“WASHINGTON AND GANDHI” SUBJECT OF MEMORIAL CHAPEL

“Washington and Gandhi” was the subject of Doctor Lawrence’s talk at Chapel Thursday morning. He expressed the belief that the commemorative laudation of national heroes in pairs, except from a different country, stimulates a patriotism which is less provocative and more wholesome than usual. He proceeded to point out many similarities and dissimilarities between the two heroes-Washington and Gandhi.

It is clear that they lived in strikingly different times and had many different ideas. Washington was one of the wealthiest men in his country and managed his affairs in such a way as to increase his fortune. Gandhi, however, practices extreme poverty. Their methods of warfare are necessarily very different. England is stronger now than it was in the eighteenth century. The clashing coat was not very important; whereas today India is of great economic value to England. Washington believed in war as an instrument of national power. Gandhi believes in the power of persuasion as a substitute for war.

The fundamental grievances lying behind both revolts are similar. There was and is a general dissatisfaction between the colony and the mother country. The Americans were first with their demands during the last war. The Indians didn’t start to rebel until the resentment of imperial control had long been concreted. Washington and his followers revolted against the domination of a people like themselves. Gandhi is trying to escape the control of a people of widely different nationalities, customs and religion.

The whole world looks on at the present situation but offers no help. It seems that the Indian independence will have to be won by them, alone. The British are counting on sixty million Moslems in India to help their cause. The support of world opinion seems to be divided. Most conservatives are on the side of the English. Some think it unfair that Great Britain should lose all her influence in such a large and important part of her empire.

The now familiar and beloved college tradition of giving a yearly performance of Gilbert and Sullivan was followed by the Glee Club last week during their Saturday evening performances of The Pirates of Penzance. The performance was a very successful one in spite of the unavoidable difficulties which always occur when it is necessary for women to take men's parts. Although the dramatic changes! The seniors was, of course, more or less subordinated to the musical side, the Glee Club proved itself to be capable even in this respect.

Mr. Kellogg’s tireless energy and direction, together with Miss Oakes’ invaluable assistance in the dramatic interpretation made The Pirates the most colorful and appreciated event of the year, with the possible exception of Christmas Pageant.

H. W. Laidler, Speaker, Challenges Students

Says That They Must Realize, and Prepare To Help In Crisis

DISCUSSION FOLLOWS

Although there is any number of people who think that the “passionless pursuit of passionless intelligence,” said Harry W. Laidler, executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy, in his lecture on Monday, February 8th, in Fanning Hall, many wish to come in contact with the economic realities and social problems. The economic situation and equipment means which we are often place and security for all is present, but as long as the amassing of a fortune is the criterion of success, they cannot be used to their full advantage. As long as the workers receive insufficient wages, even in times of prosperity, to provide for the necessities of life, such cycles are the only way that their present downward trend marks a crisis, not a recession. The concentration of industry, even of entertainment and retail industry, has caused an increase in the number of persons who work for wages and not for profit. This has caused too great a cleavage between ownership and administration, and too definitely a tendency to destroy rugged individualism and to take a more collective approach to industry. This attitude can be overcome only by creating a public monopoly and control of production. We must make our workers realize the necessity of cooperation in order to attain a happier, more intelligent and more cooperative social order.

Mr. Laidler added a more definite program when answering questions after his lecture, the main theme of which was the creation of mass organization, both political and social, with fundamental change in all directions as the aim. He added that an amendment to the Constitution calling for unregulated insurance, old age pensions, minimum wage laws and other social aids, something like the Swedish and Soviet legislative by the states, would undoubtedly tend towards a better social order.

OUR PRIVILEGES—AND THEIR ABUSE

As mentioned in the last issue of the Neuz many new and liberal rules are going into effect at Mt. Holyoke this semester. The list includes the opinion of many of our own alumnae, is that the 1:30 rule weakens it. We can do it if we try, if we want to; we can do it if we have in us to do it, if we are not all lazy, or worse, indifferent.

