New student health plan has only one full-time doctor
by Caris Gordon
With only one full-time physician at the infirmary, the College has instituted a new student health program featuring the increased use of paramedics and part-time specialists. The program may become permanent.

This new program was instituted when a physician who had been hired by Conn to replace Dr. Ronald L. Fishman decided not to come and informed the school that on February 1. By that time, according to Dr. Hall, "it was already too late to get someone else." Fishman, whose contract terminated at the end of last semester, was not hired.

Under this new system, as explained by Dr. Mary N. Hall, director of the Student Health Service, doctor will be available through a paramedic's discretion, not a student's. "It is no longer possible to see a doctor by just saying, 'I want to see a doctor,'" said Dr. Hall. A paramedic is a nurse trained to diagnose and dispense treatments for certain illnesses and injuries. The paramedic is standing orders by Dr. Hall. Conn presently has one paramedic, Lois M. Hendrick, R.N. Another is being trained.

An appointment will be needed to see a paramedic who will be in constant communication with Dr. Hall.

Specialists from New London will be available people to protect themselves by the proper use of keys they are given and by asking the safety of others by the kind of "rubber stamp the administration's stating recommendations." The teachers can appeal the administration's decisions.

The President also announced the terminations of Judith S. Fergen, associate professor of physical education and chairperson of her department; and Ruby T. Morris, part-time "The woman was threatened with physical violence and did not scream out, according to Charles E. Shain, president of the College. Because the student was a December graduate, she left school and was unavailable for comment.

Francis P. O'Grady, Chief of College Security has refused to discuss the incident. "It will be better for the College if the matter is dropped," he said. Although the woman could not positively identify her assailant, investigation after the incident occurred indicated that the man was the same individual, said Mr. Shain. "The first thing he said upon entering the room was ask 'Are you all right?'" he continued. It is "possible but improbable" that the attacker was a Conn student. Pointing to the fact that the man knew the woman's name, Mr. Shain has suggested that "someone who comes up to the College looking for girls. Someone perhaps who moves from dormitory to dormitory."

Evidence does suggest he was looking for a particular girl. "It also seems probable that he had moved before and that he hoped in the darkness that he would not be identified," added Mr. Shain. Dr. Hall reported that although there have been only two rapes on Campus in recent years, about four or five people are assaulted on the campus and in the Arbuturn a semester. "No one should go into the Arbuturn alone day or night," she warned. Connecticut students have also been assaulted and raped in downtown New London and on the grounds of the Coast Guard Academy. In an answer to the question "What will be done to prevent this from recurring," Mr. Sain responded, "All we can do is try to persuade ourselves to protect ourselves by the proper use of keys they are given and by asking the safety of others by the kind of 'rubber stamp the administration's stating recommendations.' The teachers can appeal the administration's decisions.

The President also announced the terminations of Judith S. Fergen, associate professor of physical education and chairperson of her department; and Ruby T. Morris, part-time.
Giant steps for Connecticut. College previews and reviews of such events. Not the least of Pundit's obligations are resignations, December graduations and usiness manager Andrea Stoner transfers. Copy Editor Patricia Kyne.}

Hand as the community adjusts with new ways of life which Mr. Shain rightly says is one of his greatest concerns not in vogue - are what a liberal arts education is all about. This semester, Pundit will encourage education as a priority, and encourage budget-minded policy makers to look to more courageous solutions to their problems. In spite of what President Charles E. Shain has said publicly, the Summer Commission did not even attempt to look into such questions as whether costs may be cut by taking air conditioning out of Fanning, by closing a dinning room or two or by seriously examining superfluity at the administrative and secretarial levels.

The status of minority group members and women on campus is sure to be a subject for thoughtful discussion this semester. Conn, which has been guilty of paying and promoting its women faculty less than its men, is initiating action to remedy this situation. Pundit only hopes that Conn develops an enthusiastic spirit in this regard. Advertising that Conn is "an equal opportunity employer," as the trustees have done in their search for a new president, is no longer adequate, philosophically and often legally. The more enlightened phrase in the scholarly trade these days is "affirmative action employer," meaning that the employer is actively seeking qualified candidates who have in the past experienced discrimination. In the next several weeks, as the housing lottery is developed, criticism of an all-black dormitory hopefully will reawaken.

Pundit will also speak to the deterioration of campus life which Mr. Shain rightly says is one of his greatest worries this semester. Like the replacement of Mr. Shain, the replacement of student leaders during the elections late this month will indicate something about where we are going. Students, without adequate power channels, have shown themselves to be ineffective as their own policemen. Vandalism and indifference, even decadent, behavior has left some students disgruntled about dormitory life. Pundit will be interested especially in how much input students have in the operation of this college. The student departmental advisory boards and student-faculty committees, which on paper purport to familiarize the faculty with student wants, may in practice operate much differently. Pundit will cover and comment on the special student committee charged with investigating this system.

