Competitive Sing Annual Tradition To Occur Tonight

Each Class Presents as New Feature, a Song Written Entirely by Students

The annual Competitive Sing will be held tonight, May 27, at 7:00 on the steps of the library. The four classes will compete for nominal possession of the cup donated by the class of 1935. The rules for the sing have been revised and extended this year. They are as follows:

1. Each class shall sing three songs:
   a. Marching song (same for all classes)
   b. Original song
   c. Class Song

2. Both words and music of the original song shall have been written by a member or members of the class.

3. The original song must have been in Dr. Erskine's possession by May 1.

4. Failure to comply with Rule shall disqualify any class.

The original song in each class was written by:

2. Class of '37—Martha Louise Cook and Blanche Mapes.
3. Class of '38—Mary McCluskey.

Dr. Lawrence Offers Encouragement To Seniors as They Enter Unsettled World

Speaking at the current Seniors' Convocation chapel for the year, May 25, Dr. Lawrence made the following salutatory remarks to "the grand old seniors, whom," he said, "I shall never see again in just this relationship."

"I congratulate you on your entrance upon a world scene of disorder and disarray. You are unlikely to be bored by the lack of opportunity for useful or even heroic service. At times your efforts may seem to be in large part futile; but they cannot be entirely so. Whether or not you join, and others like you, achieve international peace and social justice at least you may each attain a spiritual maturity which is in itself a mean reward.

"I urge you not to feel a grievance against the generation, or generation, which has preceded you; condemning them because they have left the world in such a stupid plight. To do will not to your many splendid achievements and improved ways of living, which you did nothing to attain, nor even to deserve. In winning these for you, your predecessors sometimes suffered hardships and alarms quite comparable to those which seem to confront you.

"But most of all, I urge you not to take a defeatist or fatalistic attitude toward your present prospects. Such an attitude would not only lessen your chance to set the times right; it would also destroy your opportunity to achieve a possibility of spirit, without which life itself is of very doubtful value. Nor do you need to believe that the present evil times cannot be set right. The accumulated forces of today are supremely potent, and good no less than for evil. In a broad sense, mankind has triumphed over Nature and may now utilize, as never before, her vast resources for the betterment of human life. There remains only the difficult, but impossible task of preventing a fatally destructive misuse of these powers—by war, by greed, by stupidity. The successful performance of that task is not known to be beyond the reach of your generation—to make a beginning at least. I exhort you, therefore, to give your opportunity to achieve a reasonable, and to attempt that task hopefully."

Dear Editor:

Why can’t we learn to start practising for things on time.

I don’t know what’s fault is, but it may worry someone that they’ve got to get it done.

Why must the juniors practice madly twice a day for Competitive Sing, regardless of any other activities?

And here is where the freshmen class has a good time.

We have practising for this event for about a month, and they are now going their ways calmly enough with fewer practices and more confidence.

First there were the Competitive plays (for which even the freshmen had a hard time prepaing).

They were followed by the Spring play, the cast of which couldn’t suspend their activities.

The class of ’39 again showed a commendable forehandliness in their plans for Freshman pageant which took fewer practices with all its parts than the play.

Traditions are the finest thing in the world, and a good performance is worth a lot, but can’t we make it easier on all concerned by looking ahead a little and planning rehearsals to make a less hectic few days before the big event?

Sincerely,

37

Dear Editor:

I protest! Why is it that those of us calling at Thompson’s never say Grace at Sunday dinner?

I have understood that if it is said but once, the main meals should be the one it attends. On weekdays, diner is always accompanied by Grace, (though goodness knows there seems to be little meaning attached there), but on the Sabbath, when everyone knows the main meal is at noon, we chatter and sit down. In the evening we are ever so careful, so one group sits down and another dashes into the dining room when the signal is given for silent Grace—only a few are reverent. I am told that dinner is correctly observed at other houses. Can’t something be done about Thompsons? Perhaps a notice posted, or an announced change made help. It simply doesn’t seem right.

President Blunt Advocates Reading During Vacation

Now is the time to think of summer reading. President Blunt in her chapel talk of May 26 gave several good suggestions for those who wish to enjoy books in the coming vacation. "It is an important and delightful part of the vacation that you don't want to miss."

