WELL-KNOWN ECONOMIST
APPOINTED TO C. C.

Dr. Edith Ayres Is New Member of Faculty

The new faculty member in economics has been appointed. Dr. Edith Ayres. She is to be visiting professor of economics. She comes from New York University but at the present time is in London on a Social Science Research Council Fellowship making an historical study of consumption in England. Dr. Ayres' undergraduate work was done at Wellesley, and her graduate work at the University of Chicago where she received her doctorate in 1921. She has been executive secretary of Consumers' Research and of the Association for Medical Progress, and before going to New York University, she taught at Wellesley and Mount Holyoke.

Dr. Ayres is not only a competent and experienced economist, but a woman of a great variety of interests, an able pianist, and one who will take an active part in college life. Dr. Ayres' election of courses takes place on May 8th it is hoped that the courses which she is to teach will be well attended.

Dr. Ayres has written considerably. She has written for the Encyclopedia of Economic Behavior, and several chapters on consumption in Economic Behavior, a book which is being used this year by Mr. Cobbledick in his courses.

WELL-KNOWN EDITOR ADDRESSES YESPERS

Dr. L. P. Jacks Speaks of Christ's Offer to the People

"Christ's Offer to the Masses of the People" was the subject of the address of Dr. Lawrence Pearson Jacks, when he spoke at the Yesper Service of Connecticut College on Sunday evening. Dr. Jacks, the editor of the Hibbert Journal, cited a quotation of Thoreau to the effect that speaking the truth is an act which no one person can do by himself. There must be two people, one to speak and the other to hear and understand.

The people who listened to Jesus comprised an interesting and unusual audience. These multitudes Jesus invited to share his cross and to take part in his suffering. This test of discipleship was the one test that Jesus offered. In doing so he launched a staggering proposal that was too difficult for plain men and women to understand. It was a call, a shaking of the dreams of life, that was based on and fundamentally consistent of suffering and self-reliance.

C. O. C. TAKES PART IN SECOND I. O. C. A. MEETING

Yale is Host to Members At Their Engineering Camp

Outing Clubs Tell of Many Interesting Trips

With woods, hills, and lakes giving a real campy out-door spirit to the occasion, the second annual conference of the Intercollegiate Outing Clubs Association convened at the Yale Engineering Camp. Yale University acted as hosts to the Conference and made all arrangements for securing the camp and supplying and cooking the food. Thornton L. Page, President of the Yale Outing Club, was in charge.

Upon arrival, Friday night, informal games were played in the main hall in order to get every one acquainted. The formal part of the evening ended with the singing of college songs around a blazing fire.

Saturday morning everyone hiked around the lake and then back to the hotel. After breakfast discussion groups on the lawn. Many interesting experiences of the various Outing Clubs were spoken of. During the early afternoon, two more periods of discussion took place. The topics discussed were: Trips, Finance, Cabins, Equipment, Organization, Campus Support, Special Projects, and Publicity. After the discussion everyone joined in a game of Touch-foot-ball and then went swimming.

Saturday night was given over to the general meeting of the I. O. C. A. The president of the Yale Outing Club was chosen to choose the Executive Secretary for the next year from their Outing Club. Then followed Chapel on the lawn. Then President Blunt spoke briefly and fittingly on Spring and Nature and what one can get from them. First, one gets a sense of independence being out-of-doors and feeling and seeing spring in all its beauty. Second, an even deeper advantage, one can obtain from all this beauty, inspiration. She enjoined her audience not to let Wordsworth's words about the swift passing of glory depress them as they are not applicable here. President Blunt suggested that perhaps we can strengthen our natures by the study of life by thinking how we fit into the scheme of things. Almost everyone has studied biology and knows that our human race is always progressing and we may aid it to progress by the use of intelligence and by appreciation of the beauty of life, which after all, is within ourselves.

Thoughtfully, Seniors wound their way back to their cabins, singing by the Seniors at noon in the quadrangle. More classes and off again in the afternoon (minus dignity) to enjoy a picnic in the riding ring.