The first dormitory rape has opened eyes to the need to place kudos and blame at the feet of those who deserve it. Pundit believes that it is in the best position on campus to take a stand. The survey conducted by the American Council on Education and the University of California at Los Angeles College was among 60 New England colleges and universities surveyed.

The survey also shows that a slight conservative trend found in 1972 has been reversed, and that the percentages freshmen give themselves "middle-of-the-road" politically, but the tumultuous events of 1973 have not by any pronounced effect on the political labels freshmen give themselves, according to a major national survey conducted for the American Council on Education and the University of California at Los Angeles.

The most pronounced effect on political labels freshmen give themselves, according to a major national survey conducted for the American Council on Education and the University of California at Los Angeles, are the political labels freshmen give themselves, according to a major national survey conducted for the American Council on Education and the University of California at Los Angeles.

The percentage of freshmen favoring student freedom and independence continues to increase over what the study indicates, but a notable exception is that fewer freshmen are agreeing that disadvantaged students should get preferential treatment in college admissions.

Dr. Alexander Astin, director of study and a UCLA professor said the trend toward more student independence and freedom from college regulation has been developing "like clockwork" but he said there was one notable exception. When students in 1968 were asked if they agreed that disadvantaged students should be given preferential treatment in college admissions, 41.6 per cent agreed. When students in 1968 were asked if they agreed that disadvantaged students should be given preferential treatment in college admissions, 41.6 per cent agreed.

The percentage of freshmen favoring student freedom and independence continues to increase over what the study indicates, but a notable exception is that fewer freshmen are agreeing that disadvantaged students should get preferential treatment in college admissions.

To the editor:

We are presently confined in an Institution at London, Ohio, and it is very lovely here. It would be refreshing to hear from the nice people in the free world who may wish to write to us.

We will answer all letters that we receive from the outside. Please enclose photo with your letter and we will do the same. Thanking you for your trouble and time.

Jack D. Reifeld, 131-411 and Anthony (Tony) Alliance, 131-492
P.O. Box 59
London, Ohio, 43140

Pundit editorial board expands

Pundit announces eight new additions to its editorial board.

The new members are L. Cole, news editor; Susan J. Maunder, features editor; Nina G. Landau, senior editor; David J. K. Hufford, sports editor; Judy H. Boland and Elizabeth K. Hufer, fine arts co-editors; Sandy Parkman, photography editor; Jacqueline S. Cooper and Rachel D. Carley, graphics editors.

The editorial board positions Co-Editors-in-Chief, but no appointment has been made. Pundit staff. Pundit is presently the only opportunity for students in 1968 were asked if they agreed that disadvantaged students should be given preferential treatment in college admissions, 41.6 per cent agreed.

the nation's colleges to increase over what the study indicates, but a notable exception is that fewer freshmen are agreeing that disadvantaged students should get preferential treatment in college admissions. When students in 1968 were asked if they agreed that disadvantaged students should be given preferential treatment in college admissions, 41.6 per cent agreed.
Thieves rob Cummings second time

by Carin Gordon
Cummings Art Center was robbed for the second time this year. "Thousands of dollars of stereo equipment was taken and approximately $1200 worth of damage was done to the building," said Francis P. O'Grady, Chairman of the Board.

The break-in occurred sometime between 9:00 and 10:00 p.m. on Tuesday. Thieves snipped through the plate glass sliding doors of rooms 213, 215, 216 and 220, all on the northwest corner of Cummings. Mr. O'Grady stated that the estimated replacement of the four doors to be about $400 each.

Several stereo drawers, amplifiers, a tapedeck, and a stereo were stolen and then some of the loot was stashed under the fir northwest corner of Cummings. 213, 215, 216 and 220, all on the valuable property. He had had a private practice in West Haven, Connecticut. He had been Medical Director there since January 1.

by Robert Hoffman
According to students whose rugs were damaged, surrounding areas of the building were not damaged. While an investigation is being conducted, Mr. O'Grady stated that he has contacted his insurance company and that the insurance rates will not go up. If his rates are raised he plans to bring legal action against the College in a court of law. (Mr. O'Grady has a law degree from Yale University in 1953.)

Mr. O'Grady stated that he is working with campus security on the case, but so far no progress has been made. In a letter dated February 4 and sent to the faculty, Mr. O'Grady said that he supported the Report, except for the suggestion that the physical education department be reduced by two members below the 1973 level.

Dr. Fishman Fishman died at 46
Dr. Ronald L. Fishman, M.D., chairman of the Health Services of last semester, died of a heart attack sometime late Saturday afternoon. He lived in New York, New York, and attended the University of Maine in 1953.

Dr. Fishman died in New York and leaves two daughters and a son; he was divorced.

What's left--socialism an answer to economic, political woes
by Nina George
How many of us have been forced to accept a job we disliked simply to earn a living? How many of us have had any say in the policies dictated by oil companies and food conglomerates? How many of us have high profits rather than service to the people?

These are only two examples of the many facets of our life that face under the current economic and political system. Inherent in the capitalist system, as the market determines and determines and determines, is one class or one individual has the right to control another class or another individual in pursuit of a given purpose, whether of monetary profit or political power.

