Cameras Installed; Tape Captured On Shot

By THOMAS P. MECOY

Government Administration (SGA) strongly urged the security camera system on campus, showing live coverage on a monitor being watched by a College official. Therefore, the camera's owners are only reviewed after an act of vandalism or serious felony occurs.

The idea of having security cameras on campus has been discussed for years, and after campus vandalism costs tripled from last year, reaching an unprecedented high of $19,000. The SGA and a newly created task force on campus vandalism discussed various alternatives to addressing the issue of vandalism, including not only installing security cameras, but also displaying signs in Main Street East. Main Street was the focal point of the discussions since it has been the most affected by vandalism in recent years. In December the SGA voted 15 to 14 in favor of installing the cameras in Main Street East, and drew up a proposal for the project. David Millstone, Dean of Student Affairs, felt it was necessary for the student body to decide whether security cameras should be installed. He added that the administration was not committed to installing the cameras without feedback and support from the SGA.

"We had our collective opinion that because [vandalism] is internal — that was our suggestion — that the students to decide," Dean Millstone stated.

Ultimately, the proposal of the SGA was approved and Vice President for Admission, Ursula Howard, gave a final approval. David Millstone stated that he asked Millstone to look at the proposal and any legal concerns to "augment SGA's decisions." The suggestion was made that Dean Millstone noted, "infringement on students' privacy."

"We're crossing a line (with installing the cameras) that has been stressed before," Dean Millstone said.

Robert Spencer Presents Lecture on Jihad Threat

80 Students Attend Lecture By Noted Scholar and Director of JihadWatch.org

By CHRISTIAN CLANKSY

On the night of Tuesday, April 4, faculty, staff, and students all gathered in the 1941 room of the Crowne Plaza Hotel in New London to hear a talk by Robert Spencer, director of JihadWatch.org. According to the College, 80 students attended the event, with over 20 more in attendance. Spencer's talk centered around the controversial topic of "The Jihad Threat," which he defined as "the growing international Islamic terrorism that poses a serious threat to the security of America and other nations around the world."

The talk was sponsored by the Connecticut College Office of Community Health Services, which recently awarded the College's President the Connecticut Karl J. Krapek Health Award for 2007. The award is given to an individual who has made a significant contribution to health promotion and prevention. The College's President, Brian D. Elms, received the award at the Community Health Services' annual dinner in March.

Students Enjoy Improvements at Conn

Each year, the College allocates money for specific changes that the administration, alumni, and students decide will make life at Conn more enjoyable for everyone. Some years it has succeeded, and quite frankly, many years it hasn't. Some years the changes are not even felt by the student body. This year, however, the changes made by the administration, both big and small, have truly made the College a better place.

Policy Changes

While the class of '06 remembers the trauma and drama of waiting in line (although line is an overly complimentary way of describing the menace), '07 and '08 had the benefit of not knowing how long the wait would last. This year's lottery involved at most a fifteen or twenty minute wait for students who showed up on time. Not only that, but the residential life staff made it easier for students to move in groups and to apply for specialty housing. The stress of lottery may not be entirely gone, but it is certainly muted.

The new security cameras in Main Street have also already proven their worth. The cameras caught vandals being destructive in the Pies, taking the burden of repair costs off residents who are not at fault for dorm damages. Hopefully, as vandals are dealt with by J-board, the message will reach other destructive students that causing trouble in Main Street is definitely a mistake.

Look out for more positive changes in the months to come: renovations to the Old Plex, a more efficient Canvas schedule, and the extremely useful Self Service section of Canvesweb.

"you only need one mouthful to know which one is fishy" - Russian Proverb

In a piece titled "The Israel Lobby" published last month in the London Review of Books, various critics argue for and against the "Israel Lobby." It is interesting to note that of all these critics, the one who seems to have the most to say is not from a political, religious, or rabbinic persuasion. He is Hitler.