We have had enough of criticism. We have had enough of people who condemn our freedom are wrong, very wrong. Let us show that we can be responsible grown-ups and that we can understand the liberal rules and regulations. Let those who have constructive ideas present them; let the rest of us demands that the 1:30 rule is a privilege, by acting accordingly, by making use of that ex-

Sometimes I don't know now (prezently, in other words) don't go telling me I spoilt the eighteenth word of the first sentence wrong, for if you don't believe me just look it up in the good old Webster dic. I'm right and you're wrong, so must I think you get what I mean. Anyhow as I was dictating before you so kindly interrupted me, it was near rice (pardon me for the back- these days, I'm so bashful) of you to write to, no I mean twelve two—oh, heck, what I mean to say is that it was fine of you to write twice to me, because I was not supposed to write letters, being indisposed because I am disposed to having the flu this year, and being real weak was put in the house for inferm people, yes the inferm, healthy, did you guess it? I have been away from the Alma Mater for so long that I have felt quite out of the running having written so long ago. I know that I felt more than the swim, with the weather what it was at the beginning of the week, have been pondering the matter—rain and wetness and slush at C. C. I mean—and just a short while ago I had the most brilliant idea, a sort of a brain storm, as it were, and maybe it will be an invention. Why not use skis like boats, to ride over the frozen 1:30? We could invent a new sport of water-skiing, like water polo only kind of a thing. How about it? It would be a splash big success, I think.

Have you had the jig-saw puzzle craze too? It keeps me awake at night, or maybe you haven't heard about it, you're so bashful of you, so bashful)

CRITICISM AND REVIEW

Girls in Uniform, by Christa Winsor, adapted by Barbara Burnham Little Brown and Company.

This play of three acts adapted from the German play Gemtern und Heute, is very interesting and unusual. The story itself is a simple yet pathetic one of the institutional life in a girls' school in Germany, where each individual student is subjugated to the stern, unbending military discipline of a school founded under Royal patronage. It is a vivid and strikingly alive picture of the results of non-coeducational training, of the harsh educational system which completely disregards the adolescent's need for sympathy, love and understanding. The central figure, Manuela, the motherless daughter of a soldier, expresses this need for love and understanding in a devotion to, and adoration for, one of her teachers. Following her triumph in a dramatic presentation of the school, Manuela in an unguarded moment of relaxation and celebration, betrays this love and devotion unwisely, and is detected in her serious offense by the head mistress. The punishment meted out with entire disregard of the feelings and reactions of the girl brings tragic results.

This play is intensely dramatic and passionate. Its force and power lies in its utter simplicity and brevity. It develops rapidly, but without detriment to its dramatic effect, or its characterization, and moves quickly to its elgant conclusion. A true picture of prevailing conditions in some of the schools of Germany, it gains an added hold on the mind and imagination of the reader in contrast to the educational system with which the reader is acquainted. For those interested in psychology it is a clear and living picture of the reactions of youth to discipline and rigorous restraint. For those interested in education it is a fine and true example of a type of educational procedure existent in some countries. It is interesting as well for the student and reader of drama because of its excellent construction and dramatic technique. It is a moving story with very good and true characterization of representative people.

This play is one to be recommended to the public in general, and to present-day students in particular.

Not only should this play be read for its own merit, but for another equally good reason as well. At present there is being presented in many of the moving picture theatres the film Mädchen in Uniform, which is also based on the German play Gemtern und Heute. This picture is a German picture, with German actors who speak in their native language. Although part of the dialogue is translated, the majority is not and the audience has to deduce the words from the action. To read the English version of the play in

Well, that's something about cigarettes I never knew before

If I never thought much about what's inside a Chesterfield cigarette. But I have just been reading something that made me think about it.

Just think of this, some of the tobacco in Chesterfield—tobacco comes from 4000 miles away! And before it is shipped every single leaf is packed by hand. All because Turkish tobacco is so small and delicate.

Of course I don't know much about making cigarettes, but I do know this—that Chesterfields are milder and have a very pleasing aroma and taste. They satisfy—and that's what counts with me!

Alumnae "reek-end was most disconcerting. More than one senior was welcomed back to the teas Friday and Saturday that many of them probably gained a few pounds. It was a mad scramble to see who could eat the most. The record to date is 20 sandwiches and 6 brownies. . .

The question is: "Is it more complimentary to be taken for an alumna or a freshman?" There's much to be said on both sides.

An absent minded person in Blackstone set out to take a bath and inadvertently hung up wash clothes and threw her pajamas in the bathtub.

A couple of ornithology students in their zeal to learn all about birds and their habits not only got stiff necks from peering into the trees but also nearly walked off the precipice. Dangerous business.

What the well dressed college girl will wear in the near future of her boudoir was illustrated in The Pirates of P ense. Most fetching but quite a radical change from the present pajama era.

The father of our Country may not be well beloved, but his birthday did interfere with the mail. How disappointing after the long absence.

The games were well attended and were particularly well represented in the bleachers. It was a mad scramble to see who could eat the most. The record to date is 20 sandwiches and 6 brownies. . .