Socialist philosophy and economic theory is based on the premise that people should have the control over their own lives. Socialist economics can be defined as "the distribution of the goods and services produced in society to the members of society in accordance with their needs and desires as determined by the market as a whole."

Not only does each person have the right to control his own life, but he should not control anyone else's life at the expense of that person's dignity and freedom. This can be achieved when a nation of self-governing individuals (NOT individuals, but people) has recovered from its economic and political slavery. People won't have to depend on employers to be fed, clothed, and housed. People will be free to earn a living for themselves, and their major concern won't be just how to make money but how to make the best use of the country's resources in order to improve the human condition. When such a society is formed, it will be possible, says the American socialist, to bring about a "dramatic economy and government. The Radical will be the private profit ethic in contrast to the free market ethic. A socialism will voice some of these same aspirations, urging various reforms within the existing system of wage-price controls, regulatory agencies, and so forth. However, socialist parties that desire a socialist society are not only concerned with the establishment of a socialist state, but also with the economic structure of society, since they believe that capitalism is a barrier to the ideal socialist structure."
Alvin Ailey to dance here this weekend

The Alvin Ailey City Center Dance Theater, the internationally acclaimed New York dance company, will perform three different concerts in Palmer Auditorium this weekend.

Sponsored by the Dance Department, the group of twenty young contemporary dancers have been brought to campus in an effort to "turn people on to the dance," said Robin G. Berry, administrator for the department. "We have chosen the most dynamic company we could think of," continued Mr. Berry.

A grant to the College from the National Endowment for the Arts is partially supporting the Straw Dogs’ offensive, but why?

By Robert Hoffman

On Friday February 15 many people will leave Palmer Auditorium offended by Sam Peckinpah’s “Straw Dogs,” starring Dustin Hoffman, and they will not know why. The film, being totally confused these distraught individuals will most probably dismiss “Straw Dogs” as being a brutal, stale and uninteresting movie which should have never been brought to the screen.

“Straw Dogs” concerns itself with an American school teacher (Dustin Hoffman) who leaves the big and bustling American city for peace and solitude in the Welsh countryside.

In brief, Wales is no more at ease than New York City. Hoffman’s wife enferges the handyman into becoming her rapist, and what she thought would be trite turns into a nightmare, as she is raised by more than one man. With his house besieged by the raptist and their henchmen, Hoffman, the up to now pacifist and nethis, metamorphoses into the male animal, protecting his domain.

It is this metamorphosis which offends us so. We do not much care for Hoffman before, but as an animal we despise him. We realize that the violent side that emerges in Hoffman exists in all of us and this offends us. In the same position we would have done the same as Hoffman.

This reviewer would advise all to see “Straw Dogs,” besides being hard core realism. It is beautifully photographed, excellently directed, and masterfully acted. Aside from the “Wild Bunch” it is Peckinpah’s finest film and the best film to be shown this year at Concord,

Newcomers set second semester record

The largest number of second semester newcomers in the college’s history entered this semester. 45 new students matriculated; 20 who are early freshman entrants in the class of 1971 plus 25 new upper-level men and women who have transferred to Connecticut from other colleges and universities.

Mrs. Jeanette B. Hershey reports that most of the entering freshmen completed high school last June and delayed moving on into college in order to have an interim break for travel and employment. Some completed high school requirements in mid-term, and their strong academic credentials have won them early access to classroom classrooms. The 10 men and 16 women who have just transferred to Connecticut came from colleges and universities as distant as Western Washington State.

Judith Janison in the “Wading in the Water” section

"I don’t care what people say, rock & roll is here now more enjoyable than trying to keep pace with anything by the Alman or Dobie Brothers. And its also seems right now to be more pop than ever before (if not easier) than the best efforts of the Grateful Dead.

Still, the Penguins, Coasters, Orioles, and Flamingos, and Cadillacs, Impalas, T-Birds, and Fleetwoods are not household names; nor are they conspicuous by their absence from the recorded collections of high school and college age followers of contemporary music.

Instead of collecting those original groups playing their old standards, many of today’s

Buy a health

After the long winter break it is expected that some plants may nibble to negligence while others just kicked the habit after lengthy journeys in the cold. Consequently there will be another Rotary student plant sale. This one will be held on Friday, Feb. 13, in New London Hall room 306.

The prices are reasonable from as low as 50 cents for small plants up to possibly $3.00 for a larger one. All plants have been rooted.

Straw Dogs" offensive, but why?

By Robert Hoffman

On Friday February 15 many people will leave Palmer Auditorium offended by Sam Peckinpah’s “Straw Dogs,” starring Dustin Hoffman, and they will not know why. The film, being totally confused these distraught individuals will most probably dismiss “Straw Dogs” as being a brutal, stale and uninteresting movie which should have never been brought to the screen.

“Straw Dogs” concerns itself with an American school teacher (Dustin Hoffman) who leaves the big and bustling American city for peace and solitude in the Welsh countryside.