In order to get in as much reading as possible it would be well to begin before "we board trains and cars for home. A multitude of suggestions and captivating literature can be found in the library and in the book stores.

Three Major Feats
We can make our reading accomplish three major feats. It can be a delightful extension of courses taken this year. Many books and magazine articles were mentioned in class that we would like to have read but never found the time. We can look through them at our leisure. It can be an interesting introduction to courses we hope to be assumed in the fall. Some professors post lists of the books their lectures will include and other professors would be pleased to have you go to them for suggestions. This is a great time-saver for those students working for honors. And the culmination of summer reading is to delve into the books that satisfy our own independent desires instead of just swinging idly in that hammock and thinking longingly of sailboats, why not enjoy some book by Galworthy or that new book on plant morphology?

Press Board Banquet Held at Norwich Inn
Press Board held its annual banquet last Friday night at Norwich Inn. Doris Wheeler, retiring editor-in-chief of the board, presided. Press Board keys for outstanding work of the following girls: Nancy Burke '37, Lorraine Heyman '36, Dorothy Wadham '37, Ellen Bis sells '37, and Priscilla Cole '37.

Guests at the banquet were Miss Alice Ramsay, Mrs. Katherine Floyd, Publicity Director of Connecticut College, and Lucy Barrera, editor-in-chief of the Connecticut College News. The following officers of Press Board for the coming year were elected recently: Editor-in-chief . . . Nancy Burke City Editor . . . Doris Wheeler Business Manager . . . Ethel BisSELL Managing Editor . . . Priscilla Cole

A booklet on Jane Addams House will be published by President Blunt within the next two or two. It will be sent to all parents and alumnae. Any student who wishes a copy for herself can obtain it in the President's office.

Room Choosing Big Event
As Spring Comes to College

Spring has come to Connecticut—upon a private garden or a disturb- ing. One lucky off-campus house has become very unpopular due to the wonderful break they had in the numbers. Numbers one and three were drawn in the house enabling all twelve girls to get together next year. Stylisty put to these lucky ones concerning what rooms they were taking.

In the end, when most of the rooms had been given out, things seem to have been satisfactorily determined. More than one girl had been heard to say, "I can hardly wait to get back here next year to fix up that darling room!" Do you feel that way, too—can you hardly wait to get back here next fall?

Allegorical Play
To Be Presented
Senior Class Day

The Class Day Play to be given on the Saturday of Commencement Weekend is to take place in the Outdoor Theater. Minna Everett is in charge of the production of "The Slave With Two Faces," by Mary Carolyn Davies.

It is a play about allegory and Life and shows that the individual can either make Life his slave or his master. There is a combination of speaking and dancing parts. Miss Josephine Hunter Bay is directing the dramatic production while Miss Elizabeth Harshbarger and Kathryn Chaten are directing the dance.

The following have been chosen as ushers for the play: Margaret Coulter, Bernice Wheeler, Paule Myland, Doris Wheeler, Alice Lip pincott, Eleanor Griffin, Norma Bloom, Cornelia Hadell, Louise Langdon, Lucy Barrera, Cornelia Tilton, and Theodora Hobson.

State Comptroller Speaks to Urban Sociology Classes

Charles Christian Swartz, comptroller of the State of Connecticut and former mayor of Norwalk, addressed the classes in urban sociology last Friday, May 22. Speaking from the point of view of a city official who has had close contact with the problems of city life Mr. Swartz was able to show clearly how problems arise and how they are met.

Appropriations for city or state government are made a few years previous to the time when they will be used. It is difficult to estimate all possibilities of change during that time so that when depressions appear, cities are usually found short-handed. The emergency must be met in some way if we are to give people the necessities of life and keep them out of our institutions.

In Norwalk, when Mr. Swartz was serving as mayor, the city met the emergency by increasing the appropriation of the Charity Department about ten fold in one year. The name of the department was changed to the Welfare Department in order to abolish the stigma formerly attached to the word "charity." The problem became a sociological one; social workers were procured; and a real case history of the needy was made. The city was aided by the FERA, CWA, and the WPA.

