Dean Speight Of Swarthmore At Easter Vespers

The increasing sensibilities of man to larger worlds, and the realizations of the dependence of the human race, as accurate measurements of the progress of civilization were discussed by Dean Harold E. B. Speight, of Swarthmore, who spoke at Vespers on Easter Sunday.

Dr. Speight used for illustration the stories of the Jesuit missionaries in China, who, several hundred years ago, before beginning his teachings, showed the Chinese a world-map, and pointed out to them that they were one people among many. He broke down their isolation by giving them a glimpse of man's possibilities, and an inkling of the existence of other men. He opened to them a "larger world.

So, too, did the pioneers of early America find their way to the Pacific coast. They realized the existence of other lands, beyond their small horizon, and by sacrifice and limitless faith, they found new opportunity and new life. They made progress, by becoming more and more sensitive to the significant things of their environment.

Sensitivity to other people, the breaking down of alienating barriers, and the conception of the brotherhood of the human race led to the realization of the interdependence of men. This spiritual progress, this is the opening of larger, more infinite worlds. It gives meaning to existence, and is the heart of religion itself.

Dean Speight cited two kinds of connection, in connection with the idea of sensitiveness to other people—first, the superficial knowledge of separate facts, and second, the appreciative understanding of the relationship of these facts, and of the deeper meanings which may be read into them. Our knowledge depends largely upon our awareness of the meanings of "larger worlds", and upon the extent of our interest.

Religion consists of the awareness of the larger worlds of spiritual meaning—the world to which we should actively respond. Faith is that trusting in the "Soul's invincible sensibility". The experience of faith, however delicate and indescribable, is, nevertheless, deeply rooted in the human heart and mind. It is a spiritual security—permanent, deathless, and unapproachable. It may be evidenced in the goodness of a friend—an intangible reality yet one to which reference is certain. The awareness of the meaning of the outside world gives an individual authentic tidings of larger things. "Birds of a feather will flock together", and "people will build" in a larger, infinite world. Without it, life is hollow and worthless.

Dr. Chamberlin To Visit Campus May 5, 6, and 7

Will Talk On "The Investment Of Explained"

Connecticut College is looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to having Dr. Roy B. Chamberlin on its campus again. He is speaking at the request of the student body for three days: May 5, 6, and 7. Dr. Chamberlin will continue his discussion on "The Investment Of Explained"

"Larger Worlds"

The American Council of Learned Societies, which promotes the study of the largest and most influential of the American scholarly societies in the fields of Philosophy, Archaeology, Linguistics, History, Religion, and Social Sciences, has again honored Dr. John Edwin Wells, professor of English in Connecticut College, by awarding to him one of its grants for 1935-1936.

Six of the years 1923-1934 and 1934-1935 the Council voted him some of its largest grants. These awards are toward the preparation of Dr. Wells's encyclopedia and bibliography "The Fifteenth Century English Writings in English", which will cover all writings in English for the period and all editions, volumes and critical studies concerned with them up to the date of publication of his book. The work will advance from 1500 of his bibliographical studies that his "Manual of the Writings in Middle English" carried from 1050 to 1400.

The Connecticut Academy of Arts and Sciences, by whom the Manual and its five Supplements have been published, recently announced the new subscription to December of the Sixth Supplement to this work to cover all publications in the field between June 1922 and July 1935. The new subscription will be issued through the presses of Yale University for America and Oxford University Press for abroad.

Dr. Wells has been appointed by the Modern Language Association of America a member of the three-member committee which Sir William Craigie, editor of the Oxford Dictionary and the Scottish Dictionary, is the chairman, to formulate policies and principles for improving the choice and the methods of translation of Middle English works to be edited by publishing societies and individual scholars.

Mr. Royal B. Farmum Of Design School To Speak Here May 7th

The Present And Future Outlook For Art Is Subject

Art education today has been developed as has any education with ideas of individual analysis. The Rhode Island School of Design approaches art education from this standpoint. In all of its departments of costume design, landscape painting, sculpture, commercial design, jewelry, textiles, or education of art, the teacher plays the subordinate role. Like the early artist Giotto who at first knew nothing of different media, of perspectives, of technique, but who had to discover all the possibilities for effect, so a student in the Rhode Island School of Design must discover for himself through the handling which is possible for him to create. He serves as an apprentice, and learns step by step the creation of art.

Organization Of Peace Action Has Wesleyan Speaker

Tuesday, April 28, the creation of the League of Connecticut College became an actuality with the election of an executive committee. The open meeting of the Chairmen elected to Publicity, Elaine Dorothy Pike, the girl who has not only done the most to bring to the eyes of the students the importance of the question, but has carried the idea through to the point where an organization is possible. Jean Van derbilt was named Secretary. Her work for the furtherance of peace has been efficient and consistent, her cooperation instrumental in bringing about the newly-formed organization.

