Journalist speaks on medias' role

by Bill Loomey

Maintaining that freedom of the press is a "vital function" in society, James Boylan, Associate Professor of Journalism at Columbia University, addressed members of the American Civil Liberties Union at a meeting of the New London County chapter last Thursday. Bill Cibes, Instructor in Government and chairman of the organizations local branch, introduced Mr. Boylan as a man "amply qualified to instruct members in their efforts as citizens to "hold the press to accountability." In addition to his academic duties at Columbia, Mr. Boylan was also the Columbia Review of Journalism from 1961 to 1969. Boylan began by tracing the evolution of the news media from its roots as a "means of communication" to the "industrial" it has become today. "Once, an individual reader could begin and maintain a personal relationship, a personal dialogue with his newspaper. Today, any relationship with any newspaper, at any time, occurs usually by accident," the former editor remarked. Boylan referred to the average reader of the daily tabloid as a "passive news consumer." "As an industry, the news establishment has been an overwhelming success; America has become the world's foremost news consumer." Boylan further referred to the general propensity of Americans to criticize the media for striking a poor balance between "good" and "bad" news. "A sizable portion of the citizenry, especially many well informed advocates of the conservative persuasion, lament the fact that the news media concentrates on bad news, on riots and civil unrest, on minorities and the disadvantaged." Boylan responded to this conjecture by stating that "news is what's happening." "What is more important here is that individuals and constituencies have a complaint, and the media has been consistently slow to respond to it.

Pass-Fail: decreasing interest?

by Pam Allapoulos

Nearly seven years ago, Connecticut College adopted a widely accepted academic option, namely Pass-Fail. After a poll of most of the New England colleges that already had established Pass-Fail programs, the college initiated the option on a trial basis, subject to review. The advantages of the plan, as seen by its initiators and the faculty, were, 1) the anticipation of student interest in usually unexplored subject matter; 2) the alleviation of some academic pressure; 3) the limitation of the option in the major field would cause graduate schools and employers to examine more closely the quality of that major. A change that was recently instituted in the system was the change of name from Pass-Fail to Pass-Not Pass. To some, this might appear to be trivial, yet, according to Dr. Rhyne, the former title manifested technical difficulties. The "F" that appeared on a transcript created confusion by the Registrar and graduate schools to mean flunk, not fail. However, when a student fails a course that he is taking Pass-Not Pass, his cumulative average is still computed on the basis of his other courses. Refinements and Decreasing Participation

Statistics have shown, as of late, a decreasing interest in the Pass-Not Pass option. In its peak year, that of 1969-1970, 47 per cent of the seniors and 57 per cent of the juniors elected to utilize it. In terms of the present academic semester, the percentage of seniors has remained the same, but the juniors represent only 24 per cent. According to Dr. Rhyne, "The option may not look good on the record in professional schools and jobs, but that's only my impression." Although there are

Tentative approval for ConnPIRG

At its meeting last Thursday, College Council passed a unanimous resolution accepting "in principle" the establishment of a chapter of ConnPIRG, the Connecticut Public Interest Research Group, on campus. At the meeting, some members of the Council voiced concern over ConnPIRG effect upon the tax exempt status of the College, and its liability for the organizations actions. The Council also stressed its desire to "periodically review" the state of the ConnPIRG chapter, and to make any decision on future funding at an annual "in principle" date. Ted Hathaway, campus organizer for ConnPIRG, said his organization would comply with the wishes of the Council for further clarification "very quickly."

New library: the show gets underway

by Bruce E. Collin

Noting that "Today marks the start of a new building that will play a vital role in the future of our college," President Oakes Ames, along with numerous other campus personages, launched the construction of the new campus library last Saturday by breaking ground on the proposed site at 11:40 a.m. In his address to the campus community, President Ames emphasized that he was "thinking mostly about people" who had been and will be connected with the building's realization, rather than just the massive structure itself. The President singled out the role played by his predecessor, Charles E. Shain, whose "vision and powers of persuasion have been much to make this day possible."

Board Chairman William E.S. Griswold Jr. commented on the importance of the historic moment by declaring that a library is "the heart and brain of an educational institution." A humorous touch was added to the ceremony by Frances Pratt, chairman of the library building fund committee, who jokingly offered the job of naming the library to anyone who would contribute the remaining $3 million needed for the project's total payment.

Also witnessing the ceremony were numerous Alumni Council members who were engaging in their annual campus meeting this weekend. Included in this prestigious group were women who helped in the famous 1922 transference of books from New London Hall to the new Palmer Library. The actual ground-breaking took place approximately at the site of the new library's south wall. Two shovels were particularly conspicuous during the digging. One was marked with previous ground-breaking dates, including the 1824 commencement of the building of Knowlton House. The other noteworthy tool was a red plastic shovel contributed by the student body.

The library building itself will be a reinforced concrete structure with architectural exposed aggregate precast exterior walls. Windows of the building will be made of anodized aluminum. The proposed date of construction completion of the $6.5 million library is April 15, 1976.

President Ames turns over the first spadeful of earth while Mr. McCloy looks on.

