Thank you, Thank you, Thank you

Despite a national recession that was particularly tough in the Northeast, 1990-91 was a record-breaking year for Connecticut College's fund-raising efforts with an increased number of donors giving more money in all areas.

A total of $7.5 million was given during the year, enabling the college to continue and even expand upon successful programs in the sciences and liberal arts as well as offering numerous cultural and community events.

Endowment

Like its peer institutions, Connecticut College relies on its endowment to help the college grow in quality and breadth of offerings. Standing at a modest $43 million, Connecticut's endowment is helpful but it is not sufficient to fund all of the desired and needed programs.

To help the endowment grow, the college for years has followed a practice of spending only 5 percent of the endowment's earnings calculated on a three-year rolling average. In 1990-91 $1,881,000 was used for college programs. More information on the endowment can be found on page 55.

Financial aid

Financial aid continues to be vital to Connecticut College and the diversity of its student body. In 1990-91 more than 4 out of every 10 students received some form of financial aid, much of which was provided by Connecticut College. Of the $8.7 million spent on financial aid, $5.5 million came directly from college funds.

Students at Connecticut College also benefited from the college's continued commitment to a policy of admitting students regardless of financial need. This, coupled with the college's commitment to meeting the full needs of all students, has enabled many more students to attend Connecticut College than would have been able to without these programs. For more information on financial aid, see page 38.

Largest ever gifts

Connecticut College this year received three of its largest commitments ever with a $1.4 million gift from Jo Ann Hess Myers '67, $2 million from the estate of Harriet Buescher Lawrence '34 and $3.4 million from the estate of Lucy McDannel '22. To learn how these and other gifts were used see Capital Giving, page 55 and Planned Giving, page 25.

Participation grows

More alumni than ever are giving to Connecticut College. This year, 42 percent of the college's alumni participated in the Alumni Annual Giving Program. For more information on why a high participation rate is important, see page 10.

Sciences receive support

Rather than flip fast food hamburgers, more than 80 Connecticut College science students chose to remain in New London to perform research in Connecticut's laser lab, work on the nuclear magnetic resonator or work side-by-side with faculty members studying such vital areas as multiple sclerosis and the health of the state's lakes. For information on how this growth in the sciences is gaining financial support, see page 46.

Heritage Society breakfast

Nearly 40 members of the Heritage Society were guests of the college at a breakfast during Reunion weekend. The Heritage Society, one of many groups recognized for their special commitment to the college, is composed of those friends and alumni who have named the college in their will. For more information on Planned Giving, see page 25.

Meeting strategic goals

Connecticut College continued to move forward in meeting goals set in the five-year Strategic Plan. In 1990-91, spending for these goals included more than $600,000 to boost faculty salaries, enhance the sabbatical program and allow faculty more time for research.

Additionally, funds were spent to enhance courses, improve the safety of labs and other campus work environments, and boost the college's computer systems. For more information on the Annual Fund and how it is used, see page 10.

Dormitory safety

1990-91 saw the beginning phases of a new security system that is being installed in all dormitories. This system, which includes alarms and door closures operates via a push-button code. It is designed to improve the safety of the dorms while maintaining ease of access for those who live there. For more information on capital expenditures, see page 55.

Library

The library's collections were greatly enhanced in 1990 with several new acquisitions, including the scholarly collection of Professor Aryeh Motzkin, of Boston, Mass. His collection, which was purchased with a gift from Jo Ann Hess Myers '67, includes many titles supporting Judaic studies. The Judaic studies collection also benefited from various endowed book funds.

Other gifts and endowments received in 1990-91 included monies for the purchase of Russian history and language books, books for the Center for International Studies and the Liberal Arts and books purchased from the Dorothy Bethrum Loomis fund. For further information on the endowment, see page 55.

Volunteers are the lifeblood of any fund-raising organization. Connecticut College is fortunate to have the participation and involvement of talented and energetic alumni, parents, friends and students who write letters, staff the telephones and reach out to members of the Connecticut College family across the world. Two of these volunteers are Vivian Johnson Harries '51 and Daniel B. Hirschhorn '79.