In brief, Wales is no more at ease than New York City. Hoffman’s wife enferges the handyman into becoming her rapist, and what she thought would be trite turns into a nightmare, as she is raised by more than one man. With his house besieged by the raptist and their henchmen, Hoffman, the up to now pacifist and nethis, metamorphoses into the male animal, protecting his domain.

It is this metamorphosis which offends us so. We do not much care for Hoffman before, but as an animal we despise him. We realize that the violent side that emerges in Hoffman exists in all of us and this offends us. In the same position we would have done the same as Hoffman.

This reviewer would advise all to see “Straw Dogs,” besides being hard core realism. It is beautifully photographed, excellently directed, and masterfully acted. Aside from the “Wild Bunch” it is Peckinpah’s finest film and the best film to be shown this year at Concord,

Newcomers set second semester record

The largest number of second semester newcomers in the college’s history entered this semester. 45 new students matriculated; 20 who are early freshman entrants in the class of 1971 plus 25 new upper-level men and women who have transferred to Connecticut from other colleges and universities.

Mrs. Jeanette B. Hershey reports that most of the entering freshmen completed high school last June and delayed moving on into college in order to have an interim break for travel and employment. Some completed high school requirements in mid-term, and their strong academic credentials have won them early access to classroom classrooms. The 10 men and 16 women who have just transferred to Connecticut came from colleges and universities as distant as Western Washington State.

Judith Janison in the “Wading in the Water” section

"I don’t care what people say, rock & roll is here now more enjoyable than trying to keep pace with anything by the Alman or Dobie Brothers. And its also seems right now to be more pop than ever before (if not easier) than the best efforts of the Grateful Dead.

Still, the Penguins, Coasters, Orioles, and Flamingos, and Cadillacs, Impalas, T-Birds, and Fleetwoods are not household names; nor are they conspicuous by their absence from the recorded collections of high school and college age followers of contemporary music.

Instead of collecting those original groups playing their old standards, many of today’s

Buy a health

After the long winter break it is expected that some plants may nibble to negligence while others just kicked the habit after lengthy journeys in the cold. Consequently there will be another Rotary student plant sale. This one will be held on Friday, Feb. 13, in New London Hall room 306.

The prices are reasonable from as low as 50 cents for small plants up to possibly $3.00 for a larger one. All plants have been rooted.
Hebron, Ct., the place to pick up a horse Friday night

by Jim Malchove

The Connecticut College campus is peppered with excitement on a Friday night. Yet perhaps your Friday feast has a roving spirit in your belly. If this be the case, and if you can talk your way into some means of transportation, why then it's perfect night to hit the road. Now there are many things to do in New London's rural surroundings. From one thing that can be enjoyed in only on a Friday night. It looms as a "Friday Night," for indeed, on the following Saturday you'll question if it was a dream.

The name of the "dream in question" is the "Hebron Horse Auction," and its next door neighbor, the "Public House Cafe" and they can easily be dreamed into a Friday night by taking a 30 to 45 minute drive. All of a sudden the road will be lined with cars and pickup trucks in the middle of the road guaranteed to be nowhere. But this night it must be a somewhere, for as you approach the barn with its open door of golden light against the black night, you'll hear the rising hum of a country auction. Inside you see a star shaped spout, pouring its way through the dirt floor and looking up from it you see a farmer with a bay horse speculating that that big horse staring you in the face ain't worth half as much as the money you owe him! "Bring it'll bring." Looking around this half of the barn you'll see horses 'eating a goad.' Moving into the other half of the barn which is divided lengthwise you'll find yourself in the midst of the first part of the evening's agenda; the tack auction, where saddles, bridles and blankets are intermixed with sales of everything from clock radios to horse and its next door Dancing is free at the Public and are the nearest night by you do not wish them. don't like the way he rides you Indeed, that can be indulged .

The exhibit which was sponsored by the Arboretum staff Worlds, having yellow petals - and they aren't boots and a good deal sport.

The oriental variety of the plant, Hamamelis mollis, can be found between Fanning and Bill Hall, in its last days of producing long yellow petals. It has been blooming for the past two weeks. In the spring the seeds produced from pollination will be shot out in the fall they arrive. During the watermelon seed popping out from between a thumb and forefinger.

If one were to cut a fruiting twig, one would be surprised to hear from time to time the popping noises when the seed is released.

Today, the native variety, Hamamelis virginiana, is known for its extract found in bottles on old-time barber shop and medicine cabinet shelves. The Indians used it as a poultice from the inner back for inflamed eyes and skin surfaces. Witchhazel is always a favorite with water and gold diviners. Even today, there are people in the New London area who claim to be able to fork a witch hazel stick balance it between the thumb and fingers, and by so doing, you will be able to tell what you should dig a well. According to one source, witch hazel was received in England because diviners used to use hazel for this purpose.

The native variety can be found between Bill and Fanning Halls. Having yellow petals shorter than its oriental relative, this plant blooms in September and October.