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to the article appearing in last week's Pundit regarding WCNI. First, I'd like to congratulate Ronnie Howard, alias Ralph Meliah, on his generally successful portrayal of the present and future state of WCNI. Secondly, I'd like to respond to a statement where I was quoted as saying, "We are students, after all." First principle; then fact. I, as most people, do not like being quoted about something that was never said. WCNI would not have to consider the purchase of slander and liability insurance if misquoting or fictitious quoting never occurred, however, it does. I am bothered by the connotations of the statement supposedly quoted by me (taken in context) as well as the fact that I would not have put a similar thought in those words. Lastly, things are not as bad as some inferred from the article. WCNI's application to the F.C.C. for our FM Broadcast License was mailed today, September 30th. We should be hearing from the F.C.C. shortly with the official go ahead to begin FM transmission.

letter to the editor

Changing the name of our dear paper from PUNDIT to COURIER is a foolish idea. People, after a time, recognize a name as representing something, in this case the paper. People off campus will wonder what has become of the paper, and will wonder why they cannot get hold of the name PUNDIT any longer. Habit is a strong thing to break.

To say we must change the name at all is ridiculous. There is no stigma attached to the name PUNDIT around campus. The only stigma is in the minds of the board and student Government. Students regard the paper as good, fair, or abominable; but as the paper, not as people. If indeed people do not know what "pundit" means, and fail to look it up in a dictionary, then they have no right to complain. Even "astyanagras" is in dictionaries.

If the name of the paper must be changed, for whatever reason, "courier" is a rotten choice. No matter what we want to be, we are an "intellectual elite". If we were not, we would be getting an education at a state university for much less mo rash, or we would be learning a trade at a technical school. Deceiving oneself as to one's identity is always bad. If we want, to say we need a newspaper name because we are a newspaper is fallacious. COURIER is not a newspaper name because we are a newspaper is fallacious. Courier is not a newspaper name because we are a newspaper is fallacious. Courier is not a newspaper name because we are a newspaper is fallacious.

The name itself is dishwater. "courier" is as plain and as bland as the major amount of prose in it and the views it exposes. In fact, in changing from a name with a certain flair to one with none at all, the Editorial Board is taking dead aim on their apparent goal of absolute non-controversiality and meekness.

Sincerely,
James McNeill Whistler

A Rose by any other Name

When the existing norms or principles that govern what is conceived as normal, right and good come into question, when established principles are challenged, when the existing norms are no longer applicable to a changing situation, the process known as change occurs. Change can be subtle and low-key, as when Esso quietly switched to Exxon, or it can be direct and radical, as when Pundit suddenly becomes the Conn. College Courier.

Was the change necessary? We on the Editorial Board felt so. The attitude was that the paper had suffered long enough under the stigma of its former title. The word pundit comes from the Hindi word pundit, meaning a learned man or teacher, who gives authoritative opinions. We felt this name typified a kind of cute elitism, something more suitable to a William F. Buckley monthly than to the Conn. newspaper.

After much deliberation, the name Courier was selected. It is suggestive of a newspaper, although it is not of the common, bland variety, such as "The Times," or "The News." You don't have to look courier up in a dictionary to determine its relevance to a newspaper, although, if one did, you'd discover that courier means "a messenger; an agent for transferring information." And that is basically what The Courier is.

The history of Pundit has been unstable, and, as a result, the quality of the paper suffered. We hope that The Courier will mark the beginning of consistent quality journalism.

Secret Service vs. the Kennedys
by Jack Anderson
WASHINGTON - The recent kidnap scare against the children of the late Senator Robert Kennedy nearly precipitated a rebellion within the ranks of the Secret Service. Some 60 agents were flown in from all over the country to cover the Kennedys - a move they regarded as illegal.

Indeed, Secret Service Director Stuart Knight himself recommended extending protection, but he was overruled by his boss, Treasury Secretary William Simon.

Then the agents learned they were not responding to a "threat" at all. They had been ordered on emergency duty as a result of a third-hand tip from a police informant in the Boston area. The agents were furious.

Covering the Kennedys is a chore the Secret Service largely regards as abhorrent anyway. Much of the ill feeling results from the agency's experience with Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

The law requires the Secret Service to protect the late President Kennedy's children until they turn 16. Thus they are still looking after young John. But Mrs. Onassis is extremely particular about the way the agency does its job. One insider describes her as "persecutory." She doesn't want John to feel oppressed by his protectors, so she demands the agents stay out of sight as much as possible.

Nor does young John himself like the protection details following him around. A few months ago, he slipped out of Jackie's New York apartment, hopped on his bike, and sped into Central Park to play tennis. A drug addict assaulted him and made off with the expensive bike.

Through some extraordinary detective work, the police tracked down the assailant. But Mrs. Onassis refused to prosecute.

Secret Service insiders were flabbergasted. Now they are thinking of laying down the law to Jackie. Either she lets them do their job the way they want, or her protective detail will be lifted.

Economic Battle Plan: White House sources say President Ford has all but made up his mind on changes in economic policy.

