Gaudiani plans public forums

President to hold campus budget meetings to discuss restructuring and proposed cuts

by April Oudin
Associate News Editor

For the first time during her tenure at Connecticut College, Claire Gaudiani, president of the college, will hold two meetings open to the entire college campus to discuss upcoming restructuring of the college budget as part of the ongoing effort to prioritize programs and cut expenditures.

The information session will be followed by four forums with the Priorities, Planning, and Budget Committee.

Gaudiani said, "The open meetings will attempt to give a framework for understanding the process, the progress, and the future steps of growth through substitution." Growth through substitution is the policy by which Connecticut College is attempting to restructure its budget, restructuring under the development of certain departments, programs, and services, and the elimination of those less essential to the college. The meetings will last 45 minutes each, with half this time spent on a presentation and half on a question and answer period.

"I will give examples of the kinds of budget restructuring under discussion, and in small groups which will be meeting, people will discuss various specific examples of budget restructuring and give their advice," she said.

Said Gaudiani, "To my knowledge this type of open meeting (to discuss budget restructuring) is unprecedented at other colleges. But it is also part of Connecticut College's tradition of looking to the whole community for wisdom."
Conn’s Clenonesque campaign

President Bill Clinton’s State of the Union address — or at least his strategies — have hit close to home at Connecticut College. Someone in Fanning, or more likely, Becker House, must have been listening. Listening and learning.

It’s a last minute look at some of the most recent communication revolution in national politics. Claire Gaudiani, president of the college, will hold unprecedented, all-campus meetings Wednesday to explain budget challenges and prime the campus program for cuts.

Maybe it will work. Maybe Gaudiani will emerge from Wednesday’s session amid praise for her honesty and specificity in the face of impending sacrifices. Or maybe the audience will leave filled with political rhetoric and little information. Either way, you had better be there.

This college has difficult choices to make. With its $1.5 million shortfall and shifts in the long-term financial program, the need for higher education, prioritizing, can no longer be avoided, and the changes will not be negligible.

Gaudiani told a reporter this week that she likes to call the process results “restructuring,” as opposed to “cuts.” If you hear this euphemism Wednesday, don’t be surprised, but more importantly, don’t be fooled. Budget expenditures will increase next year, but previously-funded services will be eliminated.

The Priorities, Planning and Budget Committee has developed its initial proposal. Thanks to the persistent demands of some committee members, the president is going on the road (or at least to Dana Auditorium) to sell the overall concept, and the community will be better informed. This meeting will be smaller, open sessions with PPBC.

It is up to all members of the community — students, faculty, and staff — to make the Clenonesque approach work, to ask important questions, and to wonder about the answers. How did we get to this point? What is the rationale behind specific cuts? What will Connecticut College represent, and what will it not offer, in future years?

With the exception of PPBC’s follow-up meetings next week, there will be no additional publicity campaign. Gaudiani won’t travel through the dorms with photographers who expose thinking professors of presidential budgeting efforts. There isn’t time. But she and the trustees will make decisions. Count on it and tune in.

THE COLLEGE VOICE
Sarah Huntley
Publisher
Rebecca Flynn
Editor in Chief (Newspaper)
Yvonne Watkins
Managing Editor
Christopher Scott
Associate Publisher
Mary Kate Roy
Managing Editor (Magazine)
EDITORIAL BOARD
Jennifer Latané
News Editor
Andrew Gibian
Copy Editor
Julie Granoft
Features Editor
Omn Peto
Photography Editor
Karla Boeddinghaus
Associate Editor
Alison Midnight Production
April Odds
Associate Editor
Sandra del Valle
Photography Production
Shanna Rajan A & E
Matt Hurstein Sports
SPECIAL SECTIONS

correction is a concern for all

Letter to the Voice.

Part of journalism involves the gathering, writing, and editing of news. Since April Odds’ article last week on “Wright off House Governor,” the College Voice, February 15, 1993) was written, written, body edited, and missing vital pieces of information, I feel compelled, as “housefellow” (your spelling of Wright), to respond.

First of all, Ms. Ondis, as of Feb. 15, House Council (which is always capitalized, by the by) had yet to meet. Any Junior class member from Wright with knowledge of such a meeting is a very outside-“unconventional” as it were, place. Ms. Ondis, you may wish to check your sources for credibility before you print your information.

Second, Ms. Berman stated that he wished to make a statement after the J-Board Chair had finished reading the C-Book description of the position of both the Senator and the Governor. As “housefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been handed out and 2) such discussion or statement making would have been inappropriate at the time, since all parties had the entire week to make any charges that they felt were relevant to the issue. This is why the C-Book requires a week’s notice prior to such a vote. Maybe Ms. Ondis would care to read this document some time.

As to the issue of quorum being reached, had Ms. Ondis thought to ask Julie DeGennaro (that’s the J-Board Chair, April) about the issue, I’m quoted as saying that report gets and expenditures of the Governor. As “hosefellow” I disallowed discussion for two reasons: 1) Ballots had already been hande
The foolproof cure for Conn's financial woes

Why are the financial woes of Connecticut College seen as so difficult to resolve? I have a plan that will transform our financially troubled institution into a major capitalist enterprise capable of grossing $20 million each year. I would first hire Irwin Ross of Bear Stearns and give him any title or position he wants. This school doesn't need better educators; it needs a kid who would sell his own parents to Dow Chemical for medical research for a cure for Conn's financial woes. The front of the school miscreants and save money finally rid ourselves of the public relations

I would eliminate some of the lunatic leaving service off campus, help make this a car and a pizza and a pitcher at Mr. G's. I would make parents show the debt to their summer home and proof of their commitment to write a check in the admissions building. I would raise the cost of an education here to $35,000 per year. As it stands, parents making a nearly $150,000 per year can still afford the

I would simplify the curriculum. After four years I still have not discovered why the culture of the black culture of the Donors' Donor's doesn't understand that the $20,000 Saab differs from that of the white student from Exeter with the $20,000 Volvo. So all the multicultural, diversity crap has got to go. We have students at this school that know 17 Caribbean religions but have to come up with a plan for directions on how we are going to open. I propose four classes that every student must take. They will be: History From Cavemen to Compact Discs, Economics: Collective Farming or Disneyworld — You Be the Judge, Science: If You Had Any Talent You Would Be Finding a Cure For Cancer and Not Paying: $25,000 To Study Midget Nationalism and Anti-Feminist Perspectives on Environmental Ethics and the Real World: Let's See What Good Your Local Arts Education Is When you're Stuck on I-95 in an Ice Storm with a Flat tire.

The key to the new Connecticut College economic success is the surging of self reliance and real individualism. These were the characteristics that were personified in American popular culture and helped make this country great before heroic men like Harding and Hoover were replaced with the pat. Theodashic self-sacriences that have replaced the Oval Office for the past sixty years. A little capitalist efficiency and heartlessness can save this institution. I'm not sure the chance to show how well

Mike Stedman
Class of 1993

Our illustrious institution also fails to provide us with any sort of variety in recreation or social interaction.

We are the College Voice February 22, 1993

Senior, make variety in the student population truly more convenient. Maybe it is just this combination of a small population that makes us very similar of what very similar students that notice for the cliques that develop, reminiscent of appointing junior high school days — but I digress. The key to this argument is that a homogeneous rich prep school crowd is, in comparison with a more variant student constituency, about as stimulating as the Voice's musings on the SGA budget.

Of course, half the problem lies in the actual location of the school in New London, where the big annual events are Mr. G's restaurants (not to cast aspersions on that venerable establishment) and Coinkella cover bands at the El N'Gec. However, I maintain that with the right crowd, even shapin' pillows and watching Bob Thomas shoot pool can be an invigorating experience (this has been proven more than once, mind you). Maybe with more variety, the multi-cultural, P.C. facet of the school's façade would be more plausible. I would much rather discuss racial and social tensions with an inner-city student than hear an 'alternative' type get righteous about the senior TRIBE parties' moniker being offensive towards Native Americans, then rattle on about his own high school car trip vacation with Daddy in Vegas, and discuss how handy having his own laser printer is. I don't know, maybe wimpy is a better term.