CADY CONTEST IS HELD

The annual Cady Prize Speaking Contest was held in Knowlton Tuesday evening, May 2. There were sixteen contestants, and the winner was announced at Commencement. The judges were Dr. Wells, Miss Kempston, Miss Nye, Miss Hall, Dr. Erb, and Professor Noyce.

For ten consecutive years the college has been the recipient of

TRADITIONAL MAY DAY ROLLS AROUND AGAIN

May Day! In accordance with past traditions it is the day still observed in spite of wholesale cutting down of traditions; it is the day consecrated solely to Seniors. At five o'clock early May morning, sleepy sophomore girls zigzagged down halls to hang May baskets on the door of Senior rooms and Seniors crept out to deck posts on campuses with orange and purple streamers. Then followed singing by the choir and breakfast at 7:15. Then President Blunt announced his resignation for the occasion. This attraction occasioned more singing by the seniors. And so to classes, black gowns relieved by bright corsages, shining faces trying hard to look Senior-like.

Then followed Chapel on the steps of the stair, gray library with a large number of people in attendance. It was truly a stirring sight: the sun shining down like a benediction from overhead on young faces. After a responsive reading led by Dr. Laubenstein, the choir sang a selection. Then President Blunt spoke briefly and fittingly on "Nature and What One Can Get from Them." First, one gets a sense of independence being out-of-doors and seeing and feeling spring in all its beauty. Second, an even deeper advantage, one can obtain from all this beauty, inspiration. She enjoined her audience not to let Wordsworth's words about the swift passing of glory depress them as they are not applicable here. President Blunt suggested that perhaps we can strengthen our natures by the study of life by thinking how we fit into the scheme of things. Almost everyone has studied biology and knows that our human race is always progressing and we may aid it to progress by the use of intelligence and by appreciation of the beauty of life, which after all, is within ourselves.

Thoughtfully, Seniors wound their way back to their cabins, singing by the Seniors at noon in the quadrangle. More classes and off again in the afternoon (minus dignity) to enjoy a picnic in the riding ring.

HEAD OF ENGLISH DEPT. PUBLISHES NEW BOOK

Dr. Wells' "English Studies"

In English Studies, published in Leipzig, German Professor John Edwin Wells of Connecticut College, illustrates curious magazine practices in the early 19th century and amusing antics of a characteristic prig by Charles and Mary Lamb, authors of Tales from Shakespeare and Essays of Elia. In Hone's Table Book for 1827 is a quaint sketch of a female in a huge poke bonnet awkwardly astride a stile, with verses beneath it in the manner of Cowper's John Gilpin's Ride, and a circumstantial notice that they were found among the poet's papers, and are fragments of an account of Mrs. Gilpin's efforts to emulate her equestrian husband. Several German and British scholars have gravely discussed the poet's authorship, and the verses are printed as authentic in the standard edition of his poems.

Dr. Wells points out that the matter originated in Mary Lamb's difficulties in surmounting the numerous sidles in her walks about the home at English-Lamb induced the famous humorist Thomas Hood to make the sketch of his sister in her walking costume, and himself wrote the verses beneath it. Then at Mary's instigation he turned the fun into a hoax on the general public by sending the items to the sympathetic editor of Table Book with the accompanying attribution to Cowper, and surprised and delighted Hood with a copy direct from the publisher.

The April number of the London quarterly Review of English Studies prints a short article by Dr. Wells supplementary to his earlier London Times studies of variants between copies of two poems of The Lyrical Ballads of 1798 by William Wordsworth and Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

SCHOLARSHIP APPLICATION BLANKS

Application blanks for 1933-34 scholarships may be secured in the President's Office.

Tennis blanks must be returned to Miss Smith before June first. Some awards will be announced before college class in August.

As the number of requests for scholarships for next year will be unusually large, each student is asked only for an amount which is absolutely necessary in aiding her return next year.

