First Issue of CC Newspaper Devoted to Varied Interests

The first issue of our college newspaper came out December 19, 1919, the year that the first class was registered at Connecticut College. The College Herald. It was a four-page publication, with four sections. It consisted of one or two features and columns on the College activities, and news about the students and faculty. Although the form of the paper did not look much like the present form, the aims were much the same. In the first editorial, the editor and manager, Joseph H. Sterry, stated that, "As a true voice of Connecticut College, The Herald will ever fight for progress. It will aim to feel the pulse of the institution, and to be a means through which the hopes and fears of the college may find expression. In short, to be a true voice of college life." The paper was planned to record the weekly academic, social, and athletic happenings of the college. The editorial ended with a plea to all students to contribute to the paper.

Strange Articles
In reading this first issue, we notice many things which seem strange to us now. In an article written about the class of 1899, the Pioneer Class of the college, the first half consisted of the description of the news from the old French. The Vesper was a hockey game between the Black and White teams of the Athletic Association. At least in the advertisements, Starr Brothers was still selling the girls in the ads. "Let Us Lead You into Temptation with our Tempting Lunch Specials!"

Girls Always the Same
In the joke column, Wise or Otherwise about the students and faculty, we can see some of the spirit of the times. M. D. My dolly says Matron and Pujo.

Dear Editor,

This is to request that we have some real reporting about the students and the groupings of them, or their friends and colleagues. We are asking about the things that told us how the college was going to take up some more time, but isn't worth it to know your opinion.

Sincerely yours,

BONYE FISHER

Faculty, Students Discuss Intellect In CC Activities

The Opportunity for Intellectual Growth at Connecticut College was the topic discussed from many points of view at the Student Faculty Forum held in Windham Living Room on Tuesday, March 23.

Various topics were discussed in connection with the question: Is the dormitory a social or an intellectual center. Suggestions for mixing students of different dorms and classes were brought up. It was concluded that responsibility rests with the students as well as the faculty to make both lecture and discussion valuable in the classroom.

Professor Carr Lectures at Convocation; Topic Concerns Current Investigations

by Elaine Diamond

Robert R. Carr, professor of Government at Dartmouth College, was yesterday afternoon's Convocation speaker. His subject was an address entitled, "Recent Developments and Civil Liberties."

Professor Carr, a well-known author, in his bold presentation, is co-author of the text used in most year-long American government courses.

Combat Domestic Espionage

The weapons we have used to combat the domestic espionage problem are national laws, police force and counter-intelligence agencies.

Carr Quotes Lincoln

He began his talk with a quote from President Lincoln asked Congress on July 4, 1863. "Must a government, of necessity, be too strong for the people or too weak for the demands of national security?" This, he said, is certainly pertinent to our present problem of national security and individual liberties.

Our security is far beyond a single day. It requires every person in the country. It requires every student. It requires every member of the community to contribute to this concern for national security.

Congress Acts

Under the present and the last administration, the President has acted to meet the danger. He has not made the move too late. He has not made the move too late. It was required of us to act. Our forces are prepared. Our security is far beyond a single day. It requires every person in the country. It requires every student. It requires every member of the community to contribute to this concern for national security.

For facts to supervise administrative agencies of government and to educate the people. When called this important use the information. The Court's concern to investigations is the obligation of the private citizen to inform himself whether any person to the contrary as case was called up for investigation unless interest is in force, or not pertinent or be he convicted that his concern should tend to bring his mind the Fifth Amendment. The Supreme Court has upheld the right of two in instances; once in 1951 and again in 1953. The same 8-3 of the Court which had been investigating lobbying had not been authorized to investigate indirect such as "looping the Court" does uphold privacy and, in most cases, decide that the power is pertinent. Self-incrimination is used a great deal in the present time. It created which volatilizes it, is suspect- doubt, however, because it had even though he might be inno- cent.

