Mr. Wilbur has published several books of verse, including The Beasts of the Modern World, The Bedbug, and The Beauty of the Neighbors. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Mr. Wilbur's reading will be held February 28, 27, and 26. This week-end will be a highlight of the activities planned in the Office of the Alumnae Association. The Office will be open during the week-end, with representatives available to provide information on all campus activities.

TRAVELING LINES ON IVY VINES

Thursday, February 25, 1960

A six-college student government conference at Carleton College has unanimously agreed that student governments have the right to extend their powers and responsibilities beyond the area of student regulations. Participating in the conference were delegates from Reed, Swarthmore, Carleton, and Pomona colleges, who acknowledged the necessity of cooperation and coordination within the framework of their respective governing bodies but pointed out the importance of inter-collegiate activities into political and social issues, college administration policy, and as a means of enforcing regulations.

The delegations referred to the building programs established by administrations in which students would be able to command an influence in the decision of the construction of student-occupied and student-controlled buildings.

Concerning admissions, the delegations agreed that their interests could and should be extended to the policies involved in choosing the students who would attend the colleges, not the selection of the colleges.

The most unanimous consent of the participating colleges was to do something to get faculty, students, and administrators to get together, perhaps weekly, for just conversation.

Apparently these are more than a monthly conference, as each college utilizes its potential on their quadrangular Variety Shows. They would like to thank you for your support. Only your actions on campuses or in Congress would build momentum on the campus are participation in political and social activities.

Traveling Lines is designed to bring the European scene into terms that would be accessible to undergraduate students, and administration to-wards that students would be able to participate in the tour. As a result of the tour being designed to be a thorough and live with the student, it is expected that there would only receive an audit-credit for the course.

The problem of "smallness" in a small college was commented upon in the convocation opening with Mr. David R. Meier, President of Carleton College. The essence of the question appeared to be just what the proper size of a small college should be. It was realized that a contribution to any small college would affect the quality of the institution. While smallness is usually defined as a characteristic of a small college, it is generally related to such concepts as class size, student-faculty ratio, or curriculum of small college. As smallness is a subjective concept, it is difficult to put a numerical value on it. The most significant aspect of smallness is the quality of the institution.

While the question of smallness was discussed in the opening convocation, the tour continued with a visit to the University of Wisconsin-Madison, where the tour leaders were introduced to the student body. The tour leaders were also introduced to the European scene into terms that would be accessible to undergraduate students, and administration to-wards that students would be able to participate in the tour. As a result of the tour being designed to be a thorough and live with the student, it is expected that there would only receive an audit-credit for the course.
I shall confine the application of the question to greenness and death in the present moment of human learning, and, since I am inclined to view it as a representative of those who study and teach in the arts, I wish to understand the relevance of the question to the people who are learning, or may be, the one college and the other. That which is given present in man's existence and the one certain endowment which by the possession of a certain unknown future. Learning is not dependent on human learning, nor is it the care who can have for it. It will enlist in connection with evaluative only not art and human existence. The concept of the point in history when we give corporately only one able endowment. The same may be true of the learning. Seriousness is not the desire of what we know. The non-serious are the not. It is, I think, shared is not. We find a new complex of ev something of the senses. In fact, I think that much of the have persevered in a supreme arts of teaching and scholarship is both disputable and disgraceful and, I think, very radically since an earlier American tradition in its social crisis and on the map of the new

Free Speech ( Signed from Page Two )

Dear Editor:

I think that it is deceiving to believe that the election speaker's words do not impress people, mainly in the way they are delivered and the acquaintance effects that they embody, or that they do not swing the election. Rather than believe ourselves, shouldn't we capitalize on the fact that they are spoken to the candidates which arise from these speeches and not have elections on the day following the Election Speech. Amalgam, but neither allow at least a one week period for the student body to discuss the candidates' platforms as they presented them at Amalgam. In short, the content of the speeches may be taken more into consideration if we, the student body, have an opportunity to hear them elaborated before we have to vote.

Gay Nathan '61

P.S. Why is it that there is a rule (and a good one) that the entire campus must cast a ballot and at the same time, there is no note on the ballots to the effect that all offices must be voted for or the whole ballot will be disregarded? This seems quite incongruous. For one thing, the privilege of voting for large numbers of offices is an inviolable one and should not be infringed on the ballot. Then too, why require all votes to be marked in an indelible ink in the ballot containing, say, six votes and one president, to lose more than we gain by this?

Dear Editor:

It is not my intention in this article to disagree the system of See "Free Speech"—Page 6

Two Tschaikowsky Pieces

The first number following the Intermezzo was the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto in D Major; Van Ciborw won the First Prize, Klimow took the Second. In the same competition in which Van Ciborw won the First Prize, Primow took the First Violin Prize. His playing was characterized by a clear tone, masterful double-stopping, and sensitive phrasing; he showed an excellent sense of style by avoiding the sentimentality which is too frequent in this piece. Especially noteworthy was his interpretation of the cadenzas in the first movement, in which he gave new and important meaning to the themes.