KATHARINE BLUNT, President.
Editorial

Five more weeks and the class of 1933 walks out of Connecticut forever. A sense of gloom hangs over the glad formality of this May Day celebration, a haunting sadness that is more than a sentimental effusion over the parting of the ways. Somehow it is a different atmosphere about the campus than has been known in other years. Why? Where? What causes it?

Fear! The class of 1933 looks into the future with trembling alarm. There is an irrational fear of what is going to happen to homes whose ways are not our ways, whose ideas are not our ideas, whose feelings are not our feelings. We have caught glimpses of other times when the world was solid—when people were real people and lived as such. We have seen at least the chapters behind our slumber: "Let us be modern."

Frank and free, we had thought ourselves. Mean and sortied, we were. Action was our ideal. A mad rushing to nowhere in a great mad kicking gauntlet. And of what? Of some day, of some day we have prated on. It was at hand and we were afraid. We have been told that mankind is all right. Well, the "some day" we have prated on is at hand and we are afraid. The disaster is in our own minds and hearts. It never happens elsewhere. A little common sense is what we need more than courage. The mad rushing to nowhere in a great mad kicking gauntlet is solid—when people were real people and lived as such. We have been told that mankind is all right. Well, the "some day" we have prated on is at hand and we are afraid.

An Open Letter to the Student Body of Connecticut College:

I would like you all to know that the Connecticut College Outing Club is looking for a new member from the Intercollegiate Outing Clubs Association. This membership entitles C. C. O. C. to receive the Bulletin published each Fall, Winter, and Spring by the Association. The Bulletin contains the activities of the various Intercollegiate Outing Clubs.

Due to the enthusiasm shown by the various delegations at the Conference and to the inspiration of the work that they have accomplished, C. C. O. C. hopes that more spirit for its outings will be aroused around our campus. Many new and fascinating plans are being discussed for the coming year and we hope to have some fine trips this Spring. If you all want to have some trips to places like such colleges as Smith and Vassar where they have practically the same difficulties to overcome that we have, maybe you would come along and give us a try. The first Outing is only a temperance and one day has gone with us and always one day returns. So come along and join us!

If any of you are at all interested in coming to see me and hear all about College Week. It is an experience that you will never forget, a week of real camp feeling in the heart of the Adirondacks in perfect September weather. You will regret it if you don't go!

ELIZABETH A. TURNER,
Chairman of C. C. O. C.

One is tempted to use classic terms to describe such an overture. It might use that ancient adjective "lycachinome" to describe her hair—except that hers is a very light copper color. It is rather straight and a natural curl will occasionally appear. She is fair and tall, and fairly large; her eyes are blue, and her complexion is that of a healthy child. She's a bit of an artist, and likes to dabble around with oils, to arrange furnishings in a room, and to hunt for exotic chintzes. And such a job she has collecting money for the S. F. C. A. fund!

Last week's character was Esther Tyler '33.

HORSESHOW TO BE MAY 9

The horseshow to be held on Tuesday, May 9th, is to be run entirely by the students with the help of Miss Ethel Russ '36. There will be five classes in the show—1st class for advanced, 2nd class for intermediate, 3rd class for beginners, 6th class for jumpers, and Sth class for riding in pairs. The show will take place in the field next to the hockey field. There will be out-of-town judges to award the ribbons. In case of rain the meet will be postponed.

A boner, but a thoroughly logical one, was committed by a freshman at Agnes Scott College in Georgia last week. In the course of a literary conversation, she made some remark about "A Dissertation on Roast Pig," which when asked who had written it, she answered promptly, "Bacon, I think."
SERVICE LEAGUE

"Those dancing feet" were at it again on Saturday night in Knowlton Salon, to the gay strains of the Wesleyan Orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. Cobbley Dick, Miss Brett, and Miss Priest acted as chaperons. Service Leagues seem to be getting more and more popular. And yet this is an old gag—this Depression!