A third member, elected to the executive committee was Betty Gerould, a junior, who served as Chairman of the Speakers' Bureau. Her experience as head of the Model League, Connecticut College representative in Geneva last summer, and other activities has placed her in a position to adequately undertake the large work she will be called upon to do the many-sided subject of Peace Action. The executive committee rounds out its number with the Chairmen of Publicity, Elaine Thompson. Her active interest in the movement, and past experience with publicity will serve as a good grounding for the duties of this position.

The outline of the Peace Action program the new Council has adopted. However, many concrete and helpful suggestions were made in an address given by Bob Craig, one of the three student organizers of the movement at Wesleyan University. Of primary importance to the Peace Movement, Bob Craig asserts, is organization and study. At Wesleyan, the League was organized with a president, secretary, and three chairmen for Students' Committees. These compose the executive committee. The three speakers groups are those that give talks to Young People's organizations, Labor groups, and to Adult groups.

Lectures, study groups with weekly reports to the League, panel discussions led by faculty members, library displays, bulletin board exhibits, and a section in the library for literature are all effective ways of bringing to all students enlightened information on the subject of peace. The discussion groups are valuable to students because then they get facts, illustrate examples, and a general background for any questions that might arise.

Another form of activity undertaken by Wesleyan University is its censoring of war propaganda in the (Continued to Page 3—Col. 4)
If you want a real laugh, get Anne Crowell to tell her story about how she was caught in a train last winter. While she got on and off while she got off.

The fragrant odors about Funning were due to the many corsages worn on the Monday after Easter, scarves, and roses—take your choice.

Easter week-end that we almost think the social column would do better to publish the names of those few who stayed around and heard Easter sermons in New London. But since that isn't the sort of thing that is usually done, we were interested to hear that Anne Crowell had her week-end at the Phi Sigma Kappa house at Cornell and Marcie Brown visited relatives in Philadelphia. Mary Hellwig, Bee Enquist and Harriet Benton were guests of Ginnie Wilson in Pittsfield, Mass., Sally Nooney and Betty Brewer of Ronnie Minaer in Swampscott, Ruth Earle of Sally Kingsdale in Brookline, while Betty Fairbanks and Emily Lewis visited Emmy's uncle in Waban, Mass.

Easter week-end called many students away from Blackstone House. Among the numerous girls who went home were Barbara McLeod and Alice Cobb; Margaret Bennett visited the time in Hartford, Janet McNulty visited her sister in Boston, and Helen Rakon visited the bachelor girls in Wickford, R. I. Other students, who returned home for the few days were: Jean Rothschild, Louise Purdy and Joyce Walker.

The young man escorting a certain senior on crotches had a most difficult afternoon last week. Do you make a habit of spilling things, please?

If you are a member of the community, you should all take every opportunity to know Easter with your parents. Shirley Jan Reinheimer went to Nutley, N. J.; Roberts Chace went to Mystic, Conn.; and Betsy Beals visited friends in Albany, N. Y.

President Blunt Talks On Creative Imagination Tues.

Application of the creative imagination to everyday tasks was the subject of President Katherine Blunt’s talk at chapel Tuesday, April 23rd. She encouraged the students to use their own creative imaginations to further the development of their characters.

President Blunt described the situation which interferes with the best use of our creative imaginations. One reason is too much thought of self-confidence; we do not believe that we have the ability to do things. We must believe in ourselves before we can make any great accomplishments.

Another reason is the antithesis of this one. This is a lack of self-confidence; we do not believe that we are capable of achieving anything. Just as too much self-absorption interferes with our creative ability so does too great a humility.

In positive terms the way to put the best use our creative imagination is not to think that we are above our tasks nor to think that our jobs instead of our creative imaginations to further the development of our characters.

Seniors Discuss College Problems With Miss Blunt

President Blunt is having again this year a series of after-dinner coffees in her home for groups of Seniors. The purpose is to discuss various college problems and to give the girls a chance to make suggestions about possible improvements in C. C. There have been two coffees thus far. The question put to the first group was, when and if wings are built onto the campus office.

Famous Mathematician Dr. Emmy Noether Dies

The College was shocked and grieved to hear that Dr. Emmy Noether, one of the most eminent modern mathematicians, and visiting lecturer in mathematics at Bryn Mawr, died on April 14 after undergoing a serious operation.

Dr. Noether was born at Erlangen in 1882, the university at which her father, Dr. Max Noether, was a professor of mathematics of great note. Dr. Noether received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Erlangen in 1907. She was Privatdozent and Professor of Mathematics at the University of Göttingen. Some of the most distinguished German students of mathematics have been her pupils. The Rockefeller Foundation and the Emergency Committee in Aid of Displaced German Scholars made it possible for the Department of Mathematics to invite her to Bryn Mawr. Her special field was modern algebra, in which she solved difficult problems in calculus, and about which she wrote in many German mathematical periodicals.