The flowers that bloom in the winter, (tra la)

The flowers that bloom in the winter are a mystery to many, especially those who have not seen the flowers that bloom in the winter. These flowers are known as "winter flowers," and they are beautiful and fragrant. Some of the most popular winter flowers are the "winter jasmine," the "winter rose," and the "winter clematis."

Winter jasmine is a small shrub that blooms in late winter and early spring. Its flowers are yellow and fragrant, and it has attractive dark green leaves. Winter rose is a hardy shrub that blooms from late winter to early spring. Its flowers are white or pink, and it has glossy green leaves. Winter clematis is a vine that blooms in late winter and early spring. Its flowers are white or pink, and it has attractive dark green leaves.

Winter jasmine and winter rose are both hardy shrubs that can be planted in a variety of garden settings. Winter clematis is a vine that can be trained on a trellis or other support. All three of these winter flowers are easy to care for and will reward you with their beauty and fragrance.

The oriental variety of the plant, Hamamelis mollis, can be found between Fanning and Bill Hall, in its last days of producing long yellow petals. It has been blooming for the past two weeks. In the spring the seeds produced from pollination will be shot out in the fall they arrive. During the watermelon seed popping out from between a thumb and forefinger. If one were to cut a fruiting twig, one would be surprised to hear from time to time the popping noises when the seed is released.

Today, the native variety, Hamamelis virginiana, is known for its extract found in bottles on old-time barber shop and medicine cabinet shelves. The Indians used it as a poultice from the inner back for inflamed eyes and skin surfaces. Witchhazel is always a favorite with water and gold diviners. Even today, there are people in the New London area who claim to be able to fork a witch hazel stick balance it between the thumb and fingers, and by so doing, you will be able to tell what you should dig a well. According to one source, witch hazel was received in England because diviners used to use hazel for this purpose.

The native variety can be found between Bill and Fanning Halls. Having yellow petals shorter than its oriental relative, this plant blooms in September and October.

The exhibit which was sponsored by the Arboretum staff Worlds, having yellow petals - and they aren't boots and a good deal sport.

The oriental variety of the plant, Hamamelis mollis, can be found between Fanning and Bill Hall, in its last days of producing long yellow petals. It has been blooming for the past two weeks. In the spring the seeds produced from pollination will be shot out in the fall they arrive. During the watermelon seed popping out from between a thumb and forefinger. If one were to cut a fruiting twig, one would be surprised to hear from time to time the popping noises when the seed is released.

Today, the native variety, Hamamelis virginiana, is known for its extract found in bottles on old-time barber shop and medicine cabinet shelves. The Indians used it as a poultice from the inner back for inflamed eyes and skin surfaces. Witchhazel is always a favorite with water and gold diviners. Even today, there are people in the New London area who claim to be able to fork a witch hazel stick balance it between the thumb and fingers, and by so doing, you will be able to tell what you should dig a well. According to one source, witch hazel was received in England because diviners used to use hazel for this purpose.

The native variety can be found between Bill and Fanning Halls. Having yellow petals shorter than its oriental relative, this plant blooms in September and October.

Hockey Game 7:30 p.m. Wesleyan

Connecticut College
Lobby of Dana Hall Cummings Art Center Thurs. Feb. 14, 1974 11 a.m. p.m.

The flowers that bloom in the winter are a mystery to many, especially those who have not seen the flowers that bloom in the winter. These flowers are known as "winter flowers," and they are beautiful and fragrant. Some of the most popular winter flowers are the "winter jasmine," the "winter rose," and the "winter clematis."

Winter jasmine is a small shrub that blooms in late winter and early spring. Its flowers are yellow and fragrant, and it has attractive dark green leaves. Winter rose is a hardy shrub that blooms from late winter to early spring. Its flowers are white or pink, and it has glossy green leaves. Winter clematis is a vine that blooms in late winter and early spring. Its flowers are white or pink, and it has attractive dark green leaves.

Winter jasmine and winter rose are both hardy shrubs that can be planted in a variety of garden settings. Winter clematis is a vine that can be trained on a trellis or other support. All three of these winter flowers are easy to care for and will reward you with their beauty and fragrance.

The flowers that bloom in the winter are a mystery to many, especially those who have not seen the flowers that bloom in the winter. These flowers are known as "winter flowers," and they are beautiful and fragrant. Some of the most popular winter flowers are the "winter jasmine," the "winter rose," and the "winter clematis."

Winter jasmine is a small shrub that blooms in late winter and early spring. Its flowers are yellow and fragrant, and it has attractive dark green leaves. Winter rose is a hardy shrub that blooms from late winter to early spring. Its flowers are white or pink, and it has glossy green leaves. Winter clematis is a vine that blooms in late winter and early spring. Its flowers are white or pink, and it has attractive dark green leaves.

Winter jasmine and winter rose are both hardy shrubs that can be planted in a variety of garden settings. Winter clematis is a vine that can be trained on a trellis or other support. All three of these winter flowers are easy to care for and will reward you with their beauty and fragrance.