Vivian Johnson Harries '51

- 40th Reunion Gift Chairman
- Led the Class of 1951 to a record year of giving
- $116,409 raised for the Annual Fund
- $30,355 raised in capital giving commitments

"When you are fund raising for your college it's more than just raising money for your local community, it is working for that which benefited you personally when you were young. You had to rely on other people helping you then and now you want it to continue so others can benefit.

"Instead of a task it becomes fun because you reconnect with these people who were young when you were young, and you are doing for your college what it needs most.

"The women I call want facts. They want to know what the problems are and what we want to accomplish. They are very interested to learn what is going on in the sciences and the way the college is forging ahead to strengthen those areas in which we have not traditionally been strong while not weakening those where we already are strong.

"Connecticut College gave so much to all of us, I want to make sure it is alive and well for the future."

Daniel B. Hirschhorn '79

- Co-class agent chairman
- Raised $19,870 in 1990-91, a 55% increase over 1989-90
- Working on building a tradition of giving
- Son of Connecticut College trustee Barbara Blaustein Hirschhorn '50; nephew of Elizabeth Blaustein Roswell '52; cousin of Susan B. Hirschhorn '71 and Marjorie B. Roswell '84.

"I took on this job three years ago, right before our 10th reunion and it wasn't long before I realized I couldn't do it alone.

"Contacting up to 400 people and giving them the attention they need takes time. Fortunately Mike Fishman — my co-CAC — and I have a good team of class agents who really help out.

"Each year we try something a little different to improve upon last year's results. Last year we had a personalized appeal with handwritten notes to all those who had donated in the previous two years.

"Support for the Annual Fund is important because it goes for the actual ongoing expenses of the college. Our theme last year was 'send a student to Connecticut,' and the money we raised was nearly enough to do that. I feel good about that.

"Hopefully, success breeds success and this year will be even better."

Corporate and Foundation Advisory Committee

Sixteen dedicated and influential alumni, parents and friends of Connecticut College have joined the new Corporate and Foundation Advisory Committee during the past year. They have already played a key role in identifying new prospects, suggesting strategies of approach, reviewing proposals, and supporting the cultivation and solicitation of our corporate and foundation donors. They will continue to be an invaluable resource as this sector of our donor base expands, and we are deeply grateful for the knowledge and commitment they bring to Connecticut College.

People: The reason for the Annual Fund

Tuition funds only 71 percent of the actual annual cost of providing an undergraduate college education. Without other sources of income, such as the Annual Fund, it would be nearly impossible to provide the quality education and opportunities for which Connecticut College has become known. One of the many students who has benefited is Molly Embree.

Molly Embree '93

- Major in zoology. Minor in Japanese
- Judiciary Board chair
- Enrolled in the Center for International Studies and the Liberal Arts

"Even before I entered college I knew that I wanted to be a field biologist. I also wanted to use my language skills so the Center for International Studies and the Liberal Arts really caught my eye. This program gives me a chance for a scientific internship. Next summer I will be studying wild monkeys and speaking Japanese. That is not something I could have done at a lot of colleges.

"I had three criteria for colleges. It was important to me to find a small liberal arts college and a college with a good science department, but the most important thing was that I be given a good financial aid package. I was fortunate in that Connecticut was my first choice and it gave me a good offer.

"In my freshman triple my roommates and I represented Puerto Rico, Alaska and Mississippi. The three of us were just as poor as could be, but we all had campus jobs and we all contributed to the college community in various ways. None of us would have been here without financial aid."

The Annual Fund: More donors, more dollars

On to $2 million in '92

Connecticut College alumni, parents, and friends have once again reached new highs in giving. A record-breaking total of $1,876,575 million was contributed to the Annual Fund in 1990-91 in support of such areas as academic programs, financial aid, library acquisitions, cultural offerings, computers, and athletics.