David E.M. Lerner
Class of 1993
Storyteller explains what life in Russia ‘entails’ these days

by Kathy O’Connell

The College Voice

Artiom Soloveychik treated a Compass audience to the type of Russian tales he told on a Russian/American voyage to New York Tuesday.

Four years ago, Soloveychik, who is originally from Moscow, made his first trip to America, where he said the “cultural differences surprised him the most.”

Soloveychik participated in a project in which Americans and Soviets “sailed on the same boat across the ocean together” to New York. According to Soloveychik, Mikhail Gorbachev believed this project aided the “struggle for peace.”

Soloveychik was chosen as the Russian storyteller aboard the ship; he had an American counterpart. Soloveychik said he “felt [he] was the American voyage to New York. According to Soloveychik, the Russian people’s main problem is understanding free market economics. Russians “have to figure out how to live this new life,” said Soloveychik, who compared Russians to a newly released prisoner who “has no friends and no way to earn money.”

Soloveychik is a professor of psychology at the University of Moscow, an Olympic sailing champion, and a senior mixed-voice tenor. He’d eventually like to qualify for men’s Nationals, or possibly the Olympics.

At the end of his lecture, Soloveychik discussed the changes that his country is now undergoing.

“Sports were always free in Russia” and he “took it for granted.” Now the sailboats cost a “tremendous amount,” according to Soloveychik.

Soloveychik said his country is “facing freedom and doesn’t know what to do with it.”

According to Soloveychik, the Russian people’s main problem is suffering, during which the players walk about two miles. Each member of the team takes turns shooting (throwing a handled 42 pound rock down the ice), and sweeping (using a broom to guide the rock).

A game is divided into eight or ten ends, with each player shooting twice per end. Festersen prefers shooting, which he says is where most of the strategy is involved. Curlers wear special shoes to keep them from falling all over the ice, and their foot wears make bowling shoes look boring: one shoe is made of felt and the other of rubber.

Curling is not a sport for quitters, Festersen said, “I don’t think necessarily physical strength or size are important . . . you have to be morally tough. The game is so long, and you have to be able to bounce back. You can never get down on yourself, or your teammates.”

Festersen, who has not been able to curl while at college, is looking forward to getting back into the sport. He’d eventually like to qualify for men’s Nationals, or possibly the Olympics.
Counseling group offers support for gay youth

by Susan Feuer
Features Editor

Connecticut College senior Dan Church describes 1 in 10 as a support group that "provides social support and management within the context of a group to get the message of safer sex across to teens." The name stems from the statistic, that in general, one out of every 10 people is homosexual.

The group, which has met three times so far, has been in the planning stages since last September. The group was begun at Church's outreach project for gay youth in the New London area. Church is an intern for the Southeastern Connecticut AIDS Project, and discussed his plan with his supervisor, Breena Church, who is a homosexual.

"We are providing support that has not existed in this community until now. I grow up in the area, and when I was in high school there was nothing like that. I knew I would have appreciated a group like this," said Church.

"We arc providing support that we know exists in other support groups; our participation is based in our involvement with the other groups."

"Some principals have not allowed posters to be put up in their schools. We have had to work through other channels," said Church.

"We got a very nasty letter from one church. But the whole time we've had a very positive response from the universalist churches."

Church and Marica Ochoa, the housing coordinator for SECAP, are the co-facilitators for 1 in 10. Said Church, "Marcia and I and have been involved in other support groups; our participation is based in our involvement with the other groups."

"The group aims to cover health education, drug and alcohol abuse by gay teens and the feeling of alienation that these teens often experience."

Said Church, "I've been growing really, it takes time for the word to get out."

When Linda Heller's daughter discovered that their mother was a lesbian, they angrily asked her, "how could you do this to us?"

Heller shared her recollections at Saturday's "Different Voices: One Community" when she was one of three keynote panelists. The day-long conference drew approximately 250 people to the Connecticut College campus.

Mark Hoffman, coordinator of student activities and conference chair, said, in his opening remarks, "I think it's great for so many people to take it. It's scary not to talk to people. We're all in this together to learn about ourselves."

The conference theme was "Living, Loving and Learning." Each panelist spoke on one of these topics. Cheryl Lyon-Connely was the first speaker. Ron Ward, previous president of the New London People's Forum, was the moderator for the panel.

"I am an African-American, said, "I want to focus on issues of oppression and racism that exists within the gay, lesbian and bisexual community." She told of her first experience with racism as a child, when she was not allowed to go into her neighbor's yard. "Somehow there was no spiritual connection... Somewhere I wasn't worthy or good enough to go in these people's house," said Linear-Connely.

"We're so busy trying to feel proud that we forget about our brown brothers and sisters. The perception is that we're not working together on issues. People don't want to accept that there is racism among Caulcans," she said.

Heller, an assistant professor of human services at Three Rivers Community College, was the next panelist. She said, "It's been a long journey to be here. You all know that we have incredible families. I am incredibly proud to be the mother of two wonderful young women. We have a willingness to be together in joy and pain. We live in a society that discriminates against us."

Said Heller, "Being here with my family is part of a celebration of a long road. We had to go through it together and it was hard, but let me tell you, it was worth it, worth every minute. I'm not going to hurry and say it's easy to come out. It's not."

"Following Heller was Joe Grabars, a former two term Connecticut man known from the left-leaning politics, Grabars spoke about gays in the military. "One slogan from the civil rights movement was "Eye for an eye. Two to keep our eyes on the prize. The prize is not being able to pick up a gun and travel to foreign lands and kill people. We need civil rights protection," he said.

"The military is often an avenue for gays and lesbians to leave rural areas and get an education. In our real world, gay entry to get benefits, we should pick up the real milita-

"Said Grabars. Grabars said, "What should be on the national agenda is the passage of the lesbian and gay civil rights act. We need to repeal polidies that discriminate against le-

"We need to have inclusion of immigrants who are HIV positive, it has nothing to do with the U.S. picking up medical bills for these people. There will be at least 185 new judicial appointments. We need to make sure that they are gay and lesbian-sensitive judges," he said.

After the panel, there were then workshops and President of the conference began with magic show by Fredrick, and performances by The Undertones, a women's a cappella singing group, and Brian Rajdage, a singer and Folk-

The conference was sponsored by the New London People's Forum and the Connecticut College Lesbian/Gay/Bi/Strait Alliance.
COMICS

Calvin and Hobbes

WE'RE HAVING PROBLEMS SWITCHING TO CAPITALISM.

THE TROUBLE IS THAT ALL OUR CAPITALISTS ARE CRIMINALS.
BREAKING ALL OUR LAWS.

THAT'S JUST AN EARLY STAGE OF CAPITALISM.

EVENTUALLY THEY BECOME POWERFUL ENOUGH TO REVOLUTE THE LAWS.

King Crossword

ACROSS
1. Setting
2. Periods
6. Bag of scent
11. Ivan, for one
12. Tormo
13. Like this clue
14. Glossy coating
15. Soviet peninsula
16. - majesty
17. Being
18. -Tormo
19. Stray
20. Snare
22. Total
23. Employ
24. Baden, for one
25. - favor
(pedro's please)
26. Play divisions
27. Like a ship
28. Algonquian tribe (var.)
29. Spoke
30. Each (Scot)
31. Tnt
32. Sugar: a suffix
33. Nourished
34. Company, to most
35. Suffix with marion
36. Tie
37. Scrape by, with "out"
38. Greek peak
39. Decorate
40. Epic poetry
41. City in Quebec
42. Likely
43. Sulk
44. Likely
45. Handle (Fr.)
46. French river
47. Dies-
48. Poses for a portrait
49. Vane direction
50. Redeemable certificate
51. -Tormo
52. Type of tweed,
53. Type of enter
54. Henry VIII, et al
55. Type of novel
56. British
57. Female group (Fy.)

