Rossini’s Barber of Seville
To Be Sung by Wagner Troop

Graciela Silvain Has
Leading Female Role
In Opera Production

The Connecticut College concert series will present the Barber of Seville at 8:30 p.m. on January 19 in Palmer auditorium. Rossini’s sparkling opera comedy will be brought to Connecticut college by the Charles L. Wagner llanmore troop.

Graciela Silvain, whose excellent soprano voice won widespread acclaim in the South American Argentina, will appear in the leading role of Rosina. She is also a graduate of Miss Silvain’s, in the role of Count Almaviva, her lover, is the promising young American tenor, Edward Nyborg. The title role of Figaro will be taken by either Norman Young or Andrew Galley, both young American baritones of exceptional ability.

An orchestra of 25 New York musicians will be conducted under the direction of Paul Breashad, while the cast will be featured by the Metropolitan Opera Company. New London, Connecticut, Wednesday January 19, 1919 10. per copy

The Unsung
As we make the daily trek to and from classes to the library, the post office, the snack bar and back to the dorm, how often do we stop to think of the little people, the unheralded and unremembered, who help to make the wheels of our college go round? When there is a hitch in the cogs we are often quick to criticize. In an instant we are aware of a cog we may have never realized existed. We take for granted the smooth, efficient running of the college machine.

Unspoken laws, cold radiators, slowly living rooms, inflexible floor plans, all bear witness with the men who do the jobs that we often do not even voice the praises of the people who make such conditions seem ludicrous to conceive of. Only when we consider a few of the things we take for granted can we realize the enormity of detail and responsibility involved in comfort, if not luxuries, institutions provide.

Imagine for a minute what we would do without those people, most of whom we never see in the course of our college careers. They are the people who make the buildings and the college work and we must accord them the respect and appreciation which is their due. -L.L.

Miss Ruth Lawson Explains Functions of UN Institute

Miss Ruth Lawson of Mount Holyoke college was honored at a tea in the faculty lounge last Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 11. Miss Lawson, a teacher of International Relations, is the executive chairman and speaker of the drive to establish permanently the Institute of the United Nations at Mt. Holyoke, which had its first four-week session last summer.

Miss Lawson said that the distinct point of the Institute is that it is really a New England institution. Without the cooperation and willing help of many New England colleges such as Smith, Wellesley, Dartmouth, and Amherst, the plans for the Institute could not have been carried out in reality. Miss Lawson also announced that Connecticut college will be added to the roster of schools who sponsor the Institute. From the faculty of these schools one person who is an expert in international affairs is available as consultant of the Institute. Miss Louise Holborn, of our Government department is one of the consultants.

Miss Lawson explained that one of the prime reasons for the Institute is to help people in understanding the complexities of the UN.

Miss Lawson said that all elements were combined to make the Institute possible. The people in the Institute are able to handle the problems we are carrying the responsibilities of solving the problems of the whole world. The group of distinguished people who come to lecture at the Institute are writers, UN delegates, newsmen, and other dignitaries.

There results from the course on the United Nations a two way process of teaching. The students start all phases of the UN, its problems and aims, while the visiting lecturers learn what the average people know and expect of the United Nations. Both parties are expected to talk to each other and get all questions answered.

The Institute tries primarily to look honestly at the UN. In the four week course, each week is devoted to an important world problem. What can the UN be expected to do about the problem and how do they do it? There is no sidetracking of questions or ignorance of UN difficulties. One of the last summer was devoted to the problem of European economic recovery, and the other three weeks were devoted to equally important questions. Each week there were two lectures, discussion periods, and time for the pursuance of individual interests.

Each Wednesday was devoted to a special feature. One was to a look at Europe to see the world delegations in action and to hear the people who had spoken at the institute debating some vital question.

As a member of the Institute would like to keep its membership open to as many people as possible. People who are in business, clergy, heads of school boards and any other group that may be interested in participating in the course.

Although only students are allowed to participate, by means of Student Assistance Scholarships, the Institute is writers, UN delegates, newsmen, and other dignitaries.

Human Rights Commission Is Medium of Thought Exchange by Mini Otto

International law on Human Rights is without doubt the most important international body existing today. Because within this group, more and more nations are being internationalized men's minds go on. The basis for such internationalization is the Human Rights Commission. For it is here that the various nations across the world are presented with the facts of life. Now, to finding that which is common to all the world.

In drafting the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, every man can feel that the continental expanse of nations to the basic philosophies of the world, will greatly accelerate the growth of a world community.

This is one of the main reasons why it is such a pity to have a mock Human Rights Commission at Connecticut College. For in its very international understanding is one thing, but actually watching the working of an international unity is quite another. One cannot understand the difficulties, the differences, the nationalities, the way of life, and the customs.

One of the articles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights that this mock Commission will consider is the one which concerns the right to work. In the United States, even 10 years ago, the plans for the Institute never could have become a reality. Miss Lawson also explained that the plans for the Institute never could have become a reality. Only when we consider a few of the things we take for granted can we realize the enormity of detail and responsibility involved in comfort, if not luxuries, institutions living.

Climax of Violin, Piano Recital Is Strauss’ Opus 18

Critics Believe Duo Played as Unit for Rendition of Sonata

by Carole Axinn and Rachel Ober

The climax of last week’s concert of violin and piano music, given by Mr. Donald Currier and Mr. Howard Boatwright, was the sonata in E flat major, Op. 18 by the post-romantic composer Richard Strauss. In this work Strauss creates a high pitch of emotional tension through the use of forceful rhythms and harmonies out of which subtle single lines emerge. Here, for the first time in the program we felt that the violinst, and pianist were playing as a unit in their interpretation, though paradoxically enough, it was in the Adagio of this work that their ensemble seemed faint.

JANE LAW

As there is no available picture of the subject of this week’s profiles, a brief description of Jane Law, newly elected to head the class of ’52, is in order. Jane is a slender five feet five and a half inches, with curly, brown hair cut short—true to the latest dictates of fashion—and eyes apparently the same shade. This resident of Thamnas was born on September 25, 1930 in the home of many people, New York, N. Y. Four years later, Jane’s family moved to Scarsdale, N. Y., where she grew up and where Jane attended grammar and high schools.

High school, Jane took part in a number of varied activities. Literary interests seemed to predominate above all others, as she was an associate yearbook editor and worked on the school newspaper and literary magazine. Jane also took part in school athletics, the dramatic club, the French club, an art club, and was a member of honor society and student government.

Here at college, Jane says she is primarily interested in English and psychology, but she has not yet definitely decided upon a major. For, as extra-curricular activities, it seems that she would later on like to take a small part in many organizations such as the New York and Candle and Chess Club. Tennis ranks first in her choice of sports; therefore, although Jane claims she is no pro but is current merely to hit the ball back and forth.

In regard to the present freshman class, her slims are very similar to those of preceding presidents. A primary objective is that of increasing class spirit, and many plans are underway to accomplish this end and to help the class members to know one another better.

We wish all success to Jane Law, as the class of ‘52 begins to make their mark on the Connecticut college campus.

Winter Managers

With the election of sport heads, class competition will be under-percent, although it is not yet enforced. Certainly, Miss Lawson concluded, the failures of the UN cannot be the fault of the UN itself, but in its individuals who desert it. If it is to succeed in the future, this political strife must cease, and all nations must participate fully, reach decisions agreeable to all, and then comply with these decisions.
