Fewer Courses For Seniors Receives Faculty Approval

A new in the number of points required for seniors, and the introduction of a week's reading period preceding exams were announced by Miss Parks in a special chapel last Friday. The faculty approved these two measures for several reasons. First, that all students have time to study and resolve the ideas by having time to do further reading during the week. Second, it is hoped that with additional time spent on courses, comprehension of the material will improve.

What Do You Think? by Marylindeth Sohion

This year, as a result of the work done by seniors Phyllis Hannah and Elizabeth Huguenin in improving life as a whole, much interest has been taken as to how the improvements were introduced and what the students thought of them. Miss Hannah has been working with several students who have been helpful in class discussions. She asked them what they thought of the changes that have been introduced in the past year. She also asked them if they thought that activities should continue later in the year after the rush of freshman year is over.

Facility for Dinner

Sophomore Barbara Moogren believes that the facility for dinner should be expanded more. She feels that the plan of having faculty members for dinner with students is a good one. She also feels that college expense should be repaid for the dinner along with other expenses. The cost for the dinner is to be determined by the number of students who choose to participate.

Mural Contest Is Opening for Fame

The Brush Shop, always one of the most popular spots on campus will soon offer artistry appeal along with the usual essentials and coffees. A contest for the purpose of gaining the winning of the Brush Shop is now in progress. All entries will be exhibited in the large hall of the Tromp Room. The contest will be judged by the faculty members and the winning entry will be chosen at the end of the contest.

If you have an idea, and any degree of talent, get your supplies and start working. All contest entries will receive the deepest greetings and the winners will be given a special chance in the Brush Shop business—the winners will achieve immortality.
Subtraction and Addition

President Park's announcement of the new rule permitting seniors to take only four courses if they so desire has left many students in a state of joyful exhilaration. Many people will continue to take five or more courses, but still, it seems to be highly in favor of this administrative decision.

Under a four-course system, the everlasting small pressure of assignments. This view of most of us will be somewhat alleviated: and we will have more time to do a thorough, well-thought-out job on the reports and special projects required in two or three classes. This will allow us to do the projects with more leisure and at the same time, more hard work.

The second of Miss Park's announcements also presents a valuable educational opportunity, although at first glance it looks like a step backwards. The assignment of a third class at the end of each semester will give us a chance to integrate the material presented in a course, as well as to correlate it with other courses. This correlation of courses seems to be a phase of our studies which has not been developed as fully as possible. Many courses overlap and, frequently, little attempt is made to correlate them.

Both the reading period and the "subtracted elective" should increase the value of our education. As one faculty member put it, these changes provide us with more relaxation and, at the same time, more hard work.

Educational Integration Is Stressed by UNESCO Program

by Sue Askin

Fundamental Education: one of the chief concerns of UNESCO is a tremendous task. It is said that 100 million of the world's population is now unable to read. In the United States alone, some 10 million children are entering grade school each year. While we are modern and advanced in science and technology, we cannot forget the fact that many people throughout the world are not literate. The problem of education for the world's population is a difficult one, but one that cannot be ignored.

The UNESCO Program, presented by Peter Razumny, is a good example of how education can be used as a tool for social and political change. The program aims to provide education for all people, regardless of their background or economic status. It seeks to promote social and economic development, as well as cultural and political change. UNESCO has been working to promote educational programs in many countries, and the program presented by Peter Razumny is a good example of how education can be used to address pressing social and political issues.

It is clear that education is a key component of any successful development strategy. UNESCO's programs provide a framework for the development of education in many countries, and the program presented by Peter Razumny is a good example of how education can be used to address pressing social and political issues.

The cabinet voted unanimously to support the program, which was recommended by the student body president and the academic dean. The program will be implemented in the fall semester.
The sixteenth and last in the series of religious services, being conducted jointly by the U. S. Coast Guard Academy and Connecticut College, will be held Sunday morning at 20 o'clock in the Chapel.

forced to escape as best she could, since the horse wasn’t quite sure whether Joey was instructor or patient. She tells with amusement about the old lady who presented her with a “basket” made of rags, in return for a dancing lesson. Perhaps the main reason Joey likes her work so much is that the patients are so appreciative and fond of her music. While she is practicing the organ, many of the patients walk in and shake hands. Just to make them feel known, and they become very easy to forget her when she is off for choir practice.

Joey’s list of musical accomplishments is long and varied. Native of Bridgeport, Conn., she has been playing the piano since she was four. She and her younger sister have worked together on some two-piano pieces for their own amusement. At college she has enjoyed playing for the drama group, classes in recreation, and a radio program. Last year she was asked to play a harp piece on the piano for the New London Civic Orchestra. Besides her new job as song leader, Joey will be president of the choir, and continue her work with the Shriners. Her social and athletic interests include bicycling, photography, and tennis.

BY M. L. CANTWELL

Well, it’s come and gone, River Days of 1949, that is. For two solid weeks C Cers have worked hard and waited hopefully from weather reports till the big parade. When the parade was held, River Days came last Wedneday. People normally up before ten in the morning, therefore, went to the beach or to the golf courses or to Father’s fishin’ and tryin’ gill fishences thoughtfully provided in the respective dining rooms.

The Student-Faculty softball game was a great success, with all people among the spectators were Mr. Striker’s children, faithfully cheering father on.

There are rummies that some people stay in school and studied a girl, typed her theme on the machine. They were vicious, however, for everyone else happily buzzed off and came back with red faces. It’s over now, but the reverberations still echo through our halls. “Be my sweet!” is one of the Wee Hours of the morning sleep, heard the organ music and made no Allvance in Prices

“Many new machines and new ideas are here and we’ll be ready for the River Days next year,” said Mr. Bowles.

and certain young man at Storrs. Joey assures us she is not engaged, but she holds her diploma as a student at the university, who, for some strange reason, spends his weekends at Truckum, and studies (?) in the Connecticut College Library. After her social interest comes bicy-
ing. In fact, she spent five years of her English life, so it will be ready for hard work this spring. Another of her interests is that she is not entirely musical as Dr. Clurman is. She has spent ten years as either counselor or counselor at Scout camps. Last summer she was a counselor at a camp in Maine.

In between piano practice, music therapy, and all her extra-curricular activities, Joey somehow finds time for the organ. We won’t mention during which of the week days the organ performance takes place, but it is so early that one optimistic Windhamite called it half-reasoned from a deep sleep, heard the organ music, and said, “That’s Dr. Clurman.”