Lessen Future Burden

"It is far better to meet the immediate expense," said Mr. Swartz, "than to throw a burden on the city, for years to come by having to pay for institutional care." In comparing the panic of 1929 and the present depression, Mr. Swartz said that "the human race, particularly in this State, has gone a long way in treating the other man as his brother and the other woman as his sister. We are coming to the point where actual needs will be met as must be met. We are turning toward a sociological state."

Two Kinds Religion
Says Rev. Matthews
Speaker at Vesper

There are two kinds of religion," said the Reverend Shailer Matthews, Dean Emeritus of the University Divinity School of Chicago, in his talk at Vespers last Sunday, "a religion which we have to carry and a religion which carries us."

Typical of the first kind of religion is the attitude toward duty. To the people who "carry" their religion it is always easy to see where duty lies—one's duty is always doing something one does not want to do. These are the Pharisees, superstitiously good and anxious that everyone else be good. They are good mainly because they are afraid that if they were not good, they would go to hell.

What we need is something which will stimulate our emotional life so that our efforts will have ourselves better not be in vain. In a reaction from the first-named sort of religion, many men have cast off the responsibility of the Charities Department. In order, however, for people to find an intelligent concept of religion than to carry the future burden, it is better to cast off all religion. And we must recognize, in building our religion, that love is the most important and most helpful feature of any religion.

Mrs. Ida Merriam
Takes Federal Post
In Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Ida Cram Merriam, assistant professor of economics at Connecticut College, has resigned her appointment here to become Chief of the Materials and Resources Division with the Social Security Board in the Bureau of Research in Wash-ington, D.C. Her resignation will as- semble all current research material and particularly to try to find out what other departments of the govern- ment or private research agencies are doing in order to avoid over-lapping of work. She will look for problems that require long term study and will make a preliminary survey of material to determine whether it deserves study.

Alumnae Notes
The classes of '26, '31, '33, and '35 will celebrate their tenth, fifth, third, and first reunions respectively on Saturday, June 13. The alumnae plan to get here in time for the Trustee Luncheon at twelve-thirty. These reunion classes will have a class dinner Saturday evening.

The class of 1911, which also in- cludes four classes of special reunions, having special reunions, will have a dinner at the Mohican Hotel on Saturday night. Dr. Lawrence and Dr. Hunt are junior members for this 1916 reunion.

The majority of the alumnae are expected to be from the class of 1905.
Winners Named In Vogue Prix de Paris Contest

The winners were notified by telegram from Mrs. Chase and at the same time two additional telegrams, offering inducements in the form of six quizzes and a final examination in the form of six quizzes and a final examination, were sent to Miss Ellis May Morris of Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, and to Miss Katharine Roberts of Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts.

The editors stated that, although only two positions had been announced in the original contest announcement, the excellent work of these contestants lent Vogue to create the additional awards.

In addition to the four winners, ten other seniors received honorable mention in the contest. Through the efforts of Vogue's editorial staff, these girls will be put in touch with various stores, publications, and advertising agencies who have agreed to interview them, on Vogue's recommendation, for positions. Names and colleges of the ten runners-up are: Miss M. K. Alpert, Radcliffe College; Miss Mary Burnham, Marygrove College; Miss Elise L. Davies, University of Southern California; Miss Marietta Deweese, Nebraska University; Miss Elaine Evans, University of Utah; Miss Catharine Gibson, Western College; Miss Ruth E. Goodwin, University of Maine; Miss Ethelith S. Hill, Hood College; Miss Kathleen Biddle, Bennington College; Miss Ruth Beager, Gallaudet College.

Vogue's Prix de Paris was announced October 1, 1935 as an aid and encouragement to senior women in colleges and universities of the United States who wished to make their career in the important field of fashion. The contest—in the form of six quizzes and a final thesis—served as a preliminary training course in fashion, and winners were chosen solely on the basis of their work in the course.

The Clubs

Spanish Club

The showing of motion pictures of a South American cruise taken by Beatrice Dodd, '36, of Glen Ridge, N. J., and an exhibit of Spanish and Mexican articles were features of the meeting of the Spanish Club Monday evening, May 18. The exhibit included among its most attractive articles dolls dressed in colorful costumes of the different provinces of Spain, tiles, plates, silver work, and other souvenirs from the adventures of Don Quixote, fabricies, shawls, and water jugs. Among the interesting features of the film were views showing the Andes Mountains and part of a thrilling bull fight.

