I am glad of the chance to tell you of my appreciation of your friendly cooperation in the important task assigned to me during the first year. The inaugural is for you; the development of the college is large part dependent upon you. We can build a great college only if we do it together—students, faculty, administration.

Thank you sincerely for your help.

Katharine Blunt, President.
MASEFIELD NAMED POET- LAUREATE

The King has gratuitously pleased to appoint John Masefield, Esq., D. Litt., to be Poet Laureate in the Province of Ireland. Mr. Masefield announced through the Press that he does not intend to write academic odes, but that he will endeavor to write in the vein of his former verse. Masefield was a poet laureate in the United States, and he is expected to return to Ireland shortly.

EDITORIAL

Our President

It is with great pleasure that we congratulate our President at this time of his inauguration. It is as timely, too, as an illustration of the good fortune of having as a leader one who has brought with him the riches of experience and background of problems. In higher education in a great university; and as a president of one of the leading colleges of America, our President is an individual in each and every student's life. He will understand their little problems.

We trust here that we can fulfill our part as we wish to do; that we consider carefully, weigh all interests and cooperate in our abilities in meeting those problems in which we are concerned.

EDUCATIONAL TRENDS

Charles F. Thwing, President Emeritus of the University of Chicago, in a recent article in the New York Times, says that the present college year is marked by a trend toward more and more emphasis on the individual, inductively of attention toward students by presidents and faculty members, and in all aspects of college standards. An increasing interest is being given to the more academically interests such as debating and on minor sports such as riding, fencing, or sailing, rather than on intercollegiate athletic events or the well-known "college spirit" that resulted in a certain "world-mindedness" on the part of the student body. We believe that this is, in great part, causing the continual influx of foreign students into our universities and colleges, along with the growing desire on the part of American students to attend schools abroad. This education is not confined to our own country, and the desire to go abroad has increased in student exchange. Quoting from figures compiled by the Institute of International Education we find that year-to-year increase in student exchange and insure the soundness of the principles upon which such organizations are based. The idea that "higher education in the United States is aimed at the general student, and that the idea of the "American Education are founded—that it is wise for them to be provided for their national education at home and go to foreign countries for graduate or professional studies."

Debates May be permitted to introduce again a subject which I fear is becoming hackneyed. Once upon a time it was suggested that this should happen. Vesper is at least on one Sunday in the month, as her honor. If our students feel that a scientific term allows her mind to be involved in the discussions of the day, they must have been most entertaining for him. He had something to give us; something we all know, but which we seldom have presented to us.

But I am digressing. To get back to our starting-point; the Honor System to me- docs not seem to be working. Even if you should arrive at Vesper's attendance naturally fluctuates. The last rather than according to the one-month attendance which we gave as an example, at least between 90 to 93% in Connecticut, a shrinking of their duty. Must we now consider them as Vesper students, or should we look forward to the future?

That word "future" suggests another point. Since Vesper's attendance naturally fluctuates, the last rather than according to the one-month attendance which we gave as an example, at least between 90 to 93% in Connecticut, a shrinking of their duty. Must we now consider them as Vesper students, or should we look forward to the future?

When we consider the leads and bounds by which little Japan, less than one-sixtieth as populous as China, has entered into world prominence since the year 1895, we can very few years working before the mast in wind-jammers. His early years impressed the impressions which he received during his sailing days. Leaving the sea, young Masefield took to books. He came to America where he wrote his first novel in Connecticut. In a carpet shop in New York State, and finally in New York City. He tried street-singing, he even scrubbed floors in a saloon. He began a transcr cross-country journey, and an end that and went back to Europe. During these years he brought to noticeable his thesaurus reader and is practically self-taught. It is known that he spent part of his early life with his stepfather and that he benefited from this freedom considerably.

Masefield has been living near Oxford for some years. Here he has his own theatre and has produced many plays in his own garden, among them King Lear and Hamlet. exposition.

