Reinhold Niebuhr will speak for Baccalaureate, June 19

Peril and Promise of the Future Is Topic of Professor's Talk

Reinhold Niebuhr, Professor of Applied Christianity at Union Theological Seminary, will speak at Baccalaureate exercises on the topic Peril and Promise of the Future. Professor Niebuhr has spoken many times before at college weppers and his brother, Richard, spoke at Baccalaureate in June 1943.

Professor Niebuhr possesses an unusually profound interest in the cause of social justice and before 1935 had a national reputation as a radical preacher, closely associated with labor and Socialist organizations. Since then he has become an outstanding figure in Christian theology and sociology.

Christian Revolutionary

Professor Niebuhr has been described as a Christian revolutionary who has done more than any other theologian to rehabilitate the Christian dogma of original sin and to place today's thinking in the light of a new social science and philosophy.

The speaker received his B.A. at Elmhurst College in Illinois in 1910 and did graduate work at Edinburgh Theological Seminary in 1913. He has received various honorary degrees from many other schools. These include a B.D. and M.A. from Yale University, 1914, 1916.

Past Graduates Positions

In 1915 he was ordained minister of the United Reformed Church of America and had great success in expanding the congregation. He was then a professor in London. In 1922 he was called to the Union Theological Seminary, where he has been professor of Applied Christianity and Christian Ethics at Union.

Professor Niebuhr was one of the founders of the Fellowship of Socialist Christians. The Oncoming Years

Tomorrow the seniors take their comprehensives, God Bless them! Next week they finish the tests, and on June twelfth they graduate. What then? And what of the rest of us who will be alumnus in a year or two?

That's right—marriage, children, careers. But what of the four years on the hill overlooking the Thames? A reunion now and then, perhaps. And five years? There is more to it than that. For four years, we take from the college education, traditions, friendships—the background of human relations and academic study which fits us, according to our measure as individuals, for the independent adult world.

We carry with us the college debt of gratitude for all the things that have been added to our lives here. As alumnus, we can do a great deal to pay that debt. The medium of exchange is again human relations. By taking active, constructive part in the life of our various communities, we can prove that we have learned the lessons of citizenship and co-operation we have been taught as members of the college community.

On a more personal level, we can pay this debt by joining the Connecticut College Alumnae Chapters wherever they may be, and forming new chapters where there are not. Actively supported and developed by fresh ideas, the alumnae organization is the best possible means for letting the whole country know the spirit of tolerance and good will which make Connecticut what it is.

As alumni as well as alumni, we are still laying the groundwork for its traditions. We are also the ones to give Connecticut what it is.

Mr. E. Florit, of Columbia, Speaks On Mexican Poet

Last Thursday night, 317 members of the College students of Spanish heard Mr. E. Florit, who is an authority on the position of the Mexican poet, discuss the life and work of Martín Luis Guzmán, the Latin American poet.

About the end of the 19th century, and the appearance of the so-called Modernism in Latin America, a new trend emerged in Latin America a new spirit called Modernism. The poet of the 20th century, Mr. Florit said, there were two kinds of Modernism, one after the other. The first kind of Modernism is that of the poet who sought to die in New London. We would like to see it go on the road.

Caught on Campus

The second floor of Katharine Hildreth Dormitory was happy to announce the engagement of Miss Dorothy Hyman to Mr. Paul J. Roberts, better known as Mickey, both from Rockville, L. I. Mickey is now a senior at Lehigh, and a member of Pi Lambda Phi.

Dot and Mickey have been planned since last fall, and Dot, that mistress of dissimulation, has known she was engaged since February. She's even had that lovely ring stored in a safe deposit box all this time. The final moment came last weekend, however. It seemed that Dot was in the middle of a long, involved phone call, when Mickey appeared at her side and slipped the ring on her finger. As a final gift to seal the pact, the long-awaited college years "are over," and Dot and Mickey will be married at four o'clock, Saturday, June 4, just a few hours after her last exam - "till then, only our eyes; found in Johnnie’s "C" Book under the drinking rules. The engagement was extraordinary news, and as Dot's friends have heard it, "the girls' hair一辈子 fell out to sea..."