Dr. Noether came to Bryn Mawr in the fall of 1933. Last year she gave a course in Modern Algebra to four graduate students, and this year three research fellows with unusual previous records were especially chosen to study with her. Staufer has just completed the thesis on which she was working with Dr. Noether. Miss Momose is the only undergraduate who has studied with her. The College News, Bryn Mawr.

Gertrude Allen Is Delegate For Conn.

Student To Spend Summer In Geneva

The 1935 session of the Students International Union in Geneva will be held this summer. The delegate chosen is usually a history major, although this is not always the case. The final elimination of the students is made by Mrs. Alex Hadden, Vice-President of the Union; her selection is made after personal interviews.

There are usually ten delegates from the United States, who leave on June 25th, spending one week in Paris and eight weeks at lectures and classes in the Union.

The week-ends consist of side trips to bordering countries and scenic spots. Besides hearing discussions and lectures by the director, Pitman B. Potter of the University of Wisconsin and a visiting lecturer at the College of Higher Studies, students have the benefit of listening to prominent figures in international fields, such as: Norman Angell, Harold Butler, Manley Hudson, Gilbert Murray, and representatives of foreign countries who are connected with the League.

There have been three delegates from Connecticut who have gone to Geneva. Alice Kelly '34, Betty Gerhart '35, and Gertrude Allen '36, who was recently elected. She lives in Trenton, New Jersey, attended West Windsor and Princeton. Bradford Junior College, transferring to Connecticut in Sophomore year; she is on Dean's list and active in International Relations.

Naturally Gertrude Allen's activities will be of interest to the college as a whole. Everyone will be anxious to hear about them in September.

The Cornell University polo team was forced to give a regular place on the squad to a co-ed, because she outplayed the men.

London Celebrates Birth Of Handel

The 250th anniversary of Handel's birth could not pass unnoticed in any country where music is known and appreciated, and especially could it not pass unnoticed in England, which country has sought to pattern her composers after the great Handel. A recent concert in London brought to the fore several of Handel's less known works—the cantata Asa and Galathea, the concerto grosso in D Minor and the Coro di Vittorio. Choruses, post-Handel Handel's usual activities and arias, of the usual quietness, were not lacking. Modern music says one, an English critic, is undoubtedly richer, more potent and manifold art, but it has lost that peace of mind and heart that was the royal prerogative of the older composers. How difficult it is for us to imagine it and recreate it is proved by the singular fidelity of modern interpreters to play on old music. —The Times

PROFESSOR CHASE PUBLISHES VOLUME

Professor E. P. Chase, of the department of government and law, has just published, through Thomas Nelson & Sons, of New York, a volume on the government and politics of England, entitled "Democratic Governments of Europe and America." Half the volume is devoted to a description of the government of England, and the rest to an account of political developments from the end of the World War up to 1934. It is the result of Dr. Chase's studies in the development of the English constitution, and his acquaintance with English affairs during his visits to England during his sabbatical leave of absence in 1932, and in the summer of 1934.

At the special request of Professor Pomson of Shillibridge, leader of the opposition in the House of Lords, Professor Chase has recently sent Professor Pomson copies of his article "House of Lords Reform since 1911."

OPERA RENDERED IN ENGLISH IS SUCCESS

Opera in English is being tried out at present. Two well-known opera men, Reiner and Dr. Graf, recently offered The Barber of Seville in an English translation done by Natalie McFarren. Students comprised the cast but those who heard it said that there were few, if any, traces of artificiality in the singing and certainly none in the musical direction. The English text had no other special merit than its clarity but that fact in itself is rare enough in opera-in-English scores. The Curtis Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Reiner, provided the orchestra.

SHAW IS A DEAD GOD, AUSTIN GRAY ASSERTS

Mr. Austin K. Gray, speaking on "Bernard Shaw in Retrospect", announced that Shaw is honorably dead; he has outlived his generation and is buried with a bronze head.

Shaw did two things in his plays: he stimulated people to think, and he made large personal fortunes. "He is Shaw's most important asset, and even they led to a fault; that of sacrificing the play to the dialogue. Characterization, says one of the exceptions, is almost completely lacking in Shaw's plays."

Recently one of the English weeklies conducted a poll to find out who is the biggest bore in England. There were more than a thousand candidates, and of these, Shaw won by an overwhelming majority. His popularity indicates that whatever he may have to say will be heard with that respect which he deserves.

Although Shaw is honorably dead, he is not yet honorably interred. Westminster Abbey still yearns for a Latin inscription: 'In memory of a man.' The younger generation of today has turned completely away from him.