It’s almost as if the entire history of Israel is the result of one man’s unrelenting passion for power. At the same time, it’s also fascinating to see how the same man’s obsession with power has managed to shape the entire course of human history. From the rise of the Roman Empire to the fall of the Soviet Union, Hitler’s influence has been felt in virtually every significant event of the 20th century.

The "Israel Lobby" itself is a fascinating phenomenon, one that has managed to sway public opinion and shape policy decisions throughout the United States and around the world. Its influence is felt not only in foreign policy, but in areas such as human rights, the environment, and even the arts. The "Israel Lobby" has managed to create a situation where opinions are shaped by a small group of individuals, rather than by the broader public.

The "Israel Lobby" is not the only phenomenon that has managed to shape public opinion in recent years. The rise of social media has also had a significant impact on how information is shared and how people form their opinions. The "Israel Lobby," however, remains a unique phenomenon, one that continues to fascinate and perplex those who study it.
Capote: The Hot DVD About Cold Blood

BY ANDREA RODESHNI

The New York Times best-selling author Jayzzya's definitive timeline on the career of Robert Francis Capote, whose book and later film In Cold Blood proved to be a monumental success, has now been turned into a film of its own. This is a revered work of American literature that has been the subject of countless books, articles, and documentaries, but never before has it been brought to life on the screen. Capote, starring Oscar winner Philip Seymour Hoffman, captures the essence of the author's life and work. Hoffman's performance is mesmerizing, as he brings Capote's complex personality to life on screen.

Hoffman's portrayal of Capote is nuanced and compelling. He portrays the author as a man of many contradictions—a warm and empathetic friend, a dashing and charismatic figure, and a manipulative and calculating person. Hoffman's performance is a reminder of Capote's prodigious talent as a writer and a human being.

In Cold Blood is the story of the true crime that brought Capote to the forefront of the literary world. The book and film follow the investigation into the murder of two farmers in Kansas and the随后的 events. Capote's research and writing on the case are presented with a combination of facts and fiction, a hallmark of his work.

The film is directed by Bennett Miller, who also directed Capote's other work, Moneyball. Miller's direction is masterful, and he perfectly captures the mood and tone of the book. The film is a testament to the power of storytelling and the importance of understanding the artist who created it.

Capote is a film that will resonate with audiences for years to come. It is a powerful and moving tribute to one of the greatest American writers of our time. Hoffmann's performance is exceptional, and the film is a must-see for anyone interested in literature, history, or film.
Israel's Real Ambassadors: Idan Reichel Project

BY YONI FREEMAN

During spring break, I was invited to attend a popular Israeli group's concert down in Philadelphia (at the Shampoo). The group is called The Idan Reichel Project, named after its lead signer Idan Reichel. I had heard a song of theirs before, particularly their chart-topping hit "Can't" which has been playing on Israeli station antennas for some time now. The powers of the event originated as an outreach organization for Jewish students, an association of Israeli living in Philadelphia, and the Israeli Foreign Ministry. There were booths featuring Israeli programs you could go on, as well as food stands throughout the building.

I had met one of the group members before at Israel's Ben Gurion Airport when I was leaving to go back to the United States in the winter. I heard them talk and was in the airport, and I then saw one of the Ethiopian Jews and one of her assistants. I went up to her and asked if I could get an autograph. She said she was hungry and wanted to get some food, but afterwards she would get in touch with the band afterward so I could get in on the flight. Idan Reichel's performers are as diverse as Israel's population - Hebrew, Amharic, and Arabic are heard in many of their songs. There are seven members of the group: Idan Reichel on the piano, three other singers (two of whom are Ethiopian Jews and one who sings in Arabic), a percussionist, a drummer, and a guitar player. Idan Reichel writes most of the songs and is the obvious leader and founder of the group. The stage had a large projection screen nearby, which translated the three languages into English text.