How much national security has been safeguarded? How much has been gained? The McCarthy Internal Security Act was passed in 1950. It has provided for the registration of Communists and those organizations that have established a Subversive Activity Board which holds hearings and determines whether a person is a Communist. The act is very largely unenforced, and Professor Carr stated that there is little likelihood that it will prove to be effective in the future.

Cases Overstated

The Court's concern is that the issue is crucial. It is more important to in- form the people of the communists than to expose the prob- lem to the public. The Un-American Activities Committee and the House Un-American Activities Committee was established. This function of the government was begun in 1938. The House Un-American Activities Committee was established. In 1938, the Committee was established. The Committee is staffed by Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin, and the Supreme Court Committee, led by Senator Morse of Indiana. Both are Senate Sub-Committees. Individual Must Cooperate

The investigatory power of Congress is important in a search.

Retiring Faculty Member Graduated Abroad

by Jean Bahr

With the coming of June, Connecticut will lose its faculty member who holds the present title of longest service. When Miss Esther Cary retired at the end of this semester, it will be the end of her thirty-nine years of teaching French at school. Miss Cary was the first faculty member appointed to Connecticut in 1915.

Miss Cary’s life has been one of travel. She was born in Brooklyn, where she lived with her mother until she was thirteen. Her father was a doctor, and when she was quite young, and her mother, who was born in Elberfeld, Germany, died when she was ten years old. She spent the next ten years there before returning to the U.S. where, incidentally, she had firm ties since her father’s family was from old Yankee Plymouth Rock stock.

Educated in Europe

She received her education mainly in Europe, although she did attend Packer Institute in Brooklyn in her early childhood. She attended schools in Switzerland, France, and Germany, and in her free time traveled to every country in Europe. She received her Baccalaureate (B.A.) from the Sorbonne and her Ph.D. from the University of Berlin in Marburg, Germany. She was taught French from early childhood, and from experience recommends learning any language in early life.

She returned to the United States in 1912 and promptly began her teaching career. She came to Connecticut after teaching at Smith and Wheaton.

Miss Cary first came to Connecticut, there were only 100 students and twenty-three faculty members. She has worked with each President and seen the college grow from three buildings to its present size. She is probably one of its best historians.

Miss Cary says that after her retirement, she will fly and see something of the few countries she has never visited. Among the places she has seen are nearly all of Europe, of course, and most of South America. She would like to spend some time in Mexico, Luxembourg, and Portugal. A trip to Africa would please her, as would a glimpse of the ancient countries of the Far East.

Just two months ago, Miss Cary moved into a large white house on Ocean Avenue near Ocean Beach. Here she has room to enjoy her fascinating collections. She is remarkably well settled already and is discovering new delights in her show piece home every day. She has a fine collection of 18th and 19th century French furniture in addition to her 18th century Italian furniture. Any art major would be interested in her miniatures, her portraits, and her prints of members of the French aristocracy. She has several fine pieces of china and an extensive collection of Renaissance and post-Renaissance court silver. She also has a fine collection of reproductions of Holbein prints. As she put it, “It’s not clear we don’t seem to stop buying.” It’s a worthwhile trip to her house to see all these things and the many more, that send her home a quite European atmosphere.

Time for Other Interests

Miss Cary considers the Continent just as much her home as the United States and for this reason has made frequent return trips to the places in which she spent her girlhood. After retiring, she plans a few more trips there and also wants to relax and do all the things that teaching has left her no time for: reading, recovering, making a home for her son and his family. Connecticut will be glad to have her nearby where the interest she has shown for so many years can continue to mark the college’s progress.

How the stars got started

“I was a Hollywood stagehand. One day I stood 10 feet off a scaffold, I wasn’t hurt, but I decided acting was safer. I went to acting school, played bit parts...finally I hit pay dirt in ‘This Gun For Hire.’

I started smoking Camels because so many of my friends did. Once I started, I knew Camels were for me. For Mildness and Flavor, you can’t beat ‘em!

