Birds Cause Blackout

By John Hayes

New Haven

At 8:45AM on Saturday fire alarms began blaring in the Henry P. Kissel Pool. Hair on the bottom, the bird walked into the hall expecting to activate a nest-feeding drill. After quelling a fire that had left three inches of water in one of the bathrooms the night before, Keener was not happy about an early morning fire drill. But as this was a rare alert that the electricity was out. In fact the electricity was out in twelve buildings in conn.

Earlier that day a high voltage cable bringing power to a transformer outside the powerhouse failed. According to Ulysses Hammond, Vice President of Administration, bush had noted in the four-inch metal conduit that the cable failed. "We believe that the birds had eaten some wire in the conduit, which could have caused or contributed to the cable failure."

The cable that provides power for Central Campus is one of the oldest in the nation. Unlike other dozens that operate on new voltage "duct feed" cables, Central operates on a "single feed," which has no backup capacity. Physical plant coordinated with Connecticut Light and Power.

Students were forced to evacuate eight dorm rooms on Saturday, January 19, forcing professors and other dorm rooms to wash in the cold.

Students became aware this week that a College employee had been visiting them from a private shower room off the main bathroom stall since last semester.

The individual had been spying on students residing through a series of small peepholes in the stall. The College female resident of Hamilton noted similar hole last semester and while it was filled, no investigation took place. According to another resident, there were also a large room in a bathroom in Willett as well as additional peepholes that were recently located in Knowlton’s rest.

The individual was not a member of the Old Hoc custodial staff but was often observed frequenting the Hamilton bathrooms. "He was never actually doing anything," said Jared Lambo, 19, Hamilton.

That was one of the things that was annoying. No one had ever noticed anything until they assumed that he was one of the students. "We just didn’t do anything," he said.

Students observed that the peepholes trickled the occasionally showering stall walls with paper towels and used the hole to check individuals utilizing the shower stalls and washer.

The individual, who was known to students as a member of the upperclassmen, residents of both Hamilton, and Marshall to use a specific shower located in a half-door, opposite a bathroom stall. It is believed that she would go through the hallway, hole from the neighboring stall.

This Friday evening, students were notified via a note in their whiteboards that the dorm might have a "prepping zone." It informed Student Life (who requested all House in the following day Kim Bellwine, 19, Hamilton, discovered covered holes in her dorm bathroom. By morning, students were becoming concerned.

"You just felt like of," said one aggrieved freshman. "We’re strong women, but you can’t even be safe in a place where you feel uncomfortable."

Another student commented, "It makes you feel like you’re not in every-thing. Basically, if it can happen here, it can happen anywhere."

One female resident of Marshall opted a stall door filled with paper towels after the custodian informed her there was someone showering in the stall and she found the stallencil.

One resident of Marshall who has observed the holes feels that she would love to see the dorm more secure. "You don’t expect this to be a problem unless they put them as a little family in the very beginning it was not taken as.

Student Report: Bush's State Address

By Juliana Linder

Assistant News Editor

On Tuesday, January 28th, President George W. Bush delivered the annual State of the Union Address. Bush acknowledged both domestic and international concerns, thus contrasting the wide-spread expectation that the States would be used merely as an opportunity to justify a possibly imminent war against Iraq.

On the international front, Bush spoke of America's truss in Iraq, and the pressing situation with Israel.

One of Bush's major international concerns was the dominance of AIDS as an epidemic in Africa. "Today, on the continent of African, nearly 30 million people have the AIDS virus, including 3 million children under the age of 15... Yet across that continent, only 50,000 AIDS victims - only 50,000 are receiving the medicines they need," Bush said. "We have the Congress to commit $15 billion over the next five years to ameliorate the rampant pres-

Students Must Learn Difference Between Trust and Blind Acceptance

This has always been a College on a Hill. The familiar campus setting any New London feels like an oasis from crime and corruption. Students leave their doors open, their bikes unlocked, and their books unattended in library carrels. Maybe it’s the honor code. Maybe it’s the ever-vigilant Campus Safety. Whatever the reason, the campus is a meeting and safe place, most of the time.

But last week that trust was shattered when students discovered that their privacy had been violated. Nearly every day is a place where they are most vulnerable. According to witnesses of Holbrook, the individual suspected of spying on students while they showered was "friendly and talkative." Everyone assumed that he was a member of the custodial staff simply because he was loitering in the bathroom every morning. Generally students assume that any non-threatening behavior by a trusting and safe place, most of the time.