Cultural Exchange by Moscow Symphony

The Moscow State Symphony Orchestra was presented to our people face to face: they like America. Mrs. Einstein herself teaches piano and theory, and one who almost became a concert pianist, although said that Madison Square Garden is not an ideal spot for a concert. The quality of the music suffered immeasurably from the poor acoustics of the place. His playing was characterized by a clear tone, masterful double-stopping, and sensitive phrasing; he showed an excellent sense of style by avoiding the sentimentality which is too frequent in this piece. Especially noteworthy was his interpretation of the cadenzas in the first movement, in which he gave new and important meaning to the themes.

Patriotic Overture

The last selection was the patriotic "1812 Overture" by Tchaikowsky. It used Reinhold Greaver's revised version which calls for an extra brass band. The performance was with a richness and devotion of which only a Russian and his own country can understand and music more thoroughly than any outsider. The ending of the piece was overwhelmingly impressive. In spite of the fact that the brasses drowned out the organ, the resulting sound was able to make its impact through sensuous appeal. The audience refused to let the players leave until they had repeated the last part of the overture.

History of Orchestra

The Moscow State Symphony is a relative newcomer, having been founded in 1930 in connection with the Moscow Conservatory. Since its formation the orchestra has given about 2,500 performances in the Soviet Union. It arrived in New York for Its first appearances here on October 31, after making several appearances in the Regent Hall, the musicians traveled to another cities on the east coast, in the middle west, and in Canada. Before returning to Russia, they will fly to the west coast to play in California.

Cultural Exchange Program

The Symphony's visit was made possible by the special Cultural Exchange Program between the United States and the Soviet Union. Other Soviet attractions which have been presented to our people include the Bolshoi Ballet, the Molotov Dance Company, the American Folk Ballet, the Moscow Festival of Music and Dance. Though three American orchestras (the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Boston Symphony, and the New York Philharmonic) have already visited Russia, Moscow Symphony is the first Soviet orchestra to come to the United States.

Insight Gained

By chance, some of the Con- centrated attention was on the concert were able to gain a deeper insight into the effect of the symphony on the American relations. Our first op- portunity came on the opening night in the Bilmore after the concert. We talked to an older woman who identified herself as Mrs. Ein- stein. She was somewhat friendly, she has now decided to return to Russia for a home--visit for a year in the future.

Personal Interviews

On the train coming back to New London, we were lucky to have the violinist and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Einstein, who also have already visited Russia, the public had almost no contact with the American people. Mrs. Einstein herself teaches piano and theory, and one who almost became a concert pianist. She told us that the Symphony was friendly, she has now decided to return to Russia for a home--visit. She plans to go over for a visit in the near future.

BRIDGE BANTER

Although bridge seems to be the most popular indoor sport in this campus, very few of us have the time and the money to carry on a serious study of the game. Hence this is the case, our tendency has been to develop our own methods of playing and bidding. A knowledge of the proper rules of bidding, however, will enable us to play the game more intelligently.

Awarding scholarships at ConnCen. Rather it is my intention to point up some of the deficiencies of the current system which have not been remarked upon before. I realize that an academic criterion is necessary for the preliminary judging of those applying for scholarships. Assuming that the student has met the necessary standard, the major concern of the form is the current and imminent income of the family. The form, therefore, overlooks some factors which should be considered in the case of need. For example:

1. A current family indebtedness
2. Current medical expenses
3. Current family support

Wellesley College Host to Students
In Sports Events

Wellesley College is sponsoring an athletic event this Saturday, February 27, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Four varsity girls from Connecticut College will leave Saturday morning to participate in the activities.

Included in the group of basketball players are Nancy Schoeberl '63, Nancy DiMatteo '63, Betty Anderson '63, Bonnie Campbell '63, Sue Kellogg '63, Jo Levitt '63, Paula Parker '61, and Linda Osborne '63. Jo Levitt will act as captain of the team, which will use green gym suits for its uniform. The swimming teamwill consist of Cynthia Hahn '63, Ann Noville '63, Pam Work '63, Jane Levy '63, Louise Rosenthal '62, and Linda Marem '63. On the badminton courts Conn will be represented by Sandy Living '63 and Frankie Gillmore '63. Miss Gorton, Miss Conklin, and Miss Ferrine will accompany the players.

The event will be run in much the same manner as the Athletic Association Playday held here two weeks ago, and will include many of the same colleges and universities from the surrounding area. The object of these playdays is to enjoy the athletic activities, get acquainted with sports enthusiasts from other colleges, and to improve abilities. The students play to win, but also, and more important, to have fun.

During the same week end two of the previously mentioned girls, Frankie Gillmore and Sandy Levit-ning, will participate in the Intercollegiate Badminton Tournament. This event is an annual ad-fair, held this year at Babson Insti-ute for Business Administration near Wellesley. The competition begins Friday and continues through Sunday, where by competitive elimination, the win-ers will be determined. Frankie will play both singles and mixed matches. Sandy will also compeate in singles, and will join a college girl from Boston for doubles matches. Because of the proximity of the two colleges, Frankie and Sandy will be able to include both events in their schedules.