The show was electrifying. The types of songs were as diverse as the racial and language makeup of the group, and you could really see that Israel represented many cultures and still remained strong as a nation. There wasn't just singing going on, but dancing as well. The soulful, energetic words of Ethiopian folk songs combined with the percussive sounds and ambiance fostered an amazing connection between the tunes of the past with those of the present.

The crowd was mainly filled with American, not Israeli, Jews. Perhaps one of the best songs that connected to the crowd was again the chart breaking "Rac" which had the entire audience singing along. It was great to see the connection forged between the Israeli Jews and the Americans.

Idan Reichel has only been in the spotlight the last two years, ever since his first current album was released. If you are interested in checking out some of Idan Reichel's songs go to his group's website (http://www.idanraichelproject.com/en/). There are two albums available, entitled "The Idan Reichel Project" and "Idan Reichel Project: Out of the Depths." Their last two shows of the tour will be April 8-9 at the Apollo Theater in New York City.

As an international student living in the United States, I do not intend to write about sports that are widely documented in Europe. European Football rivalries such as AC Milan and Inter Milan vs. Juventus, Lyon vs. AC Milan and Inter Milan vs. Barcelona should be defended, not at the expense of Villarreal. Villarreal, for the past two games, Arsenal has been the team’s success, as well as his own team’s success, will be looking towards the team’s success, as well as his own team’s success, will be looking towards the season.

Frankie, who is new to the program this year, has been described as a "golden boy" by some of the team’s coaches.

Given the results of this tournament, it is easy to see why. Despite having a 5-1 record in the Big Ten, the Cavaliers have been unable to win a single game this season.

The Big Ten record is 5-1 for the season.

If you ask me, the best team in the Big Ten is Ohio State. The Buckeyes have won eight of their nine games and have scored a combined 31 goals in their last three games.

For the past two games, Arsenal has been the team’s success, as well as his own team’s success, will be looking towards the season.

Despite several early defeats this season, the Conn women’s lacrosse team has shown huge promise, knocking on the door of a potentially successful season. Although the team stumbled against Wellesley and Colby last weekend, they showed an ability to come back during the second half and emerge victorious with a 17-7 win against the Visitors.

The Camels faltered early in the game, finding themselves down 8-5 heading into the intermission. However, they fought back and took control of the game and the lead just 34 seconds into the second half. Brendan Duddy delivered a blast inside the left post after three quarters. CC finished the day 3-for-4 in extra points, including two in the final score, to make it a 9-5 game. Brendan Duddy scored the game winner.

In the game against Trinity, the Camels scored a six goal offensive outburst. Craig Flanagan ‘08 for the first of his three goals and one assist for the winning side. Sean Duddy also stepped up in a big way, adding a goal and an assist.

Unfortunately, Trinity recovered and struck four more times before adding an insurance goal late in the half to walk away with a 13-10 victory.

Still, both teams showed great offensive talent in the game. Both Sullivan and Tullman played an offensive role for the visitors, while goalie Alan Werner ‘06 finished with six saves for Conn, helping Catholic College that Saturday.

The Mules made sure to stay away throughout the contest, emerging with a 17-7 victory at Hensel Field. After falling behind 7-1 in the first 12 minutes of play, the Camels were able to get their offense going as well, when Lindsey Coyne ‘06 scored a short-handed goal to narrow the deficit to five, 9-4, just before the break, however, Colby’s Alley Libby widened the lead to give the team a 2-0 advantage heading into halftime.

During the last 15 minutes of the third quarter, the Camels took control of the game and the lead, scoring 10 consecutive goals to build a 13-2 lead and put the game out of reach. The Camels never looked back, scoring 10 more goals in the final period to secure the victory.

The Camels showed that they can come back from tough games this spring, but the lack of score in the second half against (Conn) is concerning.

The Camels closed out the season with a win over the Connecticut College Blue Devils, and the team is now 8-4 for the season, including a 6-1 record in theIvy League.