The pre-war generation, Shaw was the leading god. Besides stimulating thought and making the thought ludicrous, Shaw "talked a lot - a lot about略有, the sins, and supermen." He had, too, a loudly proclaimed doctrine that women were not individuals, but modes of speech, and not women at all.

"Can Tell." He was the most dangerous heresy. He thought women were not individuals, but modal characters; his plays consist merely of dialogue and paradox. Shaw is the worst in characterization women. Because of his doctrine of women's lack of soul and their single purpose, he has gained the women's respect and not a scrap of their affection.

One of the main criticisms of Shaw is that he has no sense of character; his plays consist merely of dialogue and paradox. Shaw is his worst in characterization women. Because of his doctrine of women's lack of soul and their single purpose, he has gained the women's respect and not a scrap of their affection.

Because of this, Shaw's plays are never performed anywhere. When they are not performed, they are never performed anywhere. Shaw's plays are never performed anywhere. When they are not performed, they are never performed anywhere. Shaw's plays are never performed anywhere. When they are not performed, they are never performed anywhere.

LAFAYETTE DEBATE TO BE BROADCAST OVER STATION WJZ

Varisty debating for the season will conclude Saturday afternoon, when the Lafayette debating team will engage the Mount Holyoke forensic squad in a radio broadcast.

The debate will be broadcast from the National Broadcasting studios in Rockefeller Center. It will begin at 11:30 a.m. and will commence at three o'clock in the afternoon.

The question to be debated is, "Resolved, that Dutch Treat Destroys Are Desirable." The women's college will uphold the affirmative side of the question, while Lafayette will defend the negative.

Lafayette will be represented by Captain Glen L. Tischer '33, and Bernard A. Helling 36. Helling appeared in the radio debate last year.

Six Minute Talks

The speeches will each be six minutes long. The affirmative side of the Mount Holyoke will speak first, therefore giving the first and third addresses Lafayette will have the second and final speech.

Tischer will deliver the first Lafayette address, and Helling will speak the second. It is not until Miss Mildred Billings, captain of the Mount Holyoke team, and one of the outstanding debaters in the east, will deliver the affirmative side for her school.

The debate will bring an end to the Lafayette career of Glenn Tischer. Helling is one of four Lafayette debaters to have debated on the varsity for three years, and one of a year as a member of the freshman debating team. The debate will also bring an end to the season for Helling, who will complete an undefeated season for forensic competition. In debates this season, he has debated the decisions of fourteen out of fifteen judges.

This record is outstanding in debate history at Lafayette.

The Lafayette radio debate that has been held between the two colleges. These debates have been arranged by Miss Margaret Cuthbert, chairman of the program department of the National Broadcasting Company.

Debated in 1933

The first debate between Lafayette and Mount Holyoke was held in May, 1933. The topic in question was, "Resolved, that Compulsory Military Training for Women is Desirable." Miss Emily Post was on the stage, as well as acting as chairman. Her decision was in favor of the affirmites, Professor Albert H. Gilmer, of the department of Speech and Dramatics, and coach of the debating team was at the first meeting of the organization, and the debate is expected to present a strong case by Saturday.

The debate has been arranged as a part of the modern movement to have intercollegiate debates on subjects of lighter vein, yet with interest to the students.

League for Promotion of War Is Organized

Iowa City, La. — A "League for the Promotion of War" has been organized at the University of Iowa.

Founded by a group of students who believe that dictatorship is the only solution for the complex problems of modern civilization, the new club is opposed to another group here which advocates world peace.

Compulsory military training for all male citizens in the United States was one of the resolutions passed at the first meeting of the organization.

In addition, if this club has its way, all college students, both men and women, would be required to take an active part in the military service.

The group leaders plan to invite Henry P. Long to become its honorary leader.

ZIP

The "League for the Promotion of War" is one of the new type of foundations with the talon fastened to it. It is not an abbreviated summer session, but a well-rounded Executive Secretarial course designed for those who want to attend a college course almost all year. This course, called "Six Weeks' Secretarial Train," begins July 9. In eight months October 1.

The addition of secretarial training to regular courses allows students to continue their regular courses. This is a course in business stenography, shorthand, typewriting, and office practice.

The course is being offered in all parts of the United States. The time is flexible, and the course is designed to meet the needs of the individual student.

"Sure, enjoy yourself," said Jim. "It's a ding good cigarette."

I was working way late at the office one night and ran out of cigarettes. When Jim the watchman came through I tackled him for a smoke.

"Sure," says Jim, and he handed over a pack of Chesterfields. "Go ahead, Mr. Kent, take three or four."

Jim said he'd smoked a lot of cigarettes in his time, but he'd put Chesterfield up in front of any of 'em when it came to taste.

..."and they ain't a bit strong either," is the way Jim put it.

That was the first Chesterfield I ever smoked. And I'm right there with him, too, when he says it's a ding good cigarette.