The flowers that bloom in the winter are a mystery to many, especially those who have not seen the flowers that bloom in the winter. These flowers are known as "winter flowers," and they are beautiful and fragrant. Some of the most popular winter flowers are the "winter jasmine," the "winter rose," and the "winter clematis."

Winter jasmine is a small shrub that blooms in late winter and early spring. Its flowers are yellow and fragrant, and it has attractive dark green leaves. Winter rose is a hardy shrub that blooms from late winter to early spring. Its flowers are white or pink, and it has glossy green leaves. Winter clematis is a vine that blooms in late winter and early spring. Its flowers are white or pink, and it has attractive dark green leaves.

Winter jasmine and winter rose are both hardy shrubs that can be planted in a variety of garden settings. Winter clematis is a vine that can be trained on a trellis or other support. All three of these winter flowers are easy to care for and will reward you with their beauty and fragrance.
Some inner-city ghettos have special schools. For little boys who don't talk.

Not mute little boys. But children so withdrawn, so afraid of failure, they cannot make the slightest attempt to do anything at which they might fail.

Some don't talk. Some don't listen. Most don't behave. And all of them don't learn.

One day someone asked us to help.

Through Kodak, cameras and film were distributed to teachers. The teachers gave the cameras to the kids and told them to take pictures.

And then the miracle. Little boys who had never said anything, looked at the pictures and began to talk. They said, "This is my house." "This is my dog." "This is where I like to hide." They began to explain, to describe, to communicate.

And once the channels of communication had been opened, they began to learn.

We're helping the children of the inner-city. And we're also helping the adults. We're involved in inner-city job programs. To train unskilled people in useful jobs.

What does Kodak stand to gain from this? Well, we're showing how our products can help a teacher—and maybe creating a whole new market. And we're also cultivating young customers who will someday buy their own cameras and film. But more than that, we're cultivating alert, educated citizens who will someday be responsible for our society.

After all, our business depends on our society. So we care what happens to it.
Vandalism prompts special student leaders meeting

by Walter Palmer

In response to the growing problems of vandalism on campus, President of the Student Government Laurie Lesser called for an urgent meeting of the house fellows and other class executives. In a drawn-out meeting the group attempted to determine why there is vandalism on campus and how it should be dealt with.

Because of basic differences of opinion and conflicting interests, no concrete policy was established, but several areas of concern were discussed:
- The Judiciary Board suggested vandalism is being weak and ineffective.
- The idea of punitive fines was discussed.
- Mr. Shinault suggested more involvement of House Councils in dormitory activities.
- The Judicial Board asked Mr. Lederman to support the five Judicial Guidelines:
  1. Property destruction is not tolerated.
  2. Stealing is not tolerated.
  3. A host is responsible for their guests.
  4. People are responsible for their parties.
  5. Your rights end where your neighbor begins.

However, the general feeling was that these guidelines had no real authority and stronger measures are needed for the Judicial to deal with vandalism. Many members felt that punitive fines should be levied by the Judiciary Board. Concern was expressed that fines might be unjustly discriminatory to scholarship students. However, the point was made that “the fines would not normally exceed twenty-five dollars, and be based on the action.”

Mike Lederman expressed what was one of the few undisputed points when he called on the House Councils for greater participation in handling problems within the dorm, rather than referring all offenders to the Judiciary Board. Another point that most members felt was valid was that the faculty was overly involved in labor and salary disputes, and had alienated itself from the community.

The recommendation that suspension be increased as a method for dealing with chronic offenders was sharply criticized by one Housefellow. The Executive Committee would come to some basic agreements among themselves.

New machine eases printing operations

by Sally Abrams

Had Benjamin Franklin lived in the twentieth century, he might have been envying the printing system this modern, sophisticated printing press equipment has. Recently installed in the duplicating office, this new equipment has made a difference, especially as the hours and the number of items the duplicating office had to process daily increased.

Before the school owned the camera and the baking machine, it took the press of time to maintain the press, process the plates, and print the pages. Now the equipment can print books with this new equipment, Mr. Shinault was not particularly optimistic. “We do not, at present, have the capacity to print books. We would need larger presses. We also need no binding, stitching or enough room.” Still, he said it was conceivable but not probable.

Mr. Shinault acknowledged that the potential of these machines to the college community. “They help us tremendously. We are extremely thankful to the donor for his generosity and his foresight.”

Teachers fired, retired and resigned (continued from page 1)

(Continued From Page One)

affected these decisions. He pointed out that no action has yet been taken on the Report. Mr. Shinault said that the faculty was not an absolute factor in considering permanent appointments. “For instance,” he said, “we have full-time faculty without Ph.D.’s.” Such people, he added, are likely to be artists who demonstrate their proficiency by getting published, performing, and the like.

Mr. Shinault acknowledged that the Pundit was an indication in some cases of a person’s commitment to the academic community. “What the Pundit says is, ‘I am a mesh in, a way. It is a kind of bar metrath. You’ve got to have very good reasons for not getting it.’” He said, “If you don’t get it, it can be extremely rare, and the latest you didn’t measure up to the level of the academic community, or two, that you are the sort of persons who didn’t get the Ph.D.”