The annual spring Student Recital of the Department of Music will take place in the gymnasium on Wednesday evening, May 10th, at 8 o'clock. The instrumentalists and vocalists of the department will present a varied program. All are welcome.

Look upon happiness, not as an evil, but as something which man must endure.

LIQUID AIR EXPERIMENTS SHOW STARTLING RESULTS

Startling experiments with liquid air, based on simple scientific explanations, were shown by Mr. Elliot James in his second visit to the college. Before demonstrating, Mr. James gave a short talk on liquid air. He said that liquid air has certain properties that make it unusual—the most outstanding of which is its low temperature of 312° below zero. In spite of its temperature being so low, however, liquid air is always boiling. Never under pressure, it is left exposed, and allowed to evaporate slowly. When the pressure under which the air has been liquified is released, the air becomes cold. Since the World War an impetus has been given to industries built up on liquid air products, secured by the separation of the air into eight different elements.

An editorial in the Smith College Weekly points out a few of the possibilities of beer. In shades of "The Student Prince" it advocates a change in the whole tempo of campus life under the influence of beer, and suggests that "meals should be prolonged by political discussions and noisy sippings, walking to class should become a leisurely camaraderie, not the usual dash at the expense of other people's lives and limbs."

"Those dancing feet" were at it again on Saturday night in Knowlton Salon, to the gay strains of the Wesleyan Orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. Cobbley Dick, Miss Brett, and Miss Priest acted as chaperons. Service Leagues seem to be getting more and more popular. And yet this is an old gag—this Depression!

The annual spring Student Recital of the Department of Music will take place in the gymnasium on Wednesday evening, May 10th, at 8 o'clock. The instrumentalists and vocalists of the department will present a varied program. All are welcome.

Look upon happiness, not as an evil, but as something which man must endure.

A friend of CHESTERFIELD writes us of a salesman who had "something to say":

"I dropped into a little tobacco shop, and when I asked for a pack of Chesterfields the man smiled and told me I was the seventh customer without a break to ask for Chesterfields. 'Smoker after smoker,' he said, 'tells me that Chesterfields click...I sell five times as many Chesterfields as I did a while back.'"

Yes, there's something to say about Chesterfields and it takes just six words to say it—"They're mild and yet they satisfy."

© 1933, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.
CONNECTICUT COLLEGE NEWS

There must be a fascination in shooting things into the air, and letting them fall to earth, ... campus wear.

DANIEL GREEN
SMART SLIPPERS
$1.00 to $3.50
SAVARD BROS. INC. 134 State Street
New London, Conn.

Miss Margaret Cole Day, Director

A modern camp built for Older Girls and Women.

CAMP KOKATOSI

Dorothy Stokes and M. Alma Skilton

THE HUGUENOT
Other Food, Home Cooked, Too
The Best Restaurant

Maur, the typical class-conscious Victorian Lady, overacted a little for her part. Perhaps if her speech in the Second Act had been cut somewhat, we wouldn’t have been bored by her at all.

We realize that the play is melodramatic and appreciate the attempt of the cast to produce the play in as modern a way as possible. They are to be commended for their success in certain scenes.

The Blue and Gray of Hood College compiled the following statistics on the sizes worn by the Modern Hood Venus after a week of census-taking at the dorms: bust size 32, shoes 6, dress 16½, hose 9½, gloves 6½. What a waste of effort!

PRESENTATION OF ‘CASTE’ IS ENJOYED BY C. C.

The Jitney Players presented Caste, a comedy by Tom W. Robertson, on Friday, April 28, in the gym for the benefit of the scholarship fund. The modern drama marking the transition between the old-fashioned melodrama and the new type is a delightful, though somewhat improbable, story of a man who goes off to war, is declared dead and finally returns at the critical moment when his wife is beginning to resign herself to fate. Her father, a good natured villain, has wasted all the money on drink and Esther, in order to support her child, is about to go back to the bullet from which he once shot her. Polt's mechanically in-"