The act undermined the basic principles of trust and honor that this College is founded on. That trust is hard won and the student government. The Editors-in-Chief shall have final content approval. The final deadline for advertising is February 15.

Student Criticizes Voice, Administration for Remaining Silent on Student Government Official's Misdeeds

I have recently heard some shocking tales about an important member of the student government. In an effort to learn more about what I had heard, I opened the College Voice and was startled and disappointed to see nothing in print. While I hope to hear this disinformation, my biggest fear is that the paper has chosen not to print what they know, following the lead of the administration and the student government.

When this student has had his hearing, I hope especially headstrong students from multiple parts of his offensive, common, and hyperbolic. I have heard of him purchasing a scanner and using it to listen to the campus safety channel. Every time I heard another variation of the theme, I shook my head, expressed my disgust, but did little else.

In the past few weeks, I have heard about this student apparently stealing students who were not 21 into the Creve. Apparently occurring last semester, there has yet to be any mention of a B-Roll mix, a possible misplacement or removal, or anything concerning this. On top of all, some seem to think members of the campus staff should be punished for the student’s actions.

I know that these are only second or third hand stories, but I am concerned that the facts are incorrect, that should be addressed.

Respectfully,
W. D. Hoyt Jr.

Buggernuts Return to Winter Formal to Energize Crowd

BY ROB CONNOR

After raising hell here in basically September, the Buggernuts were back again on Saturday night at the Winter Formal. The Buggernuts were rocking to the tune of the song "Little Black Backpack," and Bryan Adams' "Summer of '69," as they danced to the music and turned heads like they had done before.

So you think as fun as the sights of the sounds of the party as above the stage.

While the DJ downstairs were the cool, the DJ upstairs were the loud, the DJ in the middle were the hip, and the DJ downstairs were the fun.

Buggernuts' energetic energy kept the crowd going until the lights went out at about 2:30 a.m. During the show, they performed classic rock songs from the '80s, '90s and beyond, including tunes like Tommy Tutone's "Jenny (867-5309)", Bryan Adams' "Summer of '69," New Found Glory's "Little Black Backpack," and the Violent Femmes' "Blister in the Sun." The band's energy was infectious, and the crowd was equally as hyped, dancing along with every track.

"Halfway Gone" and "Introduction To A Tragic Dream" were particularly impressive, showcasing the band's versatility and ability to keep the crowd engaged. Even the most seasoned of partygoers couldn't help but get up and dance along with the Buggernuts.

The band's chemistry was undeniable, with each member bringing their unique talents to the table. The lead singer's powerful vocals were complemented by the guitarists' skillful playing and the drummer's steady rhythm. The band's dynamic stage presence added to the overall experience, making it a party that no one could resist.

The Buggernuts set the stage for a night of non-stop fun and excitement. With their energetic performance and infectious music, they were able to bring the crowd together and create an atmosphere of joy and celebration.

The Buggernuts' return to the Winter Formal was a resounding success, leaving the audience feeling energized and ready to party. With their next performance already eagerly anticipated, the Buggernuts continue to be a force to be reckoned with in the music scene.

Bush Tells Saddam 'The Game Is Over'

By MIRIAM SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Thursday urged Congress to give the United States the authority it needs to act unilaterally if Iraq does not comply with its obligations to international inspectors. The president said that the U.S. would continue to work with allies to disarm Iraq, but that it would not back down from the task if it means force.

"For the sake of the world, for the sake of the peace and prosperity of the United States and all the free nations of the world, the United States government will not back down from this task," Bush said.

Bush's call for a swift and decisive action against Iraq was met with a chilly reception by many in Europe. British Prime Minister Tony Blair, who has been a vocal supporter of the United States in its efforts to disarm Iraq, said that the United States should be more patient and that the United Nations should be given more time to complete its inspections.

"I understand the pressure that the United States is under," Blair said. "But I also believe that the United Nations has the authority to complete its work, and I believe that the United States should be willing to work within that framework."

The United States has been trying to build an international coalition to support its efforts to disarm Iraq. But the French and Germans have been cautious, and some European leaders have said that they do not want to see a war with Iraq.

"I don't think that it's in the interests of the United States or the United Nations to go to war," said Jacques Chirac, the French president. "We need to find a way to resolve this crisis peacefully."

