We, the Class of 1927

Being the possessors of unusually sound intellect and general superiority have decreed that all those who have not attained the formidable heights of superiority shall pay due homage and respect by adhering to the subsequent edicts and statutes.

1. Upon these white curb-stones only we may tread.

2. When the wintry blasts descend from the northern heights, it shall be our privilege to promenade in unbound galoshes.

3. It shall be our privilege to enter the post office between 8.45 and 8.55 in the wee hours of the morning. At this time all other beings shall immediately take places in chapel.

4. In order that we may be shielded from the onslaught of ravenous underclassmen, we shall enter the dining-rooms before the sweep of the hungry hordes.

5. We shall hereafter enjoy our repast in the hidden recesses of the alcove at the refectory.

6. And if, from our delightful solitude, we are disturbed by gay and childish prattlings it shall be our right to request quiet by the mere raising of our distinguished hands.

7. On the first Sabbath of each month we shall seek seclusion in Knowlton Hall for the evening meal.

8. When we travel to and from the village in the thereby honored trolley coaches we alone shall occupy the side benches near the portals and enjoy our tour in comfort and ease.

9. We shall at all times and in all places expect such courtesy and consideration due our reputable years.

Given under our hand and sword, this 29th day of September, in the year of our Lord, 1926, in the city of New London, state of Connecticut.

SERVICE LEAGUE RECEPTION

To begin the college year without an introduction to the people and the societies that give variety, spice, and inspiration to college life would be much similar to plunging into the midst of a drama without understanding the role of the leading characters. So to introduce the uninitiated and to renew the acquaintance of the returning students, the annual Service League Reception was held in the salon of Knowlton House on Tuesday, September twenty-first.

In the receiving line were President and Mrs. Marshall, Dean Nye, Dr. Benedict, Professor Lieb; Edith Clark, President of Service League; Lois Gordan, Executive Secretary, Florence Hopper, President of Student Government; Deborah Lippincott, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee of Service League; Harriet Taylor, President of the Senior class; Elizabeth Gallup, President of the Junior class; and

Freshman Week Experiment Proves Successful

Freshman week, as planned by a faculty-student committee and as directed by Edith Clark '27, proved an interesting and successful affair. The members of Student Government Cabinet and the house Juniors were back by Wednesday, September 14th, to welcome the newcomers as they arrived. Cabinet met the trains and the house Juniors stayed in their respective houses. All through the week this group of girls spent their time entertaining the new class, helping them to become settled and to become acquainted with the college, the professors, and one another.

On Thursday evening the Freshmen learned the history of the college as it was presented to them by Dean Nye. That same evening they saw a movie of C. C., taken several years ago, when both long skirts and high hair were in vogue. This was perhaps more interesting to the upper classmen who recognized in the picture several of the members of the class of '23 and '24. After the movie, Lois Bridge, College Song leader, accompanied by the upper classmen taught the Freshmen college songs, including several of comedy and mascot fame.

At various other times during the week the Freshmen had occasion to learn the aims, ideals, and rules of the college during meetings with the President, Dean Benedict, Florence Hopper, President of Student Government, and Elizabeth Gallup, President of the Junior class. One evening was also given over to the Athletic Association when the point system was explained by Esther Hunt. Following this were speeches by members of the A. A. cabinet, telling of the various sports. Frances Huling spoke about hockey; Marian Lamson, basketball; Elizabeth Speirs, riflery; Edith Cloyes, C. C. O. C.; Frances Williams, tennis.

After the meeting, a basketball game was played to give the Freshmen the idea of playing with good form rather than in the rough, prep-school manner.

The Intelligence Test the medical and physical examinations, and the instruction as to the use of the library were three essentials which 1930 finished before classes began.

Besides all the meetings, ever so many good times were planned. On one afternoon the cabinet served tea in the quadrangle to Freshmen and faculty. Then there was the boat ride—enjoyed by the whole college family—new students and old, faculty and their families, and house hostesses. A large boat had been hired, an orchestra played, people danced, sang, learned new friends in the darkness and enjoyed the moon on the water and the harbor lights. Another occasion for jollity was the night when each house had its house picnic. It was a hazy afternoon and from all the outskirts of campus could be seen small columns of smoke trailing lazily to the sky—the amphitheatre, the graveyard, Nameaug rocks, Bolleswood—each had its group of picnickers.

The faculty were very helpful in making Freshman Week a success. They also returned early. The house fellows and faculty advisors ate in the Caps and Aprons Abound.