This year's results reflect a growth in the number of donors within the college family which is as significant as the dollar increase. New alumni supporters pushed the participation rate up to 42 percent, putting the college well on its way to achieving a participation rate of 50 percent by 1995. That strong support demonstrates more than words the commitment to excellence that is felt by those who have benefited from their Connecticut College experience. It also helps

President Claire Gaudiani '66 and others attract funding from potential corporate and foundation donors who gauge the level of commitment to an institution by asking "what percentage of your alumni body supports the college?"

Contributions to the Annual Fund are especially rewarding because the results are so immediate. All gifts are applied to the college's operating budget. With a 1990-91 operating budget of $42 million, a total Annual Fund of nearly $2 million had a significant impact.

In the past year, for example, the support of alumni, parents, and friends made it possible for 43 percent of the student body to receive gift or grant aid and 60 percent to receive loans or jobs that helped meet college costs.

This support also enabled 1,928 students and alumni to receive advice and direction from the Office of Career Services. Countless more attended the 100 or so lectures and cultural events that were brought to campus including talks by Nobel-prize winners Sidney Altman, Joseph Brodsky, and Elie Wiesel.

And the scholarship gained through the Connecticut College experience sent about 16 percent of the Class of 1991 on to graduate school.

Additionally, two members of the Class of 1991 were awarded Thomas J. Watson Fellowships, an honor given to only 75 college seniors nationwide.

The Annual Fund's success can be attributed in large part to a network of more than 200 volunteers serving on gift club committees, as class agents and phonathon callers, or otherwise providing personal contact between constituents and the changing college and campus. Even students get involved, forming the corps of a phonathon outreach effort. This one-to-one touch is much appreciated by those alumni and parents who, through talking with the students, reconnect with the college and ensure that coming years are as successful as this one.

1991 graduates Mary Beth Holman (left) and Turiya Manheimer were awarded Thomas J. Watson fellowships for post graduate study.

It is not simply the new, multifunctional buildings that Jane Muddle Funkhouser sees when she thinks about the College Center Projects. It is the people.

"Paying attention to the whole person is a big part of the college experience," says Jane, chair of the College Center Fund Committee. "After spending 10 years as a trustee of the college and knowing how badly we needed facilities to support our goal of improving student life, I was thrilled when a new College Center finally simmered to the top of the priority list. I wanted to be a part of it."

As often happens, one thing led to another and the renovation of Crozier-Williams became the College Center Projects including the construction of Becker House for the Alumni Association, College Relations and Development Offices, as well as the expansion of athletic facilities.

As of June 30, 1991, more than $5.6 million of the total $8.6 million which is needed to complete the projects had been raised. Each goal along the way has been met or surpassed.

Crucial to this achievement have been the long hours and hard work put in by Britta Schein McNemar '67, chair of the Becker House Committee, and Frances Freedman Jacobson '56 & P'82 and Susan Golden Jacobson '82, co-chairs of The Connection Committee.

Britta, a former chair of the Board of Trustees, leads an effort to raise $1.6 million for the construction of the Charles and Sarah Pithouse '27 Becker House, which opened this August.

This fall renovation work to Crozier-Williams will begin and help the College Center solidify its place as the focal point of campus and student life.

Central to this project is The Connection, an architecturally significant three-story high central hall which joins all parts of the College Center and unifies it visually with the rest of the campus. The Connection is to be funded through the donations of Connecticut College families in which more than one member has attended Connecticut College. Frances and Susan, a mother/daughter team, are meeting with great success in their efforts to raise $1.2 million for this space.

"One thing that makes me feel good about going out and talking with people about these projects is that they were so well planned," says Jane Funkhouser. "This is no whim; these are good, solid projects."

Particularly important, she says, is the unity that they bring to college life.

"Student leaders, deans, classmates, alumni and board members are important parts of my college experiences," she says. "So too are the values that are common to these people — the striving for excellence and eagerness to make what they touch better than it was. I can't wait to see the rooms and halls in the new College Center teeming with members of the college community as they go about their daily business — the business to which we are all tied by the various threads of our collective college experience."