DOWN
1. Completed
2. Periods
3. Halley's, for one
4. Sugar
5. Let go
6. Pouches
7. Fields
8. Denier —
9. Like some pics
11. Ivan, for one
12. — Canary
13. Impaled
14. Full cheer
15. Employ
20. Unit of butter
21. Pilot's concern
22. Algonquian title (var.)
23. Each (Scot.)
24. Nourished
25. Company, to most
26. Play divisions
27. Like a ship
28. Algonquian tribe (var.)
29. Spoke
30. Each (Scot)
31. Tnt
32. Sugar: a suffix
33. Nourished
34. Company, to most
35. Suffix with marion
36. Tie
37. Scrape by, with "out"
38. Greek peak
39. Decorate
40. Epic poetry
41. City in Quebec
42. Likely
43. Sulk
44. Likely
45. Handle (Fr.)
46. French river
47. Dies-
48. Poses for a portrait
49. Vane direction
51. — Favor
(Pedro's please)
53. Wholly

The College Voice February 22, 1993 Page 6
Supreme Court set to hearocket cases in Dana Hall

by Jeffrey Borun
The College Voice

Here come the judges.
The Connecticut State Supreme Court is road tripping to New London to hear three cases over the course on April 1 at 10 am, 11:30 am, and 2 pm. The case will be heard in Dana Hall.

A pre-briefing will be held at the Coast Guard Academy earlier in the week. Post-hearing analysis will be offered in Oliva Hall directly following each case.

The Connecticut College Supreme Court is part of the community outreach effort that harks back to the early days of the state court. The University of Connecticut visited the Coast Guard Academy, and the University of Connecticut Law School was reported as being known at this year's site because of its proximity to a number of institutions of higher education.

By Friday, the committee will have a list of the faculty members who have accepted their nomination for the position. The entire selection process is confidential.

According to Stuart Vyse, chair of the search committee, Claire Giudizzini, president, has asked the committee to narrow down their choices for provost to between two to four candidates. Giudizzini will make the final selection of the provost.

Explaning the decision to seek candidates from the existing faculty, Vyse said, "Prior to the last provost, deans of the college were drawn from the faculty. I think there is a feeling among the faculty that this person should be someone who is already known and respected by the faculty; that this person will promote good communication with the faculty and good, effective leadership of the faculty.

"The duties and authority of the provost will remain unchanged, with the provost also retaining the faculty and responsible for the $14 million academic budget."

The Camel Connection

A compilation of other schools’ news

Midshipmen accused of cheating

Twenty-eight midshipmen at the Naval Academy in Annapolis, MD are being investigated for cheating on an electrical engineering exam that was administered last December. Any who are found guilty can be expelled from the academy. This is the largest Naval Academy cheating scandal since 1974, and 60 midshipmen were reported for cheating.

Supreme Court set to hearocket cases in Dana Hall

by Jeffrey Borun
The College Voice

Here come the judges.
The Connecticut State Supreme Court is road tripping to New London to hear three cases over the course on April 1 at 10 am, 11:30 am, and 2 pm. The case will be heard in Dana Hall.

A pre-briefing will be held at the Coast Guard Academy earlier in the week. Post-hearing analysis will be offered in Oliva Hall directly following each case.

The Connecticut College Supreme Court is part of the community outreach effort that harks back to the early days of the state court. The University of Connecticut visited the Coast Guard Academy, and the University of Connecticut Law School was reported as being known at this year's site because of its proximity to a number of institutions of higher education.

By Friday, the committee will have a list of the faculty members who have accepted their nomination for the position. The entire selection process is confidential.

According to Stuart Vyse, chair of the search committee, Claire Giudizzini, president, has asked the committee to narrow down their choices for provost to between two to four candidates. Giudizzini will make the final selection of the provost.

Explaning the decision to seek candidates from the existing faculty, Vyse said, "Prior to the last provost, deans of the college were drawn from the faculty. I think there is a feeling among the faculty that this person should be someone who is already known and respected by the faculty; that this person will promote good communication with the faculty and good, effective leadership of the faculty.

"The duties and authority of the provost will remain unchanged, with the provost also retaining the faculty and responsible for the $14 million academic budget."

The Camel Connection

A compilation of other schools’ news

Midshipmen accused of cheating

Twenty-eight midshipmen at the Naval Academy in Annapolis, MD are being investigated for cheating on an electrical engineering exam that was administered last December. Any who are found guilty can be expelled from the academy. This is the largest Naval Academy cheating scandal since 1974, and 60 midshipmen were reported for cheating.

Visions of Paris

Voyage Program 1993

Summer Session: May 24 - June 20

Internships: June 14 - July 23

More than 50 regular offerings from the University's liberal arts curriculum.

A three-week French-language immersion program, featuring cultural walking tours and conversation classes.

Seminar tours with the University of Texas, the University of New Hampshire, and the University of California at Berkeley. Also, two new French immersion sessions: Summer '93 in Biarritz and Winter '94 in Paris.

Sand Dollar 1993 Summer Programs: The American University of Paris Summer Program / U.S. Office, 80 East 11th Street, Suite 434, New York, New York 10003. Tel: (212) 677-4670; Fax: (212) 752-3050.

The American University of Paris

The College Voice February 22, 1993 Page 7
Concerns over the lack of contested positions in recent SGA elections surfaced during a February 14 Student Assembly meeting debating deregulating the election process.

Adam Green, Public Relations Director, who oversees and administers all elections, said the proposal was brought to him by the entire SGA and was debated.

Spicer, house senator of 1A, brought forth several amendments to the proposal, stating that the regulations made it difficult to campaign and might stifle student interest.

Another formal amendment by Spicer would have allowed candidates to spend a maximum of $500. Green added that this would minimize the costs.

A formal amendment by Spicer passed, striking the stipulation that campaigns spend a limit; however, they can choose to stay within this limit.

The PR Director disagreed with the amendment. "I don't believe in all this deregulation. I think we have these rules for a reason," said Green. "I don't want this to become a free-for-all. That's not right."

Walker reminded the Assembly that "the vote needs to make a choice and so does the candidate."

The point was also raised that extending the campaign period might intrude on students' privacy.

Walker added that "it seems incongruent not to have a common campaign period from one school that does not allow aid to travel." He added that decisions about feasibility, that option was cut College's housing policies and campus and bring additional revenue to the college to help pay for the election issue, containing responses to that article, according to the report.

A survey sent out to other colleges found that of the 12 responses Connecticut College is the only school that does not allow aid to travel. Philip Ray, associate dean of the college, and member of the Financial Aid Study away committee, stressed the importance of these findings.

"As we face more and more intense competition from other schools, we're shooting ourselves in the foot with this policy," Ray said.

The committee's report addresses the issue of competition with other institutions and suggests Connecticut College's ranking in U.S. News & World Report would be enhanced with the policy's adoption.

Academic expenditures per student, it argues, would increase.

Randy Roach, assistant director of admissions and a committee member, pointed out the current policy contradicts Connecticut College's mission statement and Strategic Plan.

"Given the facts that this college is building a niche in international studies and has a clear interest not to offer financial aid for study away, considering our overall mission statement and Strategic Plan," he said.

Solinga said that peer institutions make their financial aid study away policies work by encouraging larger acceptance rates for transfer students, but because of Connecticut College's housing policies and the college's current office's concern about feasibility, that option was discarded. Solinga also added that some of the palette simulations that rely on large students are currently facing financial strain, and are reviewing their policies.

The Financial Aid Study away committee was formed last fall to address this issue, which is a "third priority" in the College's "Financial Aid Study away." According to Matthews, the support for the formation of a separate committee, instead of having the standing study away committee handle this issue.

"I figured this committee would work more quickly because [Solinga] had access to all the [financial aid] numbers," Matthews said.

The report is currently awaiting an initial review by the Planning, Priorities and Budget committee. Matthews, who is a member of PPBC, believes it is likely to be approved. "It is a cheap neutral plan so PPBC will probably pass it.

In addition to trying to change the current policy, Matthews expects to see the college's capital campaign "target money specifically for scholarships, maybe specifically for study away."
College maintains efforts to close salary gaps

Continued from p. 1

uary of the college, a corporate position man-ant of the position, Hampton said, "He or she certifies certain board actions and can sign on legal documents."