Friday night the class of 1930 became socially recognized for the first time, that is, at least by the Sophomores. A small, inconspicuous, notice requesting that all Freshmen assemble in the basement of the gym at seven o'clock Friday evening gave first hint of Freshmen initiation.

With faces that looked perfectly fearless and carefree did the Freshmen, one by one, pass through the

College Begins Its Eleventh Year

First Chapel Service

Connecticut College opened for its eleventh year with a chapel service at nine o'clock on Wednesday morning, September 22. The Academic Procession marched to their places in cap and gown. The service was led by President Marshall.

In his remarks to the new and the returning classes, he stated that the progressing world is one which youth has done much to build—that many of the great figures of history accomplished the work for which we remember them, before they attained the age of thirty years. And to us, as a part of youth, the opportunities of the world belong as much as to any in the past, in so far as our capabilities and earnestness of purpose entitle us to them.

These rights are earned, however, and not passively conferred. It is the function of higher education to make youth realize its responsibilities and the glorious possibilities of its powers, and to direct these, so far as it is able, toward fulfillment.

Certain manifestations of the times make us wonder if youth is today worthy of the high place that has been its possession in the past. An extreme devotion toward the enjoyment of superficial pleasures—bridge, moving-pictures, automobiles, transient pleasures all of them—apparently color the life of today. But the cultivation of pleasure, simply for its own sake, is not the aim of higher education and of college.

These are significant days, when a great group of young people are entering the colleges and universities of the world, to prepare themselves to take up the duties of responsible citizenship, and it is for them to realize the seriousness of their purpose.

At the close of the President's address, Dr. Leib made announcement of the change in his duties to the Director of Admissions, and the transference of those as Registrar to Miss Milton, whose office is in the room adjacent to the former office of the Registrar.

HYGIENE COURSE IS REVISED

This year we find that the Course in Hygiene which is required of Freshmen has undergone some changes which are quite radical in form. Instead of the weekly lecture and occasional quiz, the class is being conducted more like the "Art of Living" course. Many of the departments will be represented by members of the faculty who will point out the relation of this subject to health education. It can easily be seen that the word hygiene is being used here in its broadest sense, the science of right living. President Marshall opened the course with a talk on Budgeting Time and how this should contribute to right living. The classes are to meet in the gym for lecture approximately every other week. At each meeting of the class, the students will be assigned outside work. On the alternate weeks they will meet in small

A BEACON LIGHT

A small red ship with two high, lighted masts came into view, and the passengers of the ocean liner crowded the rails to see. It was the Nantucket lightship—the beacon toward which the great vessel had been traveling since it left behind it the white cliffs of England. Slowly, steadily, on its charted way it moved—through the misty fog off the Scilly Isles, through the midnight blue waters of the gulf stream, where sulphur glowed in the dark, like golden balls as the waters were churned into foam off the stern. Slowly it moved, pitching and rolling on a sea that even the ship's log termed "rough," steadily again through grey, choppy water, leaving a smooth wide path behind it stretching far to the horizon—on, on, never turning from its goal, its first beacon light, the Nantucket light ship.

Another voyage is now beginning. We see the new college year stretching out before us like a sea—misty, unknown, beautiful. A nine months' voyage rather than a nine-day one, nine months of sailing over waters fathomless, unruffled save for a smooth, rhythmical swell—nine months lighted with glowing spots of pleasures, colored with deep, midnight blue of satisfying endeavor, the steel grey of an occasional nerve-testing storm. But always, ahead of us is a beacon light by which we may guide our course, a light which, if we follow it will never lead us astray. Let us let the gleam of that light of "honor," act as our Nantucket lightship—and lead us to the land of success.

ALUMNI READING LISTS

In the last Connecticut College Bulletin which contains the Baccalaureate Sermon of the class of 1926 there is, in addition to the Commencement Exercises program, announcement of degrees, honors, and prizes, a reading list for alumnae. In a short introductory note President Marshall explains the purpose of this reading list. Many alumnae wish to continue to study along the same lines that they followed in college. These lists, which are to

NEW COLUMN INSTITUTED

That a college paper should have some space devoted to the actual thinking that is going on among its readers, as well as a catalog of their activities in other and more obvious lines, seems eminently desirable and no less eminently lacking. We earnestly solicit, therefore, contributions from students concerning their sincere opinions upon whatever matters seem to them to be of real importance, and we would be greatly pleased to have the Faculty correct us in these opinions, or to express to us through this medium some of their own.

