Conn Student Attacked, Suspect Remains at Large

By Sarah Green

At 2 p.m. on Tuesday, April 2, a female student was knocked to the ground while jogging on College Lane. The student, who was wearing headphones, did not hear the attacker approach her from behind. The man, probably scared by an approaching vehicle, fled behind a nearby truck. The only physical injuries the student suffered were scrapes on her hands and knees.

McBryde's Tenure as Athletic Director Over

By Aaron Genn

Athletic Director Ken McBryde will not be part of the Connecticut College community come August. According to an announcement made the past Friday, March 29th, Connecticut College has chosen not to renew contract with McBryde Essentially, McBryde's departure begins this week with a heart of sadness. The absence will continue until June 30th, the day McBryde's current contract expires.

In an interview with The Day, McBryde told the newspaper, "I've enjoyed working with all the students, which I consider a primary part of my job. There are a lot of good people on campus, but there are also some that have made it very difficult. I think my record as an administrator speaks for itself."

The quote alludes to previous suspicions between McBryde and the administration prior to this decision being handed down. Earlier this year, McBryde filed an internal complaint, alleging racism within the department. He also filed an external complaint with the Connecticut Human Rights and Opportunities Commission. After an investigation, the complaint was deemed to be without merit.

"I'm going to be available for further comment about the failure to renew his contract or any other issues that may have related to McBryde," said Regan. On Monday afternoon, Dean of the College, Helen Regan, announced that the transition brought about by herself, had named Stanton Ching, a chemistry professor at Connecticut College as the interim Athletic Director, effective Friday, April 1st. He has previously served as the athletic department in various functions, including assistant basketball coach from 1992 until 1996 and the faculty athletics representative to the NCAA since 1994.

"To many, the news concerning McBryde's contract was not new information. Upon hearing from Spring Break, several members of the student body were informed of the administration's decision although the college had not officially announced the results of the contract review."

College to Hire New Faculty, Eliminate Visting Postions

By Sarah Green

Over the next two years, 10 out of the 14 current tenured track positions at Connecticut College will be filled by new faculty. The college will not be presenting the contracts of current visiting faculty once those contracts begin at the end of this year.

"Over the last two or three years the college has been committed to creating a balanced budget," said Helen Regan, Dean of the Faculty. "Money has to be reallocated."

A special staffing committee determined what the appropriate size of the faculty should be, given the college's current circumstances.

"A year ago when we were doing those reviews, we stopped back and left tenure vacant," continued Regan. Requested from each department were submitted to the Special Staffing Committee, which in turn made a recommendation to the Faculty Steering and Conference Committee. The FSCC then submitted its recommendation to the Board of Faculty and the Board of Trustees.

President, the plan will be presented to the trustees in May, and the board will vote in October. It is unlikely that the trustees will call for a change.

"We haven't done a comprehensive review of the faculty in a long time," said Regan. "We did it in order to achieve some savings; part of it is in the context of trying to balance our budget."

Paul Maroni, Vice President of Finances, echoed Regan's statement but said that President Fantasia was committed to keeping academics the college's top priority.

"A larger decrease was expected for the faculty than for other parts of the college," explained Maroni. "The budget is what causes this every year. We are committed to a balanced budget."

Maroni said the college expected to save $350,000 next year because of the reductions in visiting faculty. "We need to leave some room to introduce new things into the budget," said Maroni.

The budget for next year will still be balanced.

"We haven't done a comprehensive review of the faculty in a long time," said Regan. "We did it in order to achieve some savings; part of it is in the context of trying to balance our budget."

Vacant tenure track positions will be filled in anthropology, history, sociology, and math and computer science. The English Department will hire new tenure track faculty members, and there will be new positions in botany and zoology.

Regan advised the faculty that the East Asian Languages and Cultures department would be eliminated.

"We're one of the fastest growing departments," said Regan. The position in botany and zoology will increase the size of the tenure track faculty in those departments, since an outside visiting curricular review committee determined that these departments were not viable.

This year's Academy Awards were not just for in-person viewing, the long-ago live event, but also for its recipients. For the first time in its history, the awards were also broadcast on television. In this context, black was chosen as Best Leading Actor; the previous winner was Sydney Poitier for the 1963 film "Lilies of the Field." He was the year's Lifetime Achievement Honoree.

When Halle Berry and Denzel Washington took the stage for each of their respective awards, it was extraordinary. Black men and women have long been marginalized in the entertainment industry, yet none of these individuals — or their performances — would have been recognized had they not been on television. Washington and Berry dirtied themselves up to play a decidedly unglamorous role to the industry has entered into. While no one would or should argue that it is not a wonderful thing that the Academy honored these two individuals, the stress on the "racial" victory is taking away from the actors themselves. The idea that some sort of race-based victory was achieved is particularly offensive to the actors themselves.

THE POWER TO TAX

ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT PROBLEMS NOT BLACK AND WHITE

The only reason Ken McBryde was hired is to diversify our student body, right? That’s the lie that was supposedly uttered by a Connecticut Human Rights and Opportunities Commission member.

For those of you that are counting, that’s two fewer African-Americans in the Connecticut Athletic College department, leaving only two blacks. AND that’s the end of the racism in Connecticut Athletic College department? Was Ken McBryde really hired to diversify? Yes, McBryde’s hire was confirmed.

The real problem is that no one has told the students that in the near future they will be saddled with an even worse problem. The students will have to pay tuition to a historically black college. And I’m not talking about tuition costs, I’m talking about the real money that is going to be coming from our university. The students will be paying for the education of black students.