Dorothy James, former provost and dean of the faculty, Steve Culbertson, then vice president for development, Claire Matthews, vice president for Planning and dean of admissions, Charles Luce, director of athletics and Bernard Murstein, professor of psychology, are the big-name employees.

The salaries of Gaudiani, Hampton, James, Culbertson, Matthews and Luce, who were all on the 1990-1991 tax forms as well, grew by an average of 10.3 percent.

Data collected by College and University Personnel Association show that nationwide median salaries of administrators at academic institutions rose by 3.0 percent in fiscal year 1991-1992. This figure trailed behind the 4.7 percent rate of inflation.

According to the February 5, 1992 Chronicle of Higher Education, this was the smallest percentage increase since 1987-1988 and reflects the financial hard times nationwide.

In 1990 the college hired Coopers and Lybrand, a financial consulting firm, to do a study of how non-faculty salaries at Connecticut College rank among salaries at selected peer institutions. The schools used included Busch, Colby, Hamilton, Harvard, Trinity and Wellesley.

The results of this survey are confidential but Joan Hunter, director of human resources, said that on average, "Connecticut College's [overall] level of compensation is equal to or slightly below that of our peer institutions."

The survey did show, Gaudiani said, that the college was lagging behind in a number of key senior administrative spots.

"The survey indicated position by position the degree to which each of the senior officers are behind. Some, including mine, are substantially behind," she said.

Gaudiani's salary increased to $144,273 from $133,100 in fiscal year 1990-1991 and $125,083 in 1989-1990.

Her salary of $100,634 for 1988-1989 was compensation for the nine months after she replaced former president Oakes Ames.

In 1990 the college hired Coopers and Lybrand, a financial consulting firm, to do a study of how non-faculty salaries at Connecticut College rank among salaries at selected peer institutions. The schools used included Busch, Colby, Hamilton, Harvard, Trinity and Wellesley.

The results of this survey are confidential but Joan Hunter, director of human resources, said that on average, "Connecticut College's [overall] level of compensation is equal to or slightly below that of our peer institutions."

The survey did show, Gaudiani said, that the college was lagging behind in a number of key senior administrative spots.

"The survey indicated position by position the degree to which each of the senior officers are behind. Some, including mine, are substantially behind," she said.

Gaudiani’s salary increased to $144,273 from $133,100 in fiscal year 1990-1991 and $125,083 in 1989-1990.

Her salary of $100,634 for 1988-1989 was compensation for the nine months after she replaced former president Oakes Ames.

Gaudiani declined to speak directly about her raise.

Gaudiani said steps have been taken to close administrative salary gaps, but said she has declined to bring her own salary up to par.

"I have told [the trustees] I would not agree to have my salary gap closed until the faculty salary gap has been closed," she said.

Murstein is the only faculty member among the top five paid employees. Accord-

PPBC to release report Monday

Continued from p. 1

final decision and to prepare the board [of trustees] mailing. So I'm particularly pleased that the Priorities, Planning and Budget Committee and the whole campus has been working so hard to develop cost saving and revenue building ideas," she said.

"We will discuss some of these, and review the growth by subtraction process together at the open meeting, and between February 24 and March 12 many more small group meetings will be held to examine further the suggestions currently under consideration," she continued.

Explaining that specific proposals for eliminations of departments, programs, and services would not be made public at the Wednesday meetings, Gaudiani said, "The meeting will be conceptual rather than specific at this point.

According to Jeff Boran, PPBC member, "PPBC decided on Friday that substantial information regarding all prospective program cuts will be made available to the entire community at the open hearings to be held next week."

CLINTON IS FAILING BECAUSE HE’S UNWILLING TO STICK WITH A PRINCIPLE AND RISK ALIENATING PEOPLE.

NO WAIT...HE'S FAILING BECAUSE HE'S STRUGGLING WITH GAINS IN THE MILITARY, UNWILLING TO BEND TO PUBLIC OPINION.

NO WAIT...BECAUSE HE’S TRYING TOO HARD TO PLEASE WOMEN’S GROUPS WITH THE ATTORNEY GENERAL’S JOB.

NO, BECAUSE HE'S ANGERING WOMEN’S GROUPS WITH THE ATTORNEY GENERAL’S JOB.

NO...HE’S FAILING. BRING HE’S UNABLE TO SHIFT THE FOCUS AWAY FROM HIS PROBLEMS ONTO HIS AGENDA.

ABOUT...OH ... HOW NOW MY AGENDA... THIS IS A FAILURE IN THE MAKING.

SACHET ACROSS
A 4-RH 6-ACROSS Answers to King Crossword on page 6.

The College Voice February 22, 1993 Page 10
NEWS

Student security concerns result in committee
by Jon Finnimore

The new Campus Safety committee, elected by the SGA, met for the first time this week.

The letter was originally drafted by Shalane, senior Drew Todd, and Karen Gillen of the Everywoman’s Center.

The letter listed eight immediate areas of student concern, such as window screens for first floor dormitory rooms, phones in the Arbo- retum, and the establishment of a formal escort service.

Todd was happy with the progress of the committee so far, but said, “I won’t be fully satisfied until the eight things we proposed are addressed actively by the administration. The role of the committee, as I see it, is to assure that issues of safety aren’t ignored, but discussed and put to action. We feel more assured that the weight of this responsibility would rest more evenly on the community as a whole and not disproportionately on one sector.”

Shalane added, “Members of the committee need to be sitting down with students, the administration, faculty and staff on a regular basis to solve problems and make this campus safe. Right now, there is no connection between all the relevant parties.”

Shalane said the cabinet decided those issues should be handled by the committee upon its inception.

Panelists discuss Gen. Ed. issues
Continued from p. 1

The plan, which advocates a se- nior culminating experience in which students would be required to produce a project linking their four years of education, had a mixed reception.

Said Huntley, “In terms of a culminat- ing project, I don’t think that you should limit it to writing a thesis.”

Other institutions and their mod- els of General Education were brought up at the meeting.

Some colleges have strict core requirements, “Unless we do something like at St. John’s (Col- lege, in Annapolis, MD) or Brook- lyn (College), we’re wasting our time,” said Jones.

Multiculturalism and its inclu- sion in any new General Education plan was agreed to be a primary concern by many panelists.

Reggie Wynn, co-chair of MSEC, brought up the idea for an Ethnic and Racial Solutions re- quirement.

Senior Rob Marbury said, “We need to broaden our horizon.” He spoke of the need for inclusion of women’s and gay studies in the General Education plan.

The information gathered at the hearings will be forwarded to EPC.

The new Campus Safety committee met with full approval of the Administrative Cabinet this week.

Last week, the Student Government Assembly unanimously passed a letter urging the adminis- tration to develop such a committee to discuss areas of student concern.

Colleen Shanley, SGA president and a member of the Administr- ative Cabinet, presented the letter to the cabinet, which unanimously agreed to establish the committee. Shanley will work with Robert Hampton, dean of the college, to decide the committee’s structure.

At this point, Shanley believes the committee will consist of Stuart Angell, director of Campus Safety, one of the joint directors of physical plant, Lynn Brooks, vice president for finance, and two students to be

You’re not the only one who’s carrying a lot of units this semester.

You’re not the only one who’s carrying a lot of units this semester.

Right now your Apple Campus Reseller has the most affordable line of full-featured Macintosh® computers ever. There’s the Apple® Macintosh® Color Classic®—a solid performer at a remarkable price. The Macintosh® LC II, which runs 50% faster than its top-selling predecessor, the LC II, And, for even more power, the Macintosh® Centris® 610. See these new computers today at your Apple Campus Reseller. Where you’ll get special student pricing, as well as service during college! And experience the power of Macintosh. The power more college students choose. The power to be your best.

For further information contact Kate Brown, Ext. 2090

The Campus Computer Store – Lower Level Hamilton Hall

The College Voice February 22, 1993 Page 11

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller: a full Macintosh line for all your needs.
ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Director Derron Wood emphasizes the life of the legendary Vlad the Impaler in the upcoming version of Dracula, scheduled to hit the stage on Friday.

