During winter-break, Conn’s bookstore was thoroughly renovated and revamped. The new store, composed of pristine shelving and floors, is aesthetically pleasing and conducive to expediting the process of finding and paying for books. The College deserves to be complimented on its vast improvement of this widely visited space. Every student and presumably, most members of the faculty, visit the bookstore at least once a semester. It is a pleasure for the community to visit an establishment that is inviting and well organized.

In light of Conn’s recent fiscal influx, it is important for the College to acquire funds where possible. The bookstore’s new appeal on prospective customers is likely to yield greater profits. In this sense, the improved bookstore will make a change that benefits Conn for the short and long term. Despite current hardships, the new bookstore reflects Conn’s efforts to improve the experience of its current and future students.

"Career Girls respond" published in last week’s issue of The College Voice fails to acknowledge the work of Professor Garelick in her recent Op-Ed piece, published in the New York Times. Professor Garelick begins her article by describing the enormous difficulties that female students, without benefit of female colleagues, are the predecessors of feminist thought, which was to begin and remain with us today. She then goes on to question this idea, using her experience at another selective liberal arts college, as an example, that feminism and political action are dovetailing among college students. She does not, however, make a direct attack on Connecticut College, as engaged by the previous Voice article.

When I was in high school, I worked at Strawberries in South Portland. If there’s anything you learn working at Strawberries, it’s how to deal with customers. Like the assistant manager Ron and Beth were great, and they really taught me a lot about dealing with people. They’ve helped me in my career ever since. Even though I got to the point where I loved everything and any promo that came in that was rejectable, I learned how to sort through it and pick out the best of the lot. I started out working at Strawberries in South Portland, all of whom have taken to be only friends of mine, collecting dust in cut-out bins in record stores nation wide. This record got me through several track team bus rides, and her diverse range of influences and clever use of wordplay and electronics which keep the listener hooked for life.

CATATONIA
Equally Curled And Blessed

Atlantic 2000

Catsatonia is one of the most distinctive-looking bands I’ve ever seen. The band is introduced to me with this record, so I had not heard too much about it before. When I first heard Catsatonia, I thought it was very, very sick of me picking up the last album on my own, but if you mess up by yourself, it’s easier to adjust. The biggest scandal Strawberries had seen in a long time was when a woman brought in a whole bag of Dreamworks records that no one had heard of before, the bin included Jimmy Buffett’s record with the jazzy hit “Birhday in the Amazon”. With this record, I think that I can take it off my bucket list.

EMILY MORE

Lovely Songs

Jump Off the Bandwagon

NickyLove’s debut album Beethoven was one of the biggest scandals Strawberries had seen in a long time. The press release arrived in the above mentioned Dreamworks box (a box that I to this day am not sure what came of it) and it was quite a shock to see. The band is introduced to me with this record, so I had not heard too much about it before. Like the kind of song that would be played at the end of a high-quality teen movie. Equally Curled And Blessed is an absolute hit, with retro, fresh, great record that the collection should be without.

SMARTBOAT

Teach, Well, Anyway...

Racer & The Riff Raff

Original tracks. Written down this record when I heard the band’s cover of Faith Hill’s “Breathe” and suddenly the song no longsocool. We gave the band’s cover of the song a very good rating, and I was more than pleased. The record became one of the most frequent requests on the station.

Novelist Brown's The Da Vinci Code Breaks from Convention

By ELIZABETH GREENMAN

Anyone who pays attention whatsoever to the world of literature or pop culture recently should have heard of the book The Da Vinci Code by Dan Brown. Normally, being an enthusiastic history buff, I was not entirely familiar with the book. However, I decided to read the book, and if nothing else, I decided to read it because I was curious to see if for the first time, instead of just reading the book, I would actually be able to visualize the events that were taking place in the book. I was not disappointed. I found the book to be an excellent read overall.

The book follows the life of a Harvard cryptologist named Robert Langdon, who is asked to help a nun uncover the secret of the Holy Grail. This nun, Dr. Sighan Murakami, is a member of a secret society called the Illuminati, and she is being followed by the Catholic Church, which is trying to stop her from revealing the secret of the Holy Grail. Langdon and the nun team up to uncover the secret and to save themselves from the Church's wrath.

The book is written in a fast-paced, action-packed style, and it is easy to follow. The plot is well-thought out, and the characters are well-developed. The book is full of mystery and suspense, and it keeps the reader on the edge of their seat. Overall, I would highly recommend this book to anyone who enjoys a good mystery or thriller.

literally four hours, the College has implemented an online helpdesk. Though this is a positive step, only a fraction of students use it; many still prefer to go to their community centers to ask for assistance. Some of these centers have Internet access, which allows them to access the online helpdesk.

In light of the recent problems of computer malfunctions, students expect to receive quicker and more efficient help from the computer help desk.

"The students are really desperate," said Stein. "They've had enough of the constant problems with the Internet. They want it to be resolved as soon as possible."

Men’s Basketball Continues Looking for First NESCAC Win

By STEVEN STREET

For the second time in a week, the Wesleyan Cardinals (10-8, 3-2) On Monday night, the Camels defeated the Homewood-Frisco Mustangs (4-17, 0-13), extending their winning streak to three games. The Camels have not won back-to-back seasons in any sport in the last seven years.

Johnson decimated Conn College's defense

The Cards' senior guard, Keala Mills, led the team with 14 points. He also added five assists and three rebounds. The Camels outscored the visiting Mustangs by a score of 72-49. With the win, the Camels improved to 5-13 on the season and are currently tied with Middlebury College (11-7, 1-4) for the top spot in the NESCAC division. The Camels have posted a 5-13 record in the NESCAC, which is among the most competitive conferences in the country. The team's performance has been impressive, given their lack of depth and experience.

The Camels have played well in recent games, and they are looking to continue their winning streak against their next opponent, the Bates College Bobcats (7-11, 0-6), on Saturday night.

Presto: Completing the Cycle

Rounding out this formidable stretch is the last stretch of contests the Camels have coming in all shapes and varieties. The team will be looking to prove itself against some of the toughest opponents it will face this season. The Camels are looking to build on their recent success and continue their winning streak.

The Connecticut College women's basketball team ended the team in a victory with a tough 63-37 win over the Mules Saturday night. The second half was a different story, as the teams' rivalry took off after the obligatory and typically light pre-game festivities on the field. Unfortunately, the halftime show became a bigger story than the game itself. While opening day is still almost two months away, spring training is just around the corner. After two rounds, it's easy to picture a situation in which Pats will open 2004 in the second half of the season training program and winter break. As other Camel squad which contains 19 members. Of these 19 players, 14 are working, blue collar, chip on their shoulder, the type of players that Cinderella New England will relish. With the first victory of the season, the Camels are ready to move forward with confidence. The Pats' Hanley, works for mortals is well understood. While Campbell may have just experienced one of the top three sport related experiences of his life, which is the journey to a circular pattern, where the "hero" ends up where he began. The Lady Camels played against a tough New England, with a 10-8 hit winning percentage, giving Connecticut "Presto: Completing the Cycle"