NY Teacher Offers
Tips for College
Success Stories

Following are 10 suggestions from Robert Tyron, of the Hunter College (New York’s) department of psychology and philosophy, on how to stay in college:

1. Bring the professor newspaper clippings dealing with his subject. Demonstrates feeling interest and gives him timely items to mention in class. If you can’t find clippings dealing with his subject, bring in any clippings at random. He thinks everything deals with his subject.

2. Look alert. Take notes eagerly. If you look at your watch, don’t stare at it unbelievingly and shake it.

3. Ask frequently and murmur, “How true?” To you this seems exaggerated, to him, quite objective.

4. Sit in front, near him. (Applies only if you intend to stay awake.) If you’re going to all the trouble of making a good impression, you might as well let him know who you are, especially in a large class.

5. Laugh at his jokes. You can tell if he looks up from his notes and smiles expectantly. He has told a joke.

6. Ask for outside reading. You don’t have to read it. Just ask.

7. If you must sleep, arrange to be called at the end of the hour. It creates an unfavorable impression if the rest of the class has left and you sit there alone, dozing.

8. Be sure the book you read during the lecture looks like a book from the course. If you do not read in psychology class and psychology in math class, match books for color and color.
9. Ask any questions you think he can answer. Conversely, avoid announcing that you have found the answer to a question he can answer, and in your brother's second grade reader at the time.
10. Call attention to his writing. Produce an exquisitely pleasant experience connected with you. If you know he's written a book or an article, ask in class and do it.
As to whether or not you want to do some work in addition to all this, well it's controversial and up to the individual.

Author Honored as Eminent Victorian

Antennas* and birthdays have a happy, and Interesting way of calling for re-evaluation of the past—artists, writers, scientists.

Biography of Realist

Currently the 125th Anniversary of the birth of one of England’s eminent Victorians—George Glissing—is being celebrated in a number of ways. Harvard University Press is publishing, on March 30, Mabel Collins Donnelly’s admirable critical biography of the realist who was during his lifetime “ahead of his contemporaries” and unappreciated by most readers, and, curiously enough, even since has seemed “old fashioned” in the way Diana.

Certainly one of the last century’s leading realists, here is what Glissing had to say about his fellow writers: “English novels fail to do justice to life; they should damage their popularity and consequently their future.”

Wanderer

In a sense a victim of tragic circumstances, in another sense a self-made martyr, for Glissing had to struggle against the central problem—as it often is for the earnest, rational being in time of war. He was a member of the military, and the soldier’s sacrifices, the fight for the Constitution. After...their engagement at the ‘Elbow Beach Surf Club, they took off at the beginning of the season.

Wanderer

Theién, and Miss Elizabeth Loeb, who played for Zsa Zsa Gabor’s party at the Carlisle Hotel, will join them on their voyage at the beginning of the season.

No one is to check up on the students.‘Daze,” has no strings attached. Students were asked, but not required to be off for vacation before the holiday, and then to return whenever they liked just so long as it wasn’t school or club work.

College Library reported students fell heavily toward fiction.

and since the twenties, graduate work has increased not only in these fields, but in business administration, economics, industrial relations, government, social and personnel work as well, indicative of "new employment opportunities for women and an increase in specialization," Mrs. Bell explained. Hygiene and Physical Education, formerly important fields of graduate study, have rapidly declined in favor. Higher Science Degrees

Since the establishment of majors in 1928, the proportion of those who have reported holding higher degrees is greatest for the majors in Astronomy, Biblical History, Botany, Chemistry, French, German, Latin, Mathematics, Physics, Sociology and Zoology.

An analysis of the questionnaire disclosed a change in employment opportunities for the eighty-nine per cent of the Wellesley graduates who have been or are now employed. Teaching was the most important career for graduates between 1903 and 1913. Since then, more alumnae have chosen secretarial and stenographic fields. The questionnaires also indicated a feeling that scholarship aid is extremely important in a "college of this kind," and that three-fourths of the alumnae have not changed their political views since graduation. Almost one in five graduates employ full-time household help.