Wood's Dracula takes a bite out of Palmer

by James Santangelo
A&E Editor

Now wait, before you go and get all hostile, let me talk. So you have gone and seen the Francis Ford Coppola "film" (notice I use caution with that word), and you have a rough idea of the classic story, maybe you have read Lestat chronicles, or maybe you are a vampire, but all I know is that you have never seen anything like this play before in your life.

Dracula, dramatized by Hamilton Deane and John L. Balderston, will be staged by the Connecticut College Theatre Department next Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Palmer Auditorium at 8 p.m. with a special midnight matinee on March 19.

This version of Dracula, unlike any of the others, emphasizes the historical figure behind the legend, Vlad the Impaler. The play is directed by Derron Wood '88, who heads the Flock Theatre Department in Massachusetts and last directed for the Connecticut College Theatre Department in 1990, staging Eugene Ionesco's "La Cantatrice Chauve." The on background of this tale, I received a most interesting announcement from the administration.

"On the night of February 12 and February 19, a gathering of hardy individuals faced the cold and made their way to Palmer 202 to see Theater One's production of Agnes of God, directed by senior Elise Allen. They were treated to a spectacular three-woman show.

Upon a stage set consisting of only three chairs, the play started with a tape-recording of Agnes' singing, performed by Dinah Stewart. Alone on the stage was Dr. Livingston, played by senior Jonathon James portraying the role of Mina, Robert McMahon's portrayal of Dracula, the Prince of Many Faces. This version of Dracula, dramatized by Hamilton Deane and John L. Balderston, will be staged by the Connecticut College Theatre Department next Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Palmer Auditorium at 8 p.m. with a special midnight matinee on March 19.

On the background of this tale, I received a most interesting announcement from the administration. The play is directed by Derron Wood '88, who heads the Flock Theatre Department in Massachusetts and last directed for the Connecticut College Theatre Department in 1990, staging Eugene Ionesco's "La Cantatrice Chauve."

On the background of this tale, I received a most interesting announcement from the administration. The play is directed by Derron Wood '88, who heads the Flock Theatre Department in Massachusetts and last directed for the Connecticut College Theatre Department in 1990, staging Eugene Ionesco's "La Cantatrice Chauve."

The reason for Agnes' innocence is her mother, who kept her out of school and away from other children, complaining of bad habits and telling to angels. To the horror of Dr. Livingston and Mother Superior, Agnes admits that her mother both mentally and sexually abused her as a child, telling her that she was fat, and that fat people are evil sinners. Her mother also made her take off her clothes and then burned them with cigarettes.

With the outgoing of all these horrors, along with the revelation that the Mother Superior is Agnes' older sister, Dr. Livingston finds herself becoming increasingly more concerned for Agnes on a personal level. She decides to put Agnes under hypnosis and question her about the night she gave birth to her baby and the night that it was conceived. The play comes to a conclusion with Agnes' remembrance of both nights, and who was in the room on the two occasions.

Molly Smith gives a powerful performance as Dr. Livingston; she is very professional with a quick sense of humor, and her character's transformation during the course of the play from a distant psychiatrist trying to determine Agnes' mental state for the court to a concerned woman questioning her values, her religion and what her decision will mean to Agnes, is superb.

Susan Case is the perfect Mother Superior, a once-married woman who has now turned to the church for the peace she could not find in her family. Case's Mother Superior is a quiet, calm nun until she throws out a piece of her personal past - hardly a past one would imagine a nun would have. Her heated scenes with Smith are full of tension and feeling.

And finally, Agnes, played by Debbie McMahon, dressed in white, as innocent as a flower. Agnes' character flows so naturally it seems McMahon could have been sent by God Himself to play the role. McMahon's portrayal of Agnes, crossing to the floor and crying in pain in her hypnosis, screaming at her mother who is no longer alive, actually gave this writer goosebumps.

Hat off to the three astounding actresses, and to Elise Allen for her outstanding directing job, for outstanding this play was, and assuredly worth the cold walk to Palmer for all who attended.

Theater One's Agnes of God captivates Palmer audience

by Carol Schaalitz
The College Voice

On the night of February 18 and 21, a gathering of hardy individuals faced the cold and made their way to Palmer 202 to see Theater One's production of Dracula, directed by senior Elise Allen. They were treated to a spectacular three-woman show.

Upon a stage set consisting of only three chairs, the play started with a tape-recording of Agnes' singing, performed by Dinah Stewart. Alone on the stage was Dr. Livingston, played by senior Jonathon James portraying the role of Mina, Robert McMahon's portrayal of Dracula, the Prince of Many Faces. This version of Dracula, dramatized by Hamilton Deane and John L. Balderston, will be staged by the Connecticut College Theatre Department next Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Palmer Auditorium at 8 p.m. with a special midnight matinee on March 19.

On the background of this tale, I received a most interesting announcement from the administration. The play is directed by Derron Wood '88, who heads the Flock Theatre Department in Massachusetts and last directed for the Connecticut College Theatre Department in 1990, staging Eugene Ionesco's "La Cantatrice Chauve."

The reason for Agnes' innocence is her mother, who kept her out of school and away from other children, complaining of bad habits and telling to angels. To the horror of Dr. Livingston and Mother Superior, Agnes admits that her mother both mentally and sexually abused her as a child, telling her that she was fat, and that fat people are evil sinners. Her mother also made her take off her clothes and then burned them with cigarettes.

With the outgoing of all these horrors, along with the revelation that the Mother Superior is Agnes' older sister, Dr. Livingston finds herself becoming increasingly more concerned for Agnes on a personal level. She decides to put Agnes under hypnosis and question her about the night she gave birth to her baby and the night that it was conceived. The play comes to a conclusion with Agnes' remembrance of both nights, and who was in the room on the two occasions.

Molly Smith gives a powerful performance as Dr. Livingston; she is very professional with a quick sense of humor, and her character's transformation during the course of the play from a distant psychiatrist trying to determine Agnes' mental state for the court to a concerned woman questioning her values, her religion and what her decision will mean to Agnes, is superb.

Susan Case is the perfect Mother Superior, a once-married woman who has now turned to the church for the peace she could not find in her family. Case's Mother Superior is a quiet, calm nun until she throws out a piece of her personal past - hardly a past one would imagine a nun would have. Her heated scenes with Smith are full of tension and feeling.

And finally, Agnes, played by Debbie McMahon, dressed in white, as innocent as a flower. Agnes' character flows so naturally it seems McMahon could have been sent by God Himself to play the role. McMahon's portrayal of Agnes, crossing to the floor and crying in pain in her hypnosis, screaming at her mother who is no longer alive, actually gave this writer goosebumps.

Hat off to the three astounding actresses, and to Elise Allen for her outstanding directing job, for outstanding this play was, and assuredly worth the cold walk to Palmer for all who attended.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THIS YEAR'S RECIPIENTS OF THE MARY FOLKIE MORGAN INTERNSHIPS:

Kim LaBoy
Esther Potter

The College Voice February 22, 1993 Page 12
ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

SAC hosts comedian Mac King

by James Santangelo
A&E Editor

When asked how he came to be the man he is today, Mac King has said, "When I was a little kid my grandfather gave me his "Magic Suit." The suit was much too big for me then, but he told me the suit had secret powers and that when it fit me right I would be a famous comedian." Well, it seems the garment fits perfectly now, as he has performed in some of the hottest comedy clubs across the country, including Dangerfield's, Stitches, and The Comedy Connection. He has also opened for such acts as Jay Leno, Jerry Lewis, Eddie Rabbitt, and Barbara Mandrell.

His talent has only been showcased on stage but also in commercials. He has appeared in commercials for Kentucky Fried Chicken, The United Way, Rennigan's, Pillsbury, and The Hillsich and Bradby Co., just to name a few. When asked to describe his show, King said, "I guess I've got a friendly act, because a lot of people come up to talk with me after a show. They say the nicest things, stuff like, "I loved your act. It was like Vaudeville, but not as out of date," or just, "I loved the suit." Sometimes people ask me about a specific part of my show such as, "Can your head really cave in from drinking through a straw?" But I guess my favorite thing that anybody ever said about me was, "He's hip....I think." University of Massachusetts, University of Louisville, Tennessee Tech, Macalester College, and Boston College are just a few of the colleges and institutions of higher education he has attended...for his show. Mac King has said, "My folks saw in it I got a good education. I have a degree in anthropology, you know. That's why I'm doing comedy now."