AS COLLEGE PEOPLE

As college people, we automatically become members of the supposedly highest level of society—the level to which the rest look for their leaders in the intellectual, political, and to a large extent, in the practical phases of life. As the group most highly privileged in the disinterested examination of all human problems, it seems right that we should be held responsible for the opinions that shall mold the life of our own day and set the stage for the succeeding acts in the drama of man's development.

Everyone will agree that this is our logical position, but what of our capabilities for filling it? Were life so simple that our problems could be specialized, individual, and well-defined, the solution would be comparatively easy. But our life is not so simple—we cannot act within an isolated niche and so fulfill our duty to our fellows. We are citizens not only of a great and complex nation, but of the world. We are responsible members of human society, and all its problems are ours in so far as we are capable of dealing with them—and if we, the highest level of society, are not so capable, to whom may the world appeal?

Then let us look critically at ourselves for a moment, perhaps not so much as Freshmen, but as Juniors and Seniors. How are we fitted to assume the responsibilities soon to be conferred upon us? Probably at best we have simply come to realize our total inadequacy for dealing with the problems to which the present day is imperatively demanding answers. No doubt very many more of us do not even know that the problems exist.

However great the shortcomings of its citizens, the world nevertheless is confronting them with the gravest situations, ruthless conditions which can be combated only on a basis of complete realization and understanding.

As college people then, it is our duty to become more fully self-conscious of our position and our responsibilities, and in so doing we may find them to be more serious and more imperative than we have dreamed.

be published from time to time, will enable the alumnae to satisfy this desire. The list has been made out by heads of various departments and, although limited, affords a rich and wide field for those who care to benefit by it. President Marshall urges that those people who find it of service will write the President's office to tell how often such a list would be welcome and how it might be expanded or modified. There are the titles of numerous books under the general headings of Botany, Bacteriology, Landscape Gardening, Chemistry, Classical Philology, Economics and Sociology, Fine Arts, French, German, History and Political Science, Home Economics, Hygiene, The Library, Music, Physics and Astronomy, Philosophy, Psychology and Education, Spanish, Zoology.

FREE SPEECH

[The Editors of the News do not hold themselves responsible for the opinions expressed in this column.]

Dear Editor: The Sophomore class is to be commended for its dignity and self-control on the night of Freshmen initiations. That occasion is generally one for much raucousness and far too heavy railery. From all accounts the hazing this year will be mild and friendly, yet severe enough for necessary discipline. When we realize the opportunity which the Sophomores have—their privilege of subduing and punishing their more youthful associates—we congratulate them on their good taste.

Yet there is another side to the question. It has been the custom and tradition for Freshmen to be submitted to such treatment as would bring to light any faults, or improprieties. These, when discovered, were dealt with adequately and many times most effectively. Evidently the Freshmen will be mere participants in the general fun this year. We hope they will show their appreciation and gratitude by providing as much entertainment as possible. Will they benefit by the consideration shown them? Will they prove that they are able to assume the duties and responsibilities of Freshmen? Will they perform with good will the few tasks prescribed by the Sophomores?

We have all been urged to ponder well on the motto "Nothing in excess." Already one class is practicing this doctrine. It seems plausible, too, that students, mature enough to enter college, would need only a suggestion as to the proper campus decorum. Freshmen are usually eager to make an impression. We hope they will not make the mistake of misdirecting their efforts. Our personal advice and appeal is that they "be themselves." The Sophomores are trying to give them a hearty welcome, with only a trace of admonition. Compared to the old days, the treatment is very, very gentle! Now it remains to be seen just how the two classes will carry on. It will be interesting to note the Freshman reaction and response. By Thanksgiving what will be the spirit between the two classes? If this new venture is a success, all concerned deserve our praise and respect.

TO '27, '28, '29 AND '30

The first edition of Quarterly for 1926-1927 will make its appearance within the next few weeks. It is the earnest hope of the Quarterly Board that more interest in and enthusiasm for literary work will be evidenced by undergraduates this year in the form of many contributions to forthcoming issues of this publication.

It should be remembered that Quarterly seeks to reflect the trend of thought, originality, creative ability and sincere literary effort of the student body as a whole. As such it should be truly representative of the theoretically intelligent and thinking group of which each of us is a part. It is therefore in the nature of a challenge and responsibility, as well as an opportunity, that Quarterly asks for the active interest of new students and the renewed support of returning students in making this young, yet flourishing enterprise a significant, worthwhile venture.

