House Discusses Proposed Academic Life

For the past two weeks, House of Representatives of Connecticut College have given the good and productive discussion concerning the possible improvement of the academic life of the College. A series of meetings has taken place; the discussions seemed to fall into two main categories: first, methods of improving the students' appreciation of each of her courses, and second, methods of improving the curriculum as a whole.

On the second point many姑娘s thought that more intensity in waiving prerequisites would give students a greater appreciation of advanced courses, and that elimination of the prerequisite in different courses might correct the situation. In general, the discussions were very helpful, and the students were encouraged to make suggestions for improvement.

Psych Department To Buy Equipment With NSF Award

The Psych Department has received an award from the National Science Foundation. The award, which is being used to purchase equipment, will be used to support the department's research activities.

Graduates Choose Diverse Positions

While the data for the college department is not as yet complete, the full report of the 1963 graduates will likely be released in the near future. Overall, the graduates have chosen a variety of positions, ranging from executive positions to more creative pursuits.

Graduate loyalists have also expressed concern about the future of the college and have petitioned for the return of the graduate program. The college administration has promised to consider all of the petitions and to provide an update in the near future.

Class of 1965 Sponsors Last China Seminar

On Monday night, May 13, Dr. Peter Salzman of the Yale University Department of Geography presented a seminar on the problem of the Chinese form of national socialism. The seminar was well attended, with several students expressing interest in the topic of national socialism.

The Irving Castle Estate

The Irving Castle Estate has been donated to the college as a cultural center. The estate, which has been used for various cultural events in the past, will now serve as a permanent cultural center for the college. The estate is located near the campus, and will be open to the public for cultural events and activities.
Peace Corps Plans
Promise Idealists

Horizons at Home

On April 15, 1965, a bill was introduced to the Congress which is expected to bring about the establishment of the American college student. I refer to the legislation which would establish a Domestic Peace Corps. A study of this bill would seem to indicate that while the Peace Corps was never expected to suffer from its success, many felt that it was not a necessity for the advancement of the American idealist or for the promotion of the American administration. The immediate effect of the Peace Corps will be seen in the increased number of students interested in foreign service and the number of students interested in the field of international relations. The Peace Corps will provide living conditions for students, and all will have an opportunity to participate in the Peace Corps. This is a service to the nation, and it will be a service to the student. The value of the program cannot be underestimated.

The President who chooses to take advantage of the three-year plan will have an opportunity to participate in the Peace Corps and the administration cannot be considered as a sacrifice of any kind. The Advisory Council will meet to discuss lack of communication on campus and assume that they will have the opportunity to participate in the Peace Corps. The members of the Advisory Council will be glad that anyone class is at last meeting for the first time, and the students will be happy to see their friends.

Answer to Paradox

In the midst of her memoir "The President's Profile," the President said, "the policy of the majority in a period of peace is to have a "model foreign service" in the country. This paradox is far from the contract in our country, and we extend a functional Peace Corps to the nation. This program will have an advantage of the Peace Corps and our students will have an advantage of the Peace Corps. This is more prevalent among those students interested in the Peace Corps. According to Miss Shum, there are advantages which will not be the same on the individual and the type of graduate work planned. For instance, the Peace Corps student must go to the Peace Corps student, and the Peace Corps student must be the equivalent of the Peace Corps student. In three years, opening the Peace Corps will create a new field of work, and it will be more worthwhile to continue for four or five years. The students seem to be more anxious to have a Peace Corps than to do advanced work. This is partly because of years it takes to go through the Peace Corps. On the other hand, there is a greater number of students interested in the Peace Corps and a growing demand for higher education. Therefore, the Peace Corps will be faced with an enormous amount of acceleration. The advisory council will meeting an interested student faced with adopting a three-year plan, for it is up to the individual to decide what he must know what his educational means to him and be willing to take his responsibilities.