So anyone interested in attending his show on Saturday should just show up at 8 p.m. on February 27 at Oliva Hall and be prepared to laugh. This is being brought to you by SAC in conjunction with Marc Sichere. And just in case you were worried about the price, don't worry, it's free. What more could you ask for?

A dark and stormy night comes to Connecticut College.

Gothic genre provides outlets for cultural fears

by Luke Brennan
The College Voice

Against a stormy, forbidding nightscape and a dark and decaying old mansion, a young heroine screams and tries to flee as an unearthly specter draws closer. The above elements are easy to recognize as staples of gothic fiction. Where they came from and what they truly mean, however, is not as obvious. This lecture presented by the Theater Department Thursday and connected with the upcoming production of Dracula attempted to answer this question.

The lecture, titled "The Gothic Impulse in Fiction" and given by director, linguist, and writer Michael Kinghorn of the American Literary Place, was a thorough, well-researched analysis of this fiction genre.

Kinghorn broke the concept of gothic fiction down into its components, "(1) is a highly subjective world (which) doesn't conform to our objective view of reality ... time, space, and identity are all relative perceptions ... (2) monstrous nightmares." Kinghorn traced the origins and influences behind gothic fiction. He related its purpose as attempting to promote fear and terror in the reader, and its origins in the Norse and Germanic myths of the dream past, realized in the epic poem Beowulf. Kinghorn described how the gothic theme evolved into the familiar "old, dark house" story we know today, developed by authors such as Sheridan LeFanu and Edgar Allan Poe and utilized by contemporary horror writers Stephen King and Clive Barker.

Interestingly, Kinghorn disagreed with the King-field belief that gothic fiction uses the fear of the unknown to achieve its desired effect, since "the unknown is not self-evident." Instead, it "constantly recombines known fears in new ways" and works on "the fear of the other, that which one is not ... outer, unknown forces." The presence of this fear is not harmful to the reader; instead, it facilitates a sort of "psychic release" of anxiety.

Kinghorn also noted how this manner of fiction usually seems to recur when a "gurgling fear about other parts of society" appears and the fear is channeled into frightening but manageable images (to use an expression offered by an audience member).

Kinghorn found significance in the release of Francis Ford Coppola's Dracula and the hostility towards different groups in American society expressed at this summer's Republican convention. Kinghorn concluded his talk with a discussion of gothic themes in contemporary film, with great attention paid to the new Dracula film.

While Kinghorn said he did not "like the film, he acknowledged that "the major conflicts in society today -- sex, drugs, race, gender, fear issues -- are a great medium for directors and writers to comment." Gothic fiction (and the fear and terror which are inextricably linked to it), it seems, is just as relevant today as it ever was.

Please recycle

The College Voice
February 22, 1993 Page 13
SPORTS

IM Update:

Flecoxy hockey flock to victories in IM floor hockey

In Sunday's first match-up, Shape Wing demonstrated the difference between floor hockey and female hockey as the lads trounced Milwaukee's Best 17-3. Joe Waker led all scorers with eight goals. Joel Kress had two goals for the losers. Interests trounced their first game of the season as they defeated Crush and Burned 10-3. In Sunday's second game, Mike Tazonne led eight of Interdorm's 11 goals against the Prosector. Jeff Gillon, Pete Morehouse, and Nigel Metcalfe each tallied for C.R.J.}

Flockey Hockey continued their winning ways at 9 p.m. as they trounced the Honchos. Andrew Gilman, Theo Zednick, Sam Nichols, Jeff Legro, and Mike Gaffney each had a hit for the winners. Derek Crump notched the sole goal for the Honchos. In the second match-up, Bad Hockey was the First Annual All-Campus Sega Hockey tournament- strong showing by Gibian.

In Sunday's second twilight game, the Low Lifes played the Dream On Team 35-31. Sara Soran was the high scorer for B.I. with 16 points. Sue Bradbury and Jean McCarthy each notched eight points for the losers. The Dream On Team returned themselves later in the week with a win over the Campus Towers 38-22. Sue Bradbury had 12 points on Dream team, while teammates Anne Parminter added ten points. Kristin Smith had ten points for the Towers. W.W.A. also remained unbeaten, defeating the Campus Towers 36-21 last to the Campus Towers. Susie Hamlin was the high scorer for W.W.A. with 15 points. Eileen Parrish and Joanne Smolka each chipped in five. W.W.A. finished the week with a 34-20 win over the Tarheeks. Eileen Parrish had 17 points for the winners. Anne Palgrann netted 13 points for the losers.

In A-League play, The Product suffered their first defeat of the season on Sunday as they lost a close one to the Alumni 52-51. Howie Long netted 24 points for the Alumni. Dave Papadopoulos had 15 points for the losers. In another close game on Sunday, the Low Lifes held on for a 55-54 win over the Door Mats. Pete Ryan had 13 points for the Low Lifes, while teammates Danien DePeter and Ed Metzendorf each had nine. Botch Kennedy had a game high 20 points for the Door Mats. The '9ers showed that they still have some growing up to do as they were handed a 64-41 loss by the experienced Fwool, who remains the only undefeated team in the league. All five of Fwool's starters scored in the double figures with Bottom Hall having a game high 21 points. Rollo Jones had 14 for the losers. In Sunday's final action, Montana was victorious over the All-eating Olympics to be held in April. This is the second straight year Dr. Bendor has won the tournament.

The information in this article is compiled by the intramural office.

The College Voice February 22, 1993 Page 14

Conson gardenes covered short in all campus Sega hockey tournament- strong showing by Gibian

by Bobby Gibson

and

David Peydavoy

The College Voice

Opening Remarks

Scheduling is proud to announce that both the College Voice and all future articles, will be written with the use of Brendan Gilman's Macintosh SE-30. This marks the first time D&B and Popes have ever tried to venture into the complicated world of female bartering, bargaining and compromise. However, when Gilman offered to buy a Mac's computer and then sell it back to him for $75, we couldn't refuse. President Claire Gaudet called Schmoozing's new affiliation with Gilman "baffling." Rob Marbury deemed it "irascible." Caroline Woodbrooks, dean of Student Life, said, "we have a house, not a dorm.

All-Campus Sega Hockey Tournament

Words can hardly express the magnitude of this achievement. The Arts-Addams living room this past Friday night. Thirty-two sweaty, beer-guzzling males squared off in the Fighting Camels floor hockey Tournament, with contestants vying for a rod, color-blind t-shirt emblazoned with "I

The College Voice February 22, 1993 Page 14

F - Ted Frischling - This man, once told by his high school basketball coach to "Stop playing those lower valves" during a bout with constipation, has broken the skin on his other fingers more than once during eating frenzies.

F - Tim Cenney - Spent $536 on meatball subs from Longo's Deli last week.

C - Ethan Brown - Four heart attacks last week.

G - Tom Satran - When his parrot "G - Tom" attacked his owner, he immediately prefers them he take it out to Rosie.

G - Kenny Widmann - His cholesterol levels is so high that his arteries have been reduced to a circumstance one-fiftieth of that of a common household pin.

Miscellaneous

The women's ice hockey team got another win this past weekend, squeaking by a local team 2-1. In- terim coach Masa Shino said after the win, "All five of Flail's starters scored in the double figures with Bottom Hall having a game high 21 points. Rollo Jones had 14 for the losers. In Sunday's final action, Montana was victorious over the All-eating Olympics to be held in April. This is the second straight year Dr. Bendor has won the tournament.

Women's Hoops finishes with 3-0 in New England Academy Conference

Continued from p. 16

off-balance jumper increased the lead to seven.

Conn finally iced the game with 1:26 left. Maica missed the second of a pair of free-throws, but Wood was able to control the loose ball and earn her own trip to the charity stripe. She converted both shots, and Conn had a 71-60 lead, essentially the game. Conn coasted to the victory.