At the meeting Rachel Homer, '39, of Cuba, was elected president of the club for the coming year.

Fashion Is As Fashion Does

And fashions do a great deal in The Sun. Their news comprises a very popular part of one of New York's most sparkling pages devoted to women's interests and doings.

Fashion news in The Sun is authentic. Particular attention is given to fashions created by the young and alert folk to appeal to the youthful minded. Our observers in close touch with new ideas, both here and abroad, report only those which they know from experience will become established. You will find in advance many pictures and descriptions of clothing and accessories that will soon be worn by people. Every Saturday there is a small article on the coming season of fashion news and pictures. Also in The Sun you will find more advertisements from New York's good shops and stores than in any other newspaper.

The latest fashions and suggestions, read... habilitation of the poor and for the preservation of their morale and self-respect. Such objectives cannot be achieved without the services of trained personnel and the adoption of a well-thought out program requiring the significant cooperation of private and public agencies, of local and state governments.

"We have gone a long way from the former primitive, emotional and unsatisfactory methods of dealing with our handicapped classes. And although our institutional provisions are far from being satisfactory, yet obviously great progress has been made in our methods of caring for the insane, the feeble-minded, the epileptic, the inebriate, the blind, the deaf, the crippled and the convulsive," stated the speaker, who is Secretary and Consultant of the Poor Law Commission.

The old system of casual and, at times, indiscriminate, general poor class will not be protected by such local efforts. The standards in both indoor and outdoor relief were excellent in certain localities, in others, they are either independently or in cooperation with the Emergency Relief Commission to Study the Poor Laws. But no highly satisfactory and now being peremptorily by some local authorities continued by the Great Depression, the Emergency Relief Commission to Study the Poor Laws, indicated that relief standards in certain localities are either indecisive or in danger of becoming so in the near future. This must not be taken to mean a wholesale condemnation of poor relief practices in all of our towns. It does mean, however, that whereas the standards in both indoor and outdoor relief are excellent in certain communities, in others, they leave much to be desired.

Dr. Chakerian

Speaker Before Social Agencies

"The adoption of adequate standards and an effective relief policy throughout the state is one of the major tasks facing welfare workers and agencies in Connecticut," declared Dr. Chakerian, of the Social Science Faculty of Connecticut College in addressing the dinner-meeting of the New London Area at the Mahican Hotel, on Thursday evening.

Emphasizing the fact that dependency is now a chronic social disease affecting large numbers of people in long periods of time, Dr. Chakerian pointed out that many of the local relief and social work standards developed in the days of the FERA and now being peremptorily by some local authorities to continue, the Emergency Relief Commission must be preserved lest we revert back to the old system of stingy aid, or at times, ineffective relief dating back to the days of the Elizabethan period.

"It is to be regretted that the reports reaching the Commission to Study the Pauper Laws, indicate that relief standards in certain localities are either indecisive or in danger of becoming so in the near future. This must not be taken to mean a wholesale condemnation of poor relief practices in all of our towns. It does mean, however, that whereas the standards in both indoor and outdoor relief are excellent in certain communities, in others, they leave much to be desired."

Dependency Now Chronic

"If poverty were a malady of a very temporary character, as it used to be but a few years ago, the need for the development or the retention of already adopted satisfactory standards of relief would not be pressing. Since, however, dependency has now become a chronic disease, it is necessary for society to protect both itself and its unfortunate members against physical, social and moral deterioration."

"The day has passed when poor relief could be made to consist of only the impersonal distribution of needs now to be made for the reparation of a well-thought out program of indoor and outdoor relief," stated the speaker, who is Secretary and Consultant of the Poor Law Commission. It is now time for us to see that those still remaining in the so-called general poor class will be cared for in such a manner as to redeem them for society. Without consulting the Commission to continue its work standards developed in the days of the FERA and now being peremptorily by some local authorities to continue, the Emergency Relief Commission must be preserved lest we revert back to the old system of stingy aid, or at times, ineffective relief dating back to the days of the Elizabethan period.