A poverty-stricken and wandering Masefield is now a moderately wealthy man and one of the most poetful of today, and the first poet of English at his time.

THE NIGHT CLUB MYSTERY

By Elizabeth Jordan

The Night Club Mystery is a murder mystery which is actually written in the form of a detective story. The characters are of the ordinary sort, and the setting is a club. The plot is carefully worked out, and the solution is a surprise to the reader. The characters are well-drawn, and the mystery is gripping. The novel is written in non-fictional terms of running off with nothing. (Continued on page 5, column 2)
Yale Chaplain Speaks At Vesperes

"What is man that thou art mindful of him?" was the text of the sermon delivered by Dr. Elmer Morey Martin, Librarian of Yale University, at the Vesper Service on Sunday, May 11. Explaining that this is the eternal question, he introduced the question of one trying to solve the mystery of life, Dr. McKee correlated the solution of Professor Huntington, in his interesting talk, What is Man? with that of Dr. McKee with emphasis on the nature of the eternal soul, and the religious and the scientific approaches to the problem of man.

Should a novice want to become aware of the miracle of transformation accomplished by art in its interplay with the years, then he might well begin with the third picture singled out, the last of the series in this exhibition. The water colors are still in the making, as the nobleness of the characters of the play, "Journey's End," leaves them unanswered; by which they conducted themselves in the few moments before their deaths, they had confessed that a man is, therefore, more than a composition of God's elements, more than the sum of his personality, as it is proved by the great picture, the final work of James, who knew little of science, and yet understood the realms of the mind.

CIVIL SERVICE VACANCY

The United States Civil Service Commission, in order to continue its open competitive examination, has decided to advertise for a Research Specialist in Home Economics Education.

Applications for research specialist in home economics education must be filed on U. S. Civil Service Commission form, Washington, D. C., not later than June 18, 1930.

The examination is to fill vacancies under the Federal Board of Education for Women, Washington, D. C., and vacancies occurring in positions requiring qualifications similar to those of a research specialist in the field of home economics.

The entrance salary is $4,664 a year, higher salaries being paid for positions filled through promotion.

The duties are to plan and conduct research studies and investigations in the field of home economics education; to prepare for publication reports of studies and investigations; to do technical editing of material for publication; to serve as advisor and consultant in the planning and conduct of research activities throughout the country. "THE NIGHT CLUB MYSTERY" (Concluded from page 2, column 2)

You may have seen the pictures of men and women doing research work of distinction, both social and economic; of peace problems in the education of young children, and of international relations, all good work, though necessary. Because you will also be a member of the International Federation of University Women, and will find friends who have shared with you the experiences and happy privileges of higher education, although they may belong to branches in France, Japan, or Russia, or even find themselves in the United States, you may be sure to visit Held Hall, the American Association of University Women's Center, a pictureque old mission church on the rue de Chevreuse, which has one of the loveliest gardens in the Latin Quarter. In London, do not fail to see Crosby Hall, a beautiful historic building, the British center of the International Federation, now the home of young women doing research work of distinction, on fellowships provided by the federation.

This aid to splendid young women of various nationalities, was planned by Dr. Caroline F. Ford, present president of the federation, and its permanent secretary, with our own President W. A. Howard, as chairman of the committee of three.

The guest of honor was Dr. Spalding, in his talk of "The American Women". He said of the American woman that she was "capable of heroism, of courage, of endurance... She is, we believe, built for pure amusment, by an artist interested in his public, and ready for any title with a dash."

Who sent the calla lily?

One of us prefers lectures given by a woman. "If you get bored," says our friend, "you can always look at her clothes." True! how true!

Sophomores are happy at last. The Freshmen did have a six o'clock pageant. "If you want to know the details of the pageant," said our friend, "you can always look at her clothes." True! how true!

Preshmen did have a six o'clock pageant. "If you wonder what brand they indorse?" said our friend. "You can always look at her clothes." True! how true!
