown at the next meeting of the Psychology Club on Wednesday, February 18, at 7:00 p.m., in Hill 207. Following the movies, there will be an informal gathering for refreshments in the Psych Seminar Room.

One of the films will be Bound- ary Lines, a color film composed of animated paintings, and real-lifes and abstract symbols of its theme of the unity of mankind. The majority of the films have been with denominational youth groups in high school, although a number of Protestant and Jewish students and of those with no formal church affiliation have also been active in interdenominational groups.

Results of this poll of membership in religious organizations cannot be interpreted exactly, since many of the students who replied to this questionnaire have belonged to more than one group. Among the Jews and Protestants, a higher proportion of freshmen than upperclassmen attend religious services at this time. There is the common complaint of too many demands on time, including the valid excuse of studying. Many students, however, replied to this question as being consistent with early religious training and Jewish students and of those with no formal church affiliation are now active in religious organizations, attending informal gatherings for refreshments in religious organizations during vacations. Among the Jews and Protestants, a higher proportion of freshmen than upperclassmen attend church during vacations. This finding suggests a break with earlier religious training which is not characteristic of Roman Catholics.

The New Music String Quartet will be heard in a program of Mozart, Berg and Beethoven in Palmer Auditorium on February 17. The Group appeared here earlier in the season in a varied program in which they exhibited consummate artistry. As on that occasion they will conduct a workshop at Holmes Hall the afternoon of the Concert, at which time they will play and discuss the String Quartet Opus 3 of Alban Berg (1885-1935). This Quartet, the Quartet in D minor K. 421 of Mozart, and Beethoven's Quartet has done considerable concertizing including appearances at the Contemporary Music Festival in New York. The critics of the New York Times and New York Herald Tribune praised the fine musicianship of the Quartet in their reviews of the Festival.