Bush, however, said that the United States would not back down from its efforts to disarm Iraq. He said that the United States had "all the evidence" that Iraq was hiding weapons of mass destruction and that the United States was "prepared to do whatever it takes to ensure that the international community is protected from these weapons."

Director of Media Relations, "it's a long standing policy of the college to keep personal matters confidential. The administration reserves personal matters very carefully and we follow procedures that are thorough and objective. We continue to strive to make decisions that are in the best interest of the college, its students, in faculty and its staff."

Meanwhile students in the Old Plat are still concerned about their privacy. In Hamilton's House council meeting it was suggested that the custodial staff wear “no suction” stickers to avoid future problems of over matriculating. The numbers game continues with great force.

Further, he said (at least for Tuesday) he is weighing his options. The plan, he said, is to return to Iraq. "I would like to do that, I think it will be interesting. To the contrary, he is skeptical. We will consult, but let there be no misunderstanding: If Saddam Hussein and his inability to comply with the terms set forth by UN resolutions did not recruit through traveling last year, this year they were on the move, this year they were on the road internationally and domestically. With the aforementioned mobilization of admissions, domestic applications have increased, especially in key states such as Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and California as well as the applicants of diversity. With the increase in applicants, Connecticut College is on an upward spurt towards income for applicants with donor back..." Everyone asking what your plans are for after graduation? It could be worse, you could have loans," he said optimistically. Luckily, power was restored to the dorms sometime after 10:00PM, and residents were able to return. Playing Hard Not Enough for Men's Basketball Team

In Steve Brown/Staff

Everything has heard the old sports adage, "The hard way, play the way, or you lose." But for the Collegiate Conference, the hard way is not enough. A look at the weekly record of the men's basketball team will show the case. Playing your heart out mat not be what it used to be. These boys evidently know that since, sweat, and even tears though they clearly would never admit it, are not the same thing after a game, and yet they haven't even really touched of the fruits of their labor. They have a lose record of 6-11, 0-5 in NESCAC play.

The guys have had these past three weeks. A chance to see that hard work pays off! They certainly thought so, and started off the week with a 3-point victory over Tufts Wednesday night at John Jay College. So after all this talk about playing the hard and winning, they proved that this talk wasn't cheap when they victimized the bubble-net attacking visiting squad 87-62. The Camels went on John Jay and pulled out a 24-22 by halftime. For Tuesday 02 came off the bench with some hot hands in the final minutes, right after a John Jay timeout. He knocked down three triples. Conn dominated much of the game by by Kevin Harrington '02 and his sharp 19 points and 11 rebounds. Travis Red '99 threw down with 13 points and 10 rebounds, good for a solid double-double. Danny Ezell '02 knocked in a few, too. Tim Grimes '02 chipped in with 12. The John Jay Bloodhounds, would be so sad for the Georgians, that they would have to watch the game, but they couldn't do it. They had no choice but to stay back in the game, and only tried with triple 2:20 to go in the game. Red Grimes proved they were not going to lose this game, controlling the ball and hitting four free throws with an assist of confidence. Some sort of this kind confidence in the final moments of the game is something that would stick with Conn in the future. When Harrington almost ripped off the one with a crowding, hitting the Geo's with a hook. To the future winning streak, the Camels took on the UMass Dartmouth Corsairs Thursday at home. Mike Red Grimes '02 proved in a career-high 19 point game.

The Atlantic athletes know that they are not involved in some game as many other NESCAC schools, they are hopeful about the development of the Con program, especially now with Benenn in the Sophomore's seat. Moreover, they are positive about concluding their reorganization season with personal best times and beaching competition in the upcoming championship meets. Speaking of the team and their dedication and hard work, Benenn himself sums up the season right when he merely says, "Nobody does what we do."

On the Contrary

Before I get down to it, I need to comment on a mistake in the sports section of last week's edition of the College Voice. First of all, somewhere throughout the course of our column, I decided to interchange the terms "anniversary" and "birthday." My goal was to discuss my first year as a columnist, and by accidentally referring to it as a birthday, I have confused a few readers, and have had to fight some criticism throughout the week. I guess this means that being a student newspaper editor doesn't allow me to interchange terms that really do not have similar meanings.

Now, let's talk business.

On this edition of the Voice, sports other than football made an appearance.
