A Forum of Opinion from On and Off the Campus

The opinions expressed in this column do not necessarily reflect those of the editors.

Dear Editor:

After discussing many people concerning the proposed deferment of chapel, I have found that it would be useless to present the motion in the council and express the stand taken by many students at a too late decision. I will outline two points that Mr. Wiles gave on Thursday, February 28, and will give some additional points raised in further discussions with him. Copies of his speech will soon be available to those interested.

Mr. Wiles expressed his disappointment at not having been able to force the people and the administration to realize that the present chapel system is nothing more than a waste of time and studying. The future of the college is totally dependent on the present system of limited compulsory participation. Mr. Wiles said that the best we can do is to go on with the present system and the people who do not participate will just have to do without it. He also said that the present chapel system is not the only one where the administration and students do not agree.

The present system of limited compulsory participation is an experiment in the academic sphere, and it is the responsibility of the students to make it work. The administration and students should work together to improve the chapel system. Mr. Wiles gave a stirring plea for the administration to allow the student body to vote for or against compulsory chapel. He also said that the chapel system is a very important part of the college experience and that it should not be removed without the student body's consent.

Mr. Wiles also gave a speech on the meaning of religion and the importance of having a religious experience. He said that religion is a part of our lives and that we should not be afraid to speak about it. He also said that the chapel system is a very important part of our lives and that it should not be removed without the student body's consent.

Dear Editor:

I am one of many students opining for the present system of compulsory chapel. My reasons are the following:

1. The realm of religion is of the utmost importance. It is a personal and religious experience.

2. Various faiths are opposed by the compulsory system. By refusing to participate in the compulsory chapel system. Such a refusal is the result of an understandable preevent Protestant choice of students. Such a refusal is the result of an understandable preevent Protestant choice of students.

It is designed to provide an understanding of the meaning of religion and to encourage the development of faith. Migration Impact
Theme of Lecture
By Louise Holborn

On Thursday, February 28, in the Faculty Lounge, the International Relations and Cooperation sponsored a talk by Miss Louise Holborn, chairman of the Government Department, titled "The Impact of European Migrations on the Free World." Miss Holborn began by reminding the audience of the crucial importance of the immigration problem for the United States and all the Western nations. She then stressed the difference between the reasons for mass migrations of previous eras which were economically and demographically motivated and the one which has taken place since World War II which has been politically motivated.

She continued, the problems facing the receiving countries grew larger and more complex, and more refugees were evolved to deal with them in 1946. An organization called the International Refugee Organization (IRO) was set up to do this, and in 1951, IRO was disbanded and ICEM (International Committee for the Economic and Social Integration of Migrants) was formed. ICEM not only absorbed the IRO but also expanded its work of the ICCEM in the Huns and helped the nations of the United Nations and composed of 18 member nations and many groups who are willing to supply money and labor toward aiding in the relocation and retraining of refugees.

As time went on, the need for training increased, and the ICCEM was later enlarged and the member nations disbanded IROC and formed in 1951, ICEM, a new international organization for the study of the economic and social integration of migrants. The only qualification a girl had to get consideration for the technical work was being willing, that is, willing to help crippled children. The only qualification a girl need have is a current senior life saving certificate. The hours are short, the work rewarding, and the program will not last very long a period of time. Any interested in helping is asked to contact Gay, either in Jane Addams Hall or through campus mail.

A SUMMER OF DANCE

In conjunction with the article appearing elsewhere in this issue concerning the Connecticut College Daily, a reporter interviewed Vicki Golz ’60 who attended the session here last summer.

An art major from Smoke Rise, New Jersey, Vicki was awarded a full Dance Scholarship last spring. She explained that the scholarship is made available each year through benefit performances such as the campus movie, or through donations by interested persons. The only qualifications for scholarship application are membership in Dance Group.

Classrooms on the third floor of Fanning, the dining room and living room in Knowlton, the WML gym, and the college gym were turned into temporary dance studios. Grace Smith and East were used as dormitories for the female students. Winthrop for the men, North Cottage for the dance educators, and Knowlton for the orchestra. In all there were approximately one hundred eighty people on campus for the summer.

In describing the average schedule, Vicki said that most of each day was spent in classes. Evenings were devoted to practicing combinations for the next day. On Monday evening, there were panel discussions, talks, or performances by visiting troopers.

Thursday through Sunday of the final week were given to performances by the visiting instructors.

In summing up her experience, Vicki said that, most of all, she wanted to express her thanks to all those who add in the acreage of the Dance Scholarship a full Dance Scholarship last summer.

A Student Considers U S Alternatives

In Berlin Crisis

Ed. Note: Turning aside from campus activities, a glance at international affairs reveals that the United States is standing on the threshold of a possible nuclear showdown from the present situation in Berlin. This capital city of Germany is located far within the borders of East Germany, but the Western hope of eventual reunification of Germany, and at the same time an obstacle to further Communist expansion. The West has rejected Khrushchev’s proposal that Berlin be divided into a demilitarized free city because this would equal dealing with the East Germans whom the United States, for one, does not recognize.

May 27 looms as an important date for all of us. Barring unpredictable developments, the United States will be forced to make a final decision of whether or not to fight for Berlin. Personally, N. S. Kruschev said last November 27th that he would decide in the next six months to decide on accepting the Russian proposal to the East German regime. His proposal has been interpreted as part of a plan to force the West out of Berlin. Kruschev has declared that on May 27th he will turn Russia’s occupation obligations in Berlin over to the Eastern regime. He has intimated that the East Germans will give way to the Western sector of Berlin thereby cutting off supplies and commu-

The United States has numerous choices open to them. We can say dramatically that “we won’t give an inch” and hope that Khrushchev was bluffing in the first place. However, Kruschev has taken a definite stand and Eisenhower has done the same; it seems unlikely that either can back down now without losing face. We all assume that Khrushchev doesn’t want a war but perhaps he has gone so far this time that he can’t back down. Eisen-