Few people thought Wednesday's game against Coast Guard would be anything but a formality. Conn entered the game with a 3-16 record, compared with a 16-1 mark for their neighbors. The Academy's starting center, Amanda Velasquez, stands only 5'6", a half-foot shorter than Wood and Silberstein. Despite these two key factors working against them, the Coasters played a strong game...for about five minutes. The other 35 belonged to Conn, who used an opening 17-4 run to build a 39-15 half-time lead. Conn eventually coasted to an 86-36 win.

Wood poured in 22 points and Shar had 17. Gills added 17 and the understanding of the month when she said of her team's defensive effort, "We've been working on a perimeter defense all year. We did pretty well with that." Yeah, and War and Peace is a pretty long book.

The win against conference rival Bates completed Con's NECAC season, which they finished with a perfect 7-0 mark. The final regular-season home game is on Tuesday at 7pm against Pine Manor before heading to the road on Thursday at Nichols and Saturday at Manhattanville to finish up their season.

thing you know they'll have Zippy the Monkey authoring editorials... How about Derrick McNeill knocking down 9-3 pointers in an IM game this past Sunday... Touchdown Dobbigh!

Schmoozing's Believer II, or Transfer

Did you know that the average number of exclamation points and/or use of the word "awesome" in a dorm newsletter attached to a week's laundry bill is 1047 Believe it, or transfer.

Women's Hoops finishes with 3-0 in New England Academy Conference

Continued from p. 16

off-balance jumper increased the lead to seven.

Conn finally iced the game with 1:26 left. Maica missed the second of a pair of free-throws, but Wood was able to control the loose ball and earn her own trip to the charity stripe. She converted both shots, and Conn had a 71-60 lead, essentially the game. Conn coasted to the victory.

Few people thought Wednesday's game against Coast Guard would be anything but a formality. Conn entered the game with a 3-16 record, compared with a 16-1 mark for their neighbors. The Academy's starting center, Amanda Velasquez, stands only 5'6", a half-foot shorter than Wood and Silberstein. Despite these two key factors working against them, the Coasters played a strong game...for about five minutes. The other 35 belonged to Conn, who used an opening 17-4 run to build a 39-15 half-time lead. Conn eventually coasted to an 86-36 win.

Wood poured in 22 points and Shar had 17. Gills added 17 and the understanding of the month when she said of her team's defensive effort, "We've been working on a perimeter defense all year. We did pretty well with that." Yeah, and War and Peace is a pretty long book.

The win against conference rival Bates completed Conn's NECAC season, which they finished with a perfect 7-0 mark. The final regular-season home game is on Tuesday at 7pm against Pine Manor before heading to the road on Thursday at Nichols and Saturday at Manhattanville to finish up their season.
SPORTS

Adler schuches to 21st at regionals

by Jodie Grand
Sports Editor

Freshman Josh Adler finished 21st in both the slalom and giant slalom at the New England Regional Invitational ski race last weekend to cap off the season for the ski team.

In his first runs, Adler had to battle the cold, receiving low bids in both races which forced him to ski in conditions that were less than ideal. "It's really hard when you have such a low bid because than everyone else goes before you and the snow gets chewed up and it has a lot of runs," Adler said.

Despite the poor conditions Adler was able to make up 23 places after his first run in the slaloms and 18 places after his first run in the giant slalom. He proved to be even more successful in his second runs of both races. He said of his race on Sunday, "I was really happy with the way I skied in the second run today. I think my time might have been in the top ten, and definitely in the top fifteen." Adler's times in both of his second runs were good enough to move him in to 21st in both the slalom and giant slalom.

Adler's performance last weekend was quite impressive for his first showing in the race. He was able to qualify for regionals by defeating all the other individuals in New England whose teams had not already qualified. The freshman is more than likely to qualify for the race again but hopes that the Camels will also make it to regionals as a team.

This year was basically a rebuilding season for both the men's and women's ski teams. Competing in the ECAC East, the men's team finished an average of six out of ten while the women placed seventh of nine this season. However, next year the team will only lose one member to graduation, and with young stars like Adler, the Camels have a lot of potential.

Pallone to speak Tuesday

Dave Pallone, former Major League Baseball umpire for 18 years and author of a book about being gay in baseball, will lecture February 23 at 7:30 p.m. in Dana Hall. A reception and book signing will begin at 6:45. Admission is free.

"It's really hard when you battle the odds, receiving low bids in both races which forced him to ski in conditions that were less than ideal. "It's really hard when you have such a low bid because than everyone else goes before you and the snow gets chewed up and it has a lot of runs," Adler said.

Despite the poor conditions Adler was able to make up 23 places after his first run in the slaloms and 18 places after his first run in the giant slalom. He proved to be even more successful in his second runs of both races. He said of his race on Sunday, "I was really happy with the way I skied in the second run today. I think my time might have been in the top ten, and definitely in the top fifteen." Adler's times in both of his second runs were good enough to move him in to 21st in both the slalom and giant slalom.

Adler's performance last weekend was quite impressive for his first showing in the race. He was able to qualify for regionals by defeating all the other individuals in New England whose teams had not already qualified. The freshman is more than likely to qualify for the race again but hopes that the Camels will also make it to regionals as a team.

This year was basically a rebuilding season for both the men's and women's ski teams. Competing in the ECAC East, the men's team finished an average of six out of ten while the women placed seventh of nine this season. However, next year the team will only lose one member to graduation, and with young stars like Adler, the Camels have a lot of potential.

Hockey takes two straight on road before falling to Bowdoin

by Jon Wales
The College Voice

It was a busy week for the Colby College Hockey Team as it faced three tough opponents, all on the road. The week began on Tuesday night in Huntsburg against arch rival Trinity, continued on Friday night in Waterville, Maine against Colby and concluded Saturday afternoon in Brunswick, Maine against Bowdoin. All things considered, the week was a tremendous success for the Camels as they averaged the Trinity loss 4-2, edged Colby 3-2 and dropped a heartbreaker to Bowdoin 6-5.

"The Trinity game was one of the sweeter I've played in," said freshman Kevin Magnani who started in goal for Conn. "There was no music for warm-ups, and the only sounds all game were the refereewarning the two teams about 'goonism' before the contest opposite of its predecessor. With the way I skied in the second run today. I think my time might have been in the top ten, and definitely in the top fifteen." Adler's times in both of his second runs were good enough to move him in to 21st in both the slalom and giant slalom.

Adler's performance last weekend was quite impressive for his first showing in the race. He was able to qualify for regionals by defeating all the other individuals in New England whose teams had not already qualified. The freshman is more than likely to qualify for the race again but hopes that the Camels will also make it to regionals as a team.

This year was basically a rebuilding season for both the men's and women's ski teams. Competing in the ECAC East, the men's team finished an average of six out of ten while the women placed seventh of nine this season. However, next year the team will only lose one member to graduation, and with young stars like Adler, the Camels have a lot of potential.

Pallone to speak Tuesday

Dave Pallone, former Major League Baseball umpire for 18 years and author of a book about being gay in baseball, will lecture February 23 at 7:30 p.m. in Dana Hall. A reception and book signing will begin at 6:45. Admission is free.

"It's really hard when you battle the odds, receiving low bids in both races which forced him to ski in conditions that were less than ideal. "It's really hard when you have such a low bid because than everyone else goes before you and the snow gets chewed up and it has a lot of runs," Adler said.

Despite the poor conditions Adler was able to make up 23 places after his first run in the slaloms and 18 places after his first run in the giant slalom. He proved to be even more successful in his second runs of both races. He said of his race on Sunday, "I was really happy with the way I skied in the second run today. I think my time might have been in the top ten, and definitely in the top fifteen." Adler's times in both of his second runs were good enough to move him in to 21st in both the slalom and giant slalom.

Adler's performance last weekend was quite impressive for his first showing in the race. He was able to qualify for regionals by defeating all the other individuals in New England whose teams had not already qualified. The freshman is more than likely to qualify for the race again but hopes that the Camels will also make it to regionals as a team.