After 10 years as a trustee of the college, Jane Funkhouser says she knows how important campus life is. That's why she jumped at the chance to get involved in the College Center Projects.

Planned giving secures the future

Connecticut College continued to figure prominently in the estate plans of many alumni during the 1990-91 fund year when, for the second year in a row, a record for planned giving was set. More than $2.6 million was received by the college and another $8 million is pending settlement.

This generosity continues to demonstrate the strong commitment our alumni and friends have to the college and their deep desire to see Connecticut College remain a top educational institution for future generations. Many of these gifts have been a crucial part of an individual's estate planning program and often have benefited the donor financially as well as the college.

The Heritage Society continues to grow. Established in 1989-90 and now numbering 625, this society recognizes those individuals who have chosen to identify Connecticut College as part of their estate plans. It includes those who plan to leave outright gifts as well as those who have named Connecticut College as a contingent beneficiary, no matter the size or the remoteness of the gift.

These monies, unless otherwise specified, will someday go into the college's endowment. As such, they will provide stability for current and future students.

In all cases of planned giving, careful preparation is crucial, for without it the best of intentions may go astray. It is therefore important that all potential benefactors inform the college of their intentions and how they wish them to be implemented.

This year we received bequests from 20 alumnae and friends. To each we give a special thanks.

Marion E. Warner '20

One of four sisters who attended Connecticut College, her bequest of $10,000 will be used for the Connection Bridge in the College Center. This bridge will be named for the Warner sisters who represent one of the college's earliest "connections."

Helen Lehman Buttenweiser '27

A former college trustee, Mrs. Buttenweiser gave more than $400,000 to create the Helen Lehman Buttenweiser '27 Leadership and Community Service Wing in the renovated College Center.

Keck Undergraduate Science Program helps fund summer research

Connecticut College's quest for strength in the sciences was recognized this year by the W.M. Keck Foundation of Los Angeles, which granted $175,000 to establish the Keck Undergraduate Science Program.

This endowment, which is being matched by $200,000 from college funds and another $625,000 to be raised over the next five years, gives selected science students an opportunity to perform intensive research projects of their own design during the school year and summer.

Like the college, the Keck Foundation is committed to improving scientific excellence and educating the next generation of scientists. As such, its Science and Engineering Grant Program provides universities and colleges with needed tools for research and education.

The Keck Undergraduate Science Program is expected to set new standards for science education at Connecticut College. It also should help attract permanent support for undergraduate science research from alumni and corporations.

Students are competitively selected for the program and work under the guidance of a faculty mentor. Each student is required to make a commitment to honors or individual study and write a major paper which will be published in the college's in-house science journal. The program builds on the foundation of the successful summer science internship program which involved a total of 55 students in the summers of 1990 and 1991.

The W.M. Keck Foundation, one of the nation's largest foundations in terms of annual grants, was established in 1954 by the late William M. Keck, founder of Superior Oil Company, who also created in his will the W.M. Keck Trust for the benefit of the foundation. The foundation's primary focus is on grants to universities and colleges throughout the United States, with particular emphasis in the fields of science, engineering and medical research. It also provides limited support, focused on programs serving Southern California, in terms of community services, health care, precollege education and the arts.

Capital Giving moves Connecticut College forward

Capital gifts support projects that are over and above the normal operating budget of the college. They allow us to be distinctive, and as Connecticut College marches forward to the 21st century, fund raising efforts in the capital giving arena have generated significant support. This can be seen in the record-breaking effort realized in 1990-91 by volunteers and staff who raised $1.8 million in cash contributions and another $5.5 million in short term pledges. This achievement surpasses the previous capital fund raising record set just last year and puts the college on solid footing for meeting the objectives set forth in the five-year strategic plan, "A Time to Lead."