Pundit want ads accepted

Pundit will accept short wanted and personal ads from students.

Classified Ad Pundit
Box 1351
Connecticut College

Please print your ad clearly, and how to run the press.” When asked if students who have all this knowledge can use it, Mr. Shinault was skeptical. “The machines are always busy,” he continued. “There is no time or place open for students to use it. You must learn to appreciate our workload.”

Mr. Shinault has some familiarity with running the new equipment, but he is having someone come this week to train him thoroughly.

He mentioned that although the Brunning system is not at the disposal of the students, the mimeograph and ditto machines are open to everyone. A stencil for the mimeograph machine is 20 cents, he said, and the xerox machines are a dime.

When Pundit asked if he could envision professors writing books with this new equipment, Mr. Shinault was not particularly optimistic. “We do not, at present, have the capacity to print books. We would need larger presses. We also need no binding, stitching or enough room.” Still, he said it was conceivable but not probable.

Mr. Shinault acknowledged that the potential of these machines to the college community. “They help us tremendously. We are extremely thankful to the donor for his generosity and his foresight.”

Teachers fired, retired and resigned (continued from page 1)

(Continued From Page One)

affected these decisions. He pointed out that no action has yet been taken on the Report. Mr. Shinault said that the faculty was not an absolute factor in considering permanent appointments. “For instance,” he said, “we have full-time faculty without Ph.D.’s.” Such people, he added, are likely to be artists who demonstrate their proficiency by getting published, performing, and the like.

Mr. Shinault acknowledged that the Pundit was an indication in some cases of a person’s commitment to the academic community. “What the Pundit says is, ‘I am a mesh in, a way. It is a kind of bar metrath. You’ve got to have very good reasons for not getting it.’” He said, “If you don’t get it, it can be extremely rare, and the latest you didn’t measure up to the level of the academic community, or two, that you are the sort of persons who didn’t get the Ph.D.”

Pundit want ads accepted

Pundit will accept short wanted and personal ads from students.

Classified Ad Pundit
Box 1351
Connecticut College

Please print your ad clearly, and how to run the press.” When asked if students who have all this knowledge can use it, Mr. Shinault was skeptical. “The machines are always busy,” he continued. “There is no time or place open for students to use it. You must learn to appreciate our workload.”

Mr. Shinault has some familiarity with running the new equipment, but he is having someone come this week to train him thoroughly.

He mentioned that although the Brunning system is not at the disposal of the students, the mimeograph and ditto machines are open to everyone. A stencil for the mimeograph machine is 20 cents, he said, and the xerox machines are a dime.

When Pundit asked if he could envision professors writing books with this new equipment, Mr. Shinault was not particularly optimistic. “We do not, at present, have the capacity to print books. We would need larger presses. We also need no binding, stitching or enough room.” Still, he said it was conceivable but not probable.

Mr. Shinault acknowledged that the potential of these machines to the college community. “They help us tremendously. We are extremely thankful to the donor for his generosity and his foresight.”

 Teachers fired, retired and resigned (continued from page 1)

(Continued From Page One)

affected these decisions. He pointed out that no action has yet been taken on the Report. Mr. Shinault said that the faculty was not an absolute factor in considering permanent appointments. “For instance,” he said, “we have full-time faculty without Ph.D.’s.” Such people, he added, are likely to be artists who demonstrate their proficiency by getting published, performing, and the like.

Mr. Shinault acknowledged that the Pundit was an indication in some cases of a person’s commitment to the academic community. “What the Pundit says is, ‘I am a mesh in, a way. It is a kind of bar metrath. You’ve got to have very good reasons for not getting it.’” He said, “If you don’t get it, it can be extremely rare, and the latest you didn’t measure up to the level of the academic community, or two, that you are the sort of persons who didn’t get the Ph.D.”

Pundit want ads accepted

Pundit will accept short wanted and personal ads from students.

Classified Ad Pundit
Box 1351
Connecticut College

Please print your ad clearly, and how to run the press.” When asked if students who have all this knowledge can use it, Mr. Shinault was skeptical. “The machines are always busy,” he continued. “There is no time or place open for students to use it. You must learn to appreciate our workload.”

Mr. Shinault has some familiarity with running the new equipment, but he is having someone come this week to train him thoroughly.

He mentioned that although the Brunning system is not at the disposal of the students, the mimeograph and ditto machines are open to everyone. A stencil for the mimeograph machine is 20 cents, he said, and the xerox machines are a dime.

When Pundit asked if he could envision professors writing books with this new equipment, Mr. Shinault was not particularly optimistic. “We do not, at present, have the capacity to print books. We would need larger presses. We also need no binding, stitching or enough room.” Still, he said it was conceivable but not probable.

Mr. Shinault acknowledged that the potential of these machines to the college community. “They help us tremendously. We are extremely thankful to the donor for his generosity and his foresight.”