A box may be found in the basement of New London Hall for the purpose of receiving all Quarterly contributions; poetry, essays, short stories, one-act plays, and criticisms.

President and Mrs. Marshall will be at home to Freshmen the Sunday afternoons of October 3rd and 10th from four to six o'clock.

THE BOOK SHELF

"ROUGH JUSTICE"

By C. E. Montague

"Rough Justice" is one of those English novels that wonder what, after all, England is coming to, with socialism, the new political power of the laborers, and the carelessness of the younger generation. After propounding this old, old question, Montague finds his solution in the Great War which gives England a social, political, and economic rebirth. Save for the section dealing with the war, Montague is most reminiscent of Galsworthy. Lacking Galsworthy's vigour and irony, Montague, nevertheless, possesses much of his social philosophy, and his beauty of expression. Montague writes deftly and surely. He has a polished style, and a rare ability in choosing graceful and beautiful figures of speech.

The real interest in the book lies in a rather remarkable character study. Throughout the youth of Bron, the hero, he admired with an intensity amounting almost to worship, a cousin of his. Victor was a boy who could always say the clever thing, turn other's words into mere nothings, become ennobled by an experience in a Boy's School rather than being deadened. Bron who was rather spiritual by nature would find his serious thoughts twisted into a joke by Victor's biting irony and yet the more Victor teased him, the greater grew Bron's love for him. The war hurt Bron far less in taking his arm than it did when it toppled his hero into the dust. The war was never meant for such as Victor. Used to being the hero of more than one boy's life, he suddenly found himself a raw recruit without the stamina to stand the grueling work of digging trenches and marching countless miles through dust and mud. His collapse was both physical and moral. He deserted, disguised himself as a French peasant. But even this life was not left to him. His whereabouts were discovered and he was shot as a deserter. To Molly, his fiancée, was given the horror of seeing him whom she had thought dead, as a plodding peasant fearful of any strange eye, and to Bron, his worshipper, was given the hardship of listening while an officer gave a laughing account of Victor's execution. Victor stands out as one of the most tragic ironies of the war—a hero whom the war broke.

"Rough Justice" is an excellent book. It contributes to literature a new sort of character, and it writes of the war understandingly. Montague strips war of its glamour, as most recent writers have done. Now that the war is beginning to slip from our minds, fiction-writers have turned to it as a rich field of material for novels. In the midst of the fiery heat of the war, the poets sang their songs, but today, from a greater perspective, the novelists are writing of the war, with little prejudice, and a great understanding.

DOROTHY BAYLEY '28, NEW SPEAKER OF HOUSE

Dorothy Bayley '28, has been elected Speaker of the House of Representatives. This position was left vacant by the withdrawal from college of Ione Barrett. Miss Bayley was President of her Freshman class, Vice-President of her Sophomore class, and has resigned the position of Honor Court Judge to assume the new responsibility. She has taken part in a great many of the Dramatic Club productions, and is active on class teams.

The variety of Miss Bayley's offices makes her well fitted for the position.

COLLEGE STATISTICS

Approximately 60,000 men and women in 122 colleges and universities of the United States, 39 per cent. of the entire enrollment, are working their way through college, according to information furnished the Interior Department, Bureau of Education. About 55 per cent. of the men and 22 per cent. of the women in these institutions are supporting themselves in whole or in part.

ALUMNAE NOTES

The News is planning to print, this year, notes of interest concerning the alumnae. As the column is to be compiled for the perusal of the undergraduates especially, the news will be concerning members of classes which the general student body has known in college.

Three members of the class of 1926 are now married. Grace Parker was married immediately after graduation to Mr. Robert L. Schumper, a graduate of Yale University. Alice Taylor, 1925, was one of her bridesmaids.

The marriage of Marian Cogswell and Ralph Burbank Harvell has also been announced.

On September 4th, Margaret Sterling was married to Orrin Benson Wurmtz at Cleveland, Ohio. Frances Angier '26, and Adelaide Murhead '26, were in the procession. Helen Hood, Katherine King and Theodosia Hewlett were among the guests from out of town.

All the college is happy to hear of the arrival of little Nancy Hughes Hoag, daughter of Margaret Ewing Hoag '25.

On the twenty-first of September, Jeannette Sperry, President of Student Government in 1922, was married to Jameson Sadler Slocum, of Princeton University.

The News will be glad to hear of what the alumnae are doing. If any student knows items of special interest, please put such a notice in campus mail addressed to the News.