Athletic Asides

The annual AA Banquet was held in the back room of the Wright. The highlights of the evening were a good meal, a good band, and the entertainment. The winner of the Charlotte Pyle Memorial Trophy, a award presented to those given at the Elkins Annual Dinner Dance to the Charlotte Pyle Memorial Trophy, was chosen by the students themselves. The winner is the senior who has contributed most to the college in three years at the college. The Charlotte Pyle Memorial Trophy is for a student who is not related to the athletic of the year but would be. Cathy Layne.

The other awardees were present nat "Downtown" and "Downtown". The first award was given to a student who has been outstanding in good moral character and achievement. The second award was given to a student who has been outstanding in good moral character and achievement.

Three Year

three years must compulsorily complete a quarter of courses in a shorter period of time than is available to the girl who enters a four-year college, Miss Royer feels. In many girls, that is the required period of four years, and thus do not have as broad a background as is possible. In many of her major or in the general requirements, they may follow a concentration that is too narrow a focus. Since concentration is not great enough to give real breadth in the area of study. As an English instructor or head of a department, Miss Royer is a good major for a three-year student, as it is to "the most liberal of the liberal arts." This is, therefore, the kind of college that would accompany so much that one is able to develop a general background for many specialties, even though one is concentrating on a certain field. Miss Royer believes that there are two major pitfalls in the three-year program, both of which depend on the individual student. She must be adequately prepared in her second year and also be ready to things to judge, and she must be mature enough to take both the general requirements and courses in her major.

Class System Changes

"The American college student is," the magazine, "the best student, one who has learned to take advantage of the patterns of American college life as well as the patterns of American college education. The average student is under the impression that he is the only one of his group who can make broad and significant contributions to his school. He is not, of course, and his ability to do so is at least in part a function of his ability to explore the opportunities presented to him."

In our rush "to beat the Russians," or "to get the most students into the best colleges," our college and high schools are being tempted to sacrifice many of the benefits of a liberal arts education. As pointed out in the December issue of the journal, "there are many American college students who are not free to choose their own courses because of the requirements that are imposed upon them by the college system."

The American college student is being asked to adjust to the requirements that are imposed upon him by the college system. To do this, he must be able to develop a general background for many specialties, even though one is concentrating on a certain field. Miss Royer believes that there are two major pitfalls in the three-year program, both of which depend on the individual student. She must be adequately prepared in her second year and also be ready to things to judge, and she must be mature enough to take both the general requirements and courses in her major.

Oh Dad! We Welcome You
Oh Mom! You Can Come Too

We take it that you have noticed the small army of them swarming over the campus during the past few days, hastily transferring shrubs from tumbled down Thymes to the shiny new North Complex.

Father's Weekend is here again. The sign 'Welcome Dad' will float over the gate as the campus takes on that new spring look in anticipation of the crowds of Spirits and MI's whose daughters, a snappy crew of madcap gals, will greet their delightfully happy daughter on that smiling and sunny day, Friday, May 17. (Of course, no one thinks about the three term papers, four books, two overdue reports, and exams that he just had, no more than Dad thinks about dining closing he has coming up on Monday). No, this is the time when fathers and daughters are reunited after a long hard winter of 'more independent study and personal endeavor,' and can spend the weekend getting so acquainted and doing the campus by attending the many activities planned.

On Friday, the 'C' synchro will give an exhibition at 8:30 in Crater, the luminaries will present their rather soberly bounding 'Red, White, and Who?', and our famous 'Gallery 69' will be open, serving its well-known hot cinnamon cider. For those who are interested, WCNI (900 on your radio dial) will broadcast 'Pot Luck Friday Night,' a delightful sampling of those fields of music and news as often neglected by the more pedantic stations.

Don't forget the Registration day for Fathers at Crater from 8:00 to 12:00 on Saturday, (though we're not quite sure what it's for, it might be nice to go). The Horse Show at 9:30 should prove to be very entertaining, provided that you can all get up at that hour.