 Teachers fired, retired and resigned (continued from page 1)

(Continued From Page One)

affected these decisions. He pointed out that no action has yet been taken on the Report. Mr. Shinault said that the faculty was not an absolute factor in considering permanent appointments. “For instance,” he said, “we have full-time faculty without Ph.D.’s.” Such people, he added, are likely to be artists who demonstrate their proficiency by getting published, performing, and the like.

Mr. Shinault acknowledged that the Pundit was an indication in some cases of a person’s commitment to the academic community. “What the Pundit says is, ‘I am a mesh in, a way. It is a kind of bar metrath. You’ve got to have very good reasons for not getting it.’” He said, “If you don’t get it, it can be extremely rare, and the latest you didn’t measure up to the level of the academic community, or two, that you are the sort of persons who didn’t get the Ph.D.”

Pundit want ads accepted

Pundit will accept short wanted and personal ads from students.
Making the scene at Pro Bar, Low Bar, High Bar... Bar Stool?

by Michael Collier

That sounds ridiculous.

What?

The Crow Bar?

Okay, then what do you think?

Haven't you just said Crow...

That's spelling, the sound's the same.

How 'bout Pro Bar, Low Bar, High Bar... Bar Stool?

There's going to be a contest, you know for a name. Crow Bar?

Nice, but what about the other two?

How about, The Crow Bar?

What?

No, seriously.

Seriously, what?

Be serious.

I like Crow Bar better, it's more serene but not as solemn as Bee Serious.

The first night at the as yet untitled and curiously inquisitive licensed Campus Bar was a scene of orgastic beer drinking and inquisitive talk. This writer's humble and sheltered view, it was a welcomed (although, hardly fresh) diversion for the hearty Conn. students who braved the white, windy, and crowded their communal and separate ways to the Crozer-Williams complex to be a part of what can be considered an historic step for all liberty loving people.

I figured there be carpeting.

I thought it would be.

It's opening night, you have to figure on it.

I'm going to be a part of it.

I hope that lady don't lose our coats.

They're going to have to get a coat rack, first night though, you have to figure on it.

There was little disagreement among the students that the College Tavern had lived up to its expectations or that it promised to be a more agreeable central meeting area than the bus terminal atmosphere of the named cafe; certainly more palatable.

To the disappointment of the eager and incorrigible group of morning and afternoon upperclassmen, the Pub will be open only for a short time on Friday, Saturday and Sunday afternoons. However, every night promises to support revelry until midnight on the week-days and until One on ALL IN THE WRIST. Four students try out their beer drinking techniques on opening night.

Franks and Saturdays. Monday night it will be closed, this seems to be an agreeable day for all religious groups.

How much did she want?

Forty cents each.

You're kidding?

Could have been.

Guess so, but the real stuff is nice.

Nic, but what about the sticky?

How about, The Crow Bar?

Well, no matter what it's called the students will reduce it to initials.

Even though the establishment holds only eighty students, and been cheaper if they had used vinyl paneling.

eighty-one, eighty-two... have to wait until there is a vacancy, it offers a space, an area, open and reasonably smoky. It is not a cell and in this respect it will hopefully break the solipsism of room-parties and provide alternatives to Dorm festivals.

Although I make no promises that noise in the dorms during week nights will ever be infrequent students who do enjoy quiet, by you few, can say, "Hey Buddy, why don't you go to the pub?" My ears hurt.

What?

My ears hurt, it's so loud.

She does have a nice... Louder.

I agree with you, I think she does look...

No, I said my ears hurt. It's too loud.

Oh well, it's better that way, those sloppy tongues go unheard. Anyway it's opening night, you have to figure on it. But she does have a nice...

Louder.

Volleyball entries due

Entries are due on February 28 for the interdorm mixed volleyball tournament. Rules and entry blanks are available in the main physical education office. Anyone who is interested in an all-school mixed paddle tennis tournament should contact Sheryl Voss, Ext. 385.

Beer is for leaders, too. Presidents Charles E Shain and Laurie J Lesser share bacchanalian conversation with an unidentified man.

Special permit governs bar

The liquor license which allows the College to operate a bar in the new special college license, according to E Leroy Knight, College treasurer. "The legislature passed the bill all the time of permit only last March," he said.

"They've been selling beer," said Mr. Knight, "not wines or spirits with this permit."

This new college permit is controversial. Bar operators across the state fearing a loss of business lobbied against its passage. Allowing the sale of only beer was a concession to public taverns.

"We have no local opposition," said Mr. Knight, "we should be thankful for that."

The College would not have been eligible for the other other kinds of permits granted by the State Liquor Commission. Because students do not have an equal voice in the governing of the College. The College cannot qualify as a "Club."

The restaurant-bar license does not apply to a private organization.

HELP WANTED

$100.00 weekly possible addressing mail for firms - Full and part time at home - Send stamped self-addressed envelope to COMMCO BOX 157, ROUND ROCK, TEXAS, 78664.

The Institute for Paralegal Training

235 South 17th Street Philadelphia Pennsylvania 19103

(215) 732-6600