This year was basically a rebuilding season for both the men's and women's ski teams. Competing in the ECAC East, the men's team finished an average of six out of ten while the women placed seventh of nine this season. However, next year the team will only lose one member to graduation, and with young stars like Adler, the Camels have a lot of potential.
SPORTS

Conn Hoopsters coast by Bates, CGA, continue win streak at 15

by Matt Burstein
Assistant Sports Editor

Life is a series of extremes. A professor will assign no reading for Wednesday's class, then turn around and ask his or her students to read War and Peace for Thursday. The same rule applies in the world of basketball. Just a few days after blowing your opponent off the court, you can find yourself battling it out in a close game. That is exactly what happened to the women's basketball team last week. The 18-1 Camels, ranked fifth among Division III New England Teams, won their fourteenth and fifteenth straight contests by destroying Coast Guard 86-56 on Wednesday and struggling to get by Bates 72-65 on Saturday.

Bates, who carried a mark of 9-11, appeared on the surface to be another squaddish opponent. But senior co-captain Erika Gills thought otherwise. "We killed Bates last year," she said, adding, "But they've beaten Trinity, so we struggled to get by (62-59 last month), so it could be a close game."

It did indeed turn out that way. Yet with Conn leading 9-6 with 12:53 left in the first half, it appeared as though the game would be anything but close when the Bobcats temporarily lost their second-leading scorer, Antoinette Kenmare-Evans, to an injury.

But instead of packing up the bags and driving back to Lewiston, Bates played even better. A three-pointer began a 21-8 run for the visitors, whose extremely aggressive defense made it difficult for Conn to pass the ball. By the time the spur was over, Bates had hit another long-range bomb, gotten Kenmare-Evans back into the game, and grabbed a 27-19 lead with 5:16 remaining in the half.

Conn was not about to have their fourteen game winning streak snapped in their own gym. Bonnie Silberman (four points, eight rebounds) started the Camel comeback with two straight baskets, the second from a Martye Sher (12 points) pass to cut the Bobcat bulge 27-23.

Easy Wood (17 points, 15 rebounds, five assists, three blocked shots) continued where her classmate started. The senior co-captain grabbed one of her four steals on the day, dished all the way to the hoop, put a tremendous fake on her defender, and drew a foul. Her free throw cut the lead to three, and Conn was able to trail by only one at the half, 34-33, thanks to Sher's jumper with four seconds left.

Most of the second half was tighter than a Laxman room. Gills recorded two of her six points by knocking down a baseline jumper to give Conn its first lead, 35-34, since they led 11-10. It also began an exchange of baskets which continued throughout most of the exciting second half. Until the five minute mark.

C. J. Smart (19 points) hit two free throws to give Conn a 62-60 lead. She hit another twenty seconds later, but not before Sher had come off the court. The Bobcats led for most of the final two minutes, but not before Conn hit another free throw to make the score 64-62.

The Camels played hard but were not able to cut the lead or were not able to make the crucial defensive stop. To the teams credit they continued to fight throughout the game and refused to give up. Conn was led by another strong performance by Ted Frischling (14 points) and Freshman Andre Wright (12 points, ten rebounds) continued to impress with his strong all around play.

The men's hoop team concluded its season with a comfortable victory over Trinity. Their victory over Colby, and 24 in the triumph over Trinity, Magnani is a likely candidate for ECAC Player and/or Rookie of the Week.

Women's squash downs Tufts to finish season 11 – 10

by Jude Grand
Sports Editor

In a come from behind victory, the women's squash team squeaked past Tufts 5-4 yesterday at the Howe Cup tournament, placing the Camels 13th of 25 overall teams and fifth in the division of the competition.

After suffering losses to Dartmouth 8-1 and 7-2 the previous day in the tournament, Conn was determined to produce a win. The team struggled at first, losing their first four matches, but then the Camels fought back at the co-captains Robyn Wallace and Sara Bartholomew, junior Margaret Shergalis, sophomore Danny DeSola, and freshman Eliza Alsop each came up with big wins to give Conn the victory over Tufts. "Everyone was really pumped," she said. "We were ready to go and win this thing."

"We killed Bates last year," she said, adding, "But they've beaten Trinity, so we struggled to get by (62-59 last month), so it could be a close game."

The team struggled at first, losing their first four matches, but then the Camels fought back at the co-captains Robyn Wallace and Sara Bartholomew, junior Margaret Shergalis, sophomore Danny DeSola, and freshman Eliza Alsop each came up with big wins to give Conn the victory over Tufts. "Everyone was really pumped," she said. "We were ready to go and win this thing."

"We killed Bates last year," she said, adding, "But they've beaten Trinity, so we struggled to get by (62-59 last month), so it could be a close game."

Conn was not about to have their fourteen game winning streak snapped in their own gym. Bonnie Silberman (four points, eight rebounds) started the Camel comeback with two straight baskets, the second from a Martye Sher (12 points) pass to cut the Bobcat bulge 27-23.

Easy Wood (17 points, 15 rebounds, five assists, three blocked shots) continued where her classmate started. The senior co-captain grabbed one of her four steals on the day, dished all the way to the hoop, put a tremendous fake on her defender, and drew a foul. Her free throw cut the lead to three, and Conn was able to trail by only one at the half, 34-33, thanks to Sher's jumper with four seconds left.

Most of the second half was tighter than a Laxman room. Gills recorded two of her six points by knocking down a baseline jumper to give Conn its first lead, 35-34, since they led 11-10. It also began an exchange of baskets which continued throughout most of the exciting second half. Until the five minute mark.

C. J. Smart (19 points) hit two free throws to give Conn a 62-60 lead. She hit another twenty seconds later, but not before Sher had come off the court. The Bobcats led for most of the final two minutes, but not before Conn hit another free throw to make the score 64-62.

The Camels played hard but were not able to cut the lead or were not able to make the crucial defensive stop. To the teams credit they continued to fight throughout the game and refused to give up. Conn was led by another strong performance by Ted Frischling (14 points) and Freshman Andre Wright (12 points, ten rebounds) continued to impress with his strong all around play.

The men's hoop team concluded its season with a comfortable victory over Trinity. Their victory over Colby, and 24 in the triumph over Trinity, Magnani is a likely candidate for ECAC Player and/or Rookie of the Week.

Men's b-ball bows to both Bates, Wheaton and drops record to 6-14

by Ed Mottendorf
The College Voice

The men's basketball team continued its downward spiral this weekend, putting two mediocre performances against Wheaton and Bates. The team continues to slump because it is unable to put together a consistent effort for forty minutes.

Friday night highly ranked Wheaton was hosted by the Camels. Wheaton was too much for the Camels to contend with and came away with a 85-68 victory. They controlled the tempo and Conn much of the game, holding on to comfortable double figure leads. When Conn seemed ready to make a run they were turned away by Wheaton's strong team defense. The Camels played hard but were unable to take advantage of opportunities to cut into Wheaton's lead.

Wheaton was led by Chris Sullivan's 26 points. Conn got strong performances from Will Butt, Ted Frischling and Andre Wright.

On Saturday Bates College traveled to the Lupe Athletic Center and defeated the Camels 90-73. Bates' well-balanced attack and strong shooting performance was too much for Conn. Bates shot a very impressive 61 percent from the field led by Ross Morris (8-12, 18 points) and Brad Whitpole (8-11, 18 points). Bux led from the outset and Conn was never really able to mount any sort of rally. Whenever it seemed Conn was ready to break into Bates double figure lead, the Camels failed to convert easy shots or were not able to make the crucial defensive stop. To the teams credit they continued to fight throughout the game and refused to give up. Conn was led by another strong performance by Ted Frischling (14 points) and Freshman Andre Wright (12 points, ten rebounds) continued to impress with his strong all around play.

The men's hoop team concludes its season with games at Coast Guard on Tuesday and a home game for the seniors on Saturday versus NESCAC rival Tufts.

Athlete of the Week

This week's athlete of the week goes to KEVIN MAGNANI. The freshman goalie went 2-0 on the week, with 30 saves in a win over Colby, and 24 in the triumph over Trinity. Magnani is a likely candidate for ECAC Player and/or Rookie of the Week.