FRESHMAN WEEK PROVES SUCCESSFUL

main dining room with the students. President Marshall came to dinner with them one evening and, at another time, the Freshmen were assigned to tables with their advisors so that they might learn to know each other.

Sunday was a fitting end to Freshman week. There was a morning service, conducted by President Marshall. In the evening, the students gathered in Knowlton House to sing hymns. After the singing President Marshall read poetry. Surely such an inspiring evening made the Freshman even more happy to be at Connecticut.

IMPROVEMENTS ON CAMPUS

It appears that many new and interesting improvements have taken place on campus during the last few months of school vacation. One of the most important of these improvements has been the change in the heating system of New London Hall. The heating system now consists of a vaporizing process, which will tend to make the north side of New London Hall as uniformly warm as the other parts of the building. No more will students be seen emerging from Room 206 as if from a cold shower bath, with noses red and hands and feet tingling with the cold. A new steam line has also been laid out to Thames Hall. This new line serves to heat the Dining Hall, and all the rest of the building besides.

The management of the kitchen, with a view to enlargement and greater convenience, was an important improvement connected with the Refectory. The old dish-washing machine has likewise been discarded for a new steam-run process which washes and dries the dishes practically all in one.

Due to the damaging results of a thunder storm which demolished the chimney, Blackstone now has a new chimney.

The tennis courts have likewise received their yearly supervision, and are in fine form to play. Right next to the tennis courts has been built a small observatory for astronomy. By no means unimportant has been the making of a new athletic field for the use of the students this year, and a small nursery, well stocked with new plants, including small evergreens, has been added to the Botany department. Repairs to roofs and drain pipes of New London Hall and all the other stone dormitories have also been effected, and a new sidewalk leading to the dining room is now in process of construction. The equipment in the power house has also been enlarged to accommodate extra requirements in the heating system.

All these listed improvements show what rapid advance the college is making in its step toward a more perfect institution.

Like an immense centipede the line of students filed past, receiving a cordial assurance of welcome to the college. The steady prolonged buzz of many lowered voices filled the room.

Then Edith Clark '27, individually and characteristically, presented the representatives of the various college organizations, omitting, however, the Presidents of Student Government, and A. A. who had previously spoken to the Freshmen. Miss Gordon assured everyone that as Executive Secretary she wished to be of service to all; Sarah Emily Brown '28 enthusiastically appealed for student interest in Charter House; Eleanor Wood '28 told of the opportunities all, as members of the Dramatic club, would have of displaying their histrionic talent; Barbara Tracy '27 urged both the talented and the industrious to try out for News; Dorothy Davenport '28 spoke of the work and the opportunities of Press Board; Henrietta Owens '28 expressed the hope that more than the faithful few would write for the college literary magazine, The Quarterly. The president of each of the departmental clubs welcomed the Freshmen and outlined to them the purposes, scope and membership requirements of her club. These were: Theodora Sanford, History Club; Cora Lutz, French Club; Minnie Watchinsky, German Club; Elizabeth Cade, Spanish Club; Lois Bridge, Psychology Club; and Frances Joseph, Mathematics Club. After the speeches there was dancing, and refreshments were served.

lower doors of the gym. Within they were met by a delegation of sophomores who sternly directed them to the locker room and requested them to "park the happy mood outside". To an onlooker it would have been amusing to see the expression of fearlessness gradually be displaced by one of worry.

Finally after silence had been maintained to the point of the proverbial pindrop, the Freshmen were ordered to march single file upstairs. As the first green head appeared, the great circle of sophomores who awaited started a rain of remarks that lasted the entire evening. When the last of the line was within the circle, Frances Reed, the Sophomore President, commanded them to be seated. In a brief, dignified speech she explained what was expected of them in regard to the proper respect of upper classmen and Honorable Sophomores.

At the conclusion of this speech instructions for the continuance of the initiation rites were given. Each Freshman, as her name was called, was asked to walk up to the platform, turn around and repeat her name and answer any queries. She was then given a red and white cap which she must wear until Thanksgiving day. On Monday morning every Freshman is to appear wearing a white apron which she must keep spotlessly clean until noon. Thereafter she is to hide the apron but if found by a Sophomore, who has the privilege of dirtying it in any way, she must wash it and again have it spotless for wearing the following morning. This is to be continued until Friday.

The last name was finally called, the last head was crowned with its cap of red and white and the solemn ceremonies of the initiation were concluded.

should prove extremely profitable to Freshmen, not only because of the subject matter but also because of the general knowledge it will give of subjects which will be open to them when they are upper-classmen.