Of particular note are the strides made in funding the College Center Projects (Crozier-Williams renovations, Athletic Center additions and Becker House), the Center for International Studies and the Liberal Arts, two endowed chairs and endowed scholarships.

The Center for International Studies and the Liberal Arts received donations close to $1 million. The center, which draws from the college's recognized expertise in international studies, the liberal arts and foreign languages, is a focal point in Connecticut College's commitment to improving global understanding and awareness.

Endowed scholarships also grew substantially with donations totaling $667,406, or 133 percent of the 1990-91 goal. In addition, the goal of two endowed chairs per year was reached with the funding of the McCollum-Vahlteich '21 Chair in Organic Chemistry and the Elie Wiesel Chair in Judaic Studies.

The Class of 1941 broke all previous records for reunion giving by raising more than $600,000, including more than $200,000 for the Class of 1941 Meeting Room in the new College Center.

The College Center Projects continue to draw tremendous support with more than $2.9 million in commitments this year, 106 percent of the 1990-91 goal. Significantly, many donors commented that they see these projects not just as bricks and mortar but as improvements to the quality of community life on campus, a primary goal of the strategic plan.

Parents

Led by Co-Chairmen Pat and Larry Morrison P'92, 693 parents of current students and alumni contributed $162,179 to the Parents Fund. These gifts benefit today's students by providing operating support for all facets of the college's intellectual and extra-curricular life. With a solid foundation and anticipated growth in dollars and donors in future years, parent support is and will continue to be very important to the college's mission. Many thanks to all those who participated!

Corporations and foundations provide record support

Creating a better understanding of the world and its many people is a leading goal of Connecticut College. Corporations and foundations, too, are joining in the effort and this year contributed a record-breaking $1.3 million toward several of the college's major initiatives.

A significant endowment gift of $175,000 was received from the W.M. Keck Foundation to create an ongoing undergraduate science internship program, thereby giving stability and permanence to this vital component of science education.

The High School Students Advancement Program (HSSAP) also received a boost of $250,000 donated by several foundations and corporations, including the first $50,000 contribution of an overall $300,000 grant provided over three years by the Pew Charitable Trusts.

The nationally recognized HSSAP offers eighth and ninth grade minority students and their teachers from cities in New England and New York a chance to experience college for three weeks during the summer. The program is unusual in that these students are not the top students in their classes. They are, instead, those who have the ability to do college-level work but need additional motivation and direction. Connecticut College students and faculty serve as mentors and encourage these young men and women to reach their potential.

The relocation of Unity House also captured the interest of corporations and foundations. PepsiCo Inc. and the George Gund Foundation contributed $86,000 and $50,000, respectively, towards completion of that project, which provides a focus for multicultural events and learning on campus.

There was ongoing support for other programs as well. The Sherman Fairchild Foundation remains committed to aiding the development of junior faculty members through a program which provides summer research stipends and semester-long leaves. Now in its fourth year, with an overall grant of $450,000 from the foundation, that program has had a dramatic impact on the college's ability to attract and retain young faculty.

The Center for International Studies and the Liberal Arts also received continuing support from the Henry Luce Foundation with a pledge payment of $125,000 toward its $300,000 grant for operating expenses. The center is open to students of all majors who want to become proficient in a foreign language and develop an understanding of another area of the world. It provides opportunities for work internships overseas and senior research projects on some aspect of modern global society.

1991 Senior Class Pledge Program

Led by Chairman, Robert Shea, the Class of 1991 committed a total of $5,245 in pledges through the Senior Class Pledge Program, with 34% participation. This is a strong indication that the class of 1991 will continue to support its alma mater in the years to come. Established in 1980, the Senior Class Pledge Program strives to educate undergraduates about the significance of annual giving and encourages them to become active alumni. Their pledges will be credited to the 1991-92 Alumni Annual Giving Program. Thanks go to the following committee members: Robert Shea, Chair Elizabeth Grenier, Debo Adegible, Jamie O'Connor, Anjuli Basu, Jeannie Thomma, Eva Cahalan, Charles Wilson.