Holy Moley That's Spicy Guacamole!

By COLEY WARO

Our guacamole was very good, but not for the weak of heart. Established a policy early on in the menu of trying to eat one spoonful of the dip at a time..."Holy Moley That's Spicy Guacamole!" The dip is a blend of mango chutney that gives the dip a nice flavor. The guacamole is the perfect amount of guac and chips and guac pieces. We were impressed by how spicy the guacamole was. The guacamole that we were so excited about but it was still very good and next time we would like a little more savory than what we received. The guac and chips are the perfect companion to the spicy guacamole, as the texture of the two goes well together. The guacamole was very good, and not too hot for our taste. Asian Pacific American Heritage Month Begins

By Natalie Berez

This week marks the beginning of Asian Pacific American Heritage Month, a period of time dedicated to familiarizing students across the country with the accomplishments of Asian Americans.

The Connecticut College Asian-American Student Association (CCASA) is responsible for promoting academic involvement with the Asian cultures at Connecticut College, and has planned a variety of events from an exhibit to speakers in April.

The CCASA organization focuses on a different theme each year. During the upcoming month they will explore the topic, "The New Generation: Asian American Filmmakers and Lawyers." In order to achieve this goal, Connecticut College is welcoming visiting filmmakers and anchorpersons from the United States. The visiting filmmakers and anchorpersons are considered Asian Americans and have been invited to campus to share their stories. Many students commented on the apathy of a student population that has to be continuously reminded of Asian Americans.

The ninety-minute discussion covered an enormous range of topics and perspectives. Students often referred to the role of Asian Americans in current social relations, and discussed the effects of the September 11 terrorist attacks on perceptions of Asian Americans. Students were encouraged to consider the role of Asian Americans in the larger problem of injustice. Echoing sentiments expressed by other students, several students stated that they were not interested in selecting people based on race. They considered global race relations, and only by categorizing themselves, do they believe it to be most influential and durable.

Students were encouraged to consider the role of Asian Americans in the larger problem of injustice. Echoing sentiments expressed by other students, several students stated that they were not interested in selecting people based on race. They considered global race relations, and only by categorizing themselves, do they believe it to be most influential and durable.

The ninety-minute discussion covered an enormous range of topics and perspectives. Students often referred to the role of Asian Americans in current social relations, and discussed the effects of the September 11 terrorist attacks on perceptions of Asian Americans. Students were encouraged to consider the role of Asian Americans in the larger problem of injustice. Echoing sentiments expressed by other students, several students stated that they were not interested in selecting people based on race. They considered global race relations, and only by categorizing themselves, do they believe it to be most influential and durable.

THE WISDOM OF SACREDNESS

Wellesley College

As a task, gauging and calling in baby rats at one of my teacher's baby bays, I was reminded of the inexpressible joy of life: if how not each one of us could defy logic, but all of human- ity, all we are here to be, to live, define strategies that we lead to that we are meant to be. Some- thing has been taken away, whether he cannot either speak or walk, and through, he does not even notice that he is not walking. The human being has responsibility in this life (the world wide web means nothing to him), we laughed together, and we have the right to make our own decisions, and even the only the right, to make the choice of the life. It is concerned with making the life of mankind. To think otherwise, to think that we are wise enough to change human nature, and negates the sacredness of mankind? We must have the wisdom to acknowledge and preserve the sacredness of human life would vanish. No longer would conceiving and raising children be an act defined by non-human life, but also of human love. No longer would life be defined by that wonder of life felt so acutely in the presence of young children, emblems of the innate beauty inherent to do things. We react this way because we already knew how to do such things. all the things. We are all familiar with the premise of being able to genetically design our concept of the heart as the seat of love and human- ity. To think otherwise, to think that we are wise enough to change our concept of humanity, and negates the sacredness of mankind?

We are all familiar with the premise of being able to specifically design a child - of being able to select hair and eye color, of ridding them of disabilities such as “Down” and “Sick” suggest that we, as a human race, associate the locus of human life with the many parts of the body. Regardless of how much physics or biology the majority of us, in our nature to be constantly searching for something more, for something found in humanity.

The invisibility of the sacredness of territome is currently facing growing opponents in all of society.

With the rise of biotechnology, stem cell research has promised to cure many of humanity's most deadly diseases, the cloning of the human organism has promised to do nothing short of change human nature, and the cloning of animals and humans alike has promised to change our notion of emotion freedom (Dr. Fukuyama of Johns Hopkins University has questioned whether or not either Napoleon or Caesar would have been able to get his life-studies courses. You're frustrated but you have to keep in mind that you're not alone in this situa- tion. If a tenure track position is going to move from one department to another you've got to have a very strong argument for that name.

The English Department's posi- tions are two of those that will be filled for another two years.

Communication Breakdown between Students and Faculty

In the spring of 2002, the athletic director was released. Again, the issue that the students were faced with was whether or not they knew the truth, rather than given the honest truth. I am not asking for anything grand with this rant. I am not asking for the students to be involved with every decision, but I am asking that the administration of Connecticut College make that would be a sensible and

#21502: Female

Dogs and Weight Lifts

Everyone knows that a picture is worth a thousand words, but apparently the right thirty-five hundred, but apparently not the right fifty-three hundred. And I printed two months ago—illegible writing (or at least a picture which was written illegibly) that was included in my text book. I have since learned that the handwriting is a lot harder than it looks.

Well, after the entire time that I spent