The President received a lot of free and conflicting advice at the recent economic summit conference. But in private meetings with his closest advisors, he had little trouble mapping out a battle plan.

First, the President plans to ask for a tax cut to ease the impact of inflation on the poor. He also is seriously considering giving industry some incentives to expand production.

Next, he plans a whopping 10-cent-per-gallon increase in the gasoline tax. Ford plans to use the money for a public jobs program. This will ease the unemployment caused by his continuing tight money policy.

The President also hopes that the increase in gasoline prices will help drive down consumption. This would give him a stronger bargaining position with the oil-rich Arab nations of the Middle East.

The Arabs were unimpressed, our sources say, by Ford's recent sword-rattling. The President obviously threatened economic sanctions against the oil-producing nations if prices continued to rise.

The Arabs know that they literally have us over the barrel. And they feel confident that the United States will not dare to take action against them.

It all boils down to higher gas prices for consumers, along with higher food prices. Only industry, and the very poor, can hope for some relief from inflation.

Cuban Thaw: Upon reaching with Havana has outraged the million Cubans who fled to this country to escape Castro. Many of them lost their fortunes, others have friends and relatives in Castro's prisons.

For years, the Central Intelligence Agency has trained exiled Cubans to do battle with Castro. More risk their lives on commando raids. Now the government that encouraged them to fight is preparing to befriend the Communist leader.

We have had detailed discussions with Cuban underground leaders. Although they have a tendency to agitate, there is no question about their boiling anger. They are threatening to mount a terrorist campaign inside the United States against the politicians and businessmen who support Castro. These Cuban leaders have told us if they can't fight Castro in Cuba, they will fight him here.

Intelligence analysts are predicting, therefore, that at least a few terrorists, in imitation of the Palestinian and Irish rebels, will carry out acts of terror in the United States.

Footnote: Castro's relations with the Soviet Union are not asrosy as the Communist press make them appear. According to reliable sources in the Cuban underground, two Russian sailors were jailed last year for stabbing to death a Cuban yeata. The sailors had been selling the boy hard-to-get items for the Cuban blackmarket. They caught a glimpse of the youth's hefty bankroll, killed him for it, and tossed him into the sea. The Soviet sailors were thrown into El Morro prison and are now doing time at the Jaguars work camp for criminals near Havana.

Washington Whirl: Some people see Henry Kissinger as a steely Prussian, but in truth he's not above telling a joke on himself. Recently, he told friends that during the Kennedys Administration, he had dinner at the White House with JFK, Robert Kennedy and Secretary of State Dean Rusk. Kissinger was so nervous that he cut his lamb chop it scooted all the way over to Rusk's plate. That, said Kissinger, was the last time he was invited to the White House for 12 years... At one time, according to our sources in the intelligence community, the CIA had a grisly system for determining the money due its Laotian blackmarket. They used to chop off the ears of every enemy killed. The practice was terminated when the CIA realized there was no way to be certain that every pair of ears turned in had once been attached to a Communist head.

Last Tango in the Cro Bar
by Walter Palmer

Editorial Comment: It was difficult for me to determine how to present last Thursday's drink-out in the Cro Bar. Concern was expressed that if this incident was made public, then it would encourage people to participate in another contest. I am in no way encouraging or even condoning last week's drinking contest, and the unfortunate rowdy activity that occurred following the contest. However, in all fairness to those two groups who set the drinking records, (the soccer team and the Brew Boys from Morrison) neither group had any intention of imposing on other people or doing damage to themselves or the bar. In fact, when the soccer team first set the record two weeks ago, they only went with the intention of having a good time. Basically, it was the same with the brew boys, although they were shooting for that $9 pitcher record. As a member of the committee, Attilio Regolo commented after it was all over, it got too dangerous. Everyone was breaking glasses, standing on the tables, getting sick - it got out of hand. I can't afford to have those contests - it would be any more official drinking contests in the bar.

Also, no future drinking bouts will be written up in the Courier.

I would only serve to encourage this activity, which I do not. Yet, in keeping with the "stand on it" spirit of the Courier (and the risk of sounding hypocritical) I'm presenting last Thursday's contest, not because I condone it, but because, well, I think you'll enjoy it.

That's all of my rambling rationalization - let's pick up the action, one week ago in the bar...

1:36 p.m. - 7 pitchers

The situation was tense. About a dozen guys sat around a table in the middle of a generally deserted Cro-bar. Three mostly awkward pitchers quietly foamed at the center of the table. Dana, the informal team captain of this group, infamously known as the Brew Boys, (mostly hard-core from Morrison Hotel) admitted he was worried. "It's gonna be tight. We need more guys. But make sure you put this in - continued on p. 6
Nicholson in pieces

by Richard Halpern

Last Saturday night, Connecticut College was treated to a showing of "Five Easy Pieces," a film that has won several Academy Awards (including Best Picture), is loved by all, and is perhaps one of the more overrated movies of the past few years. Jack Nicholson stars as a man plagued by a problem common to many of us: whether to dig oil wells or become a concert pianist. He lives in a small Texan town with his gang's friend (Karen Black), who looks and behaves like a shaved monkey, and with his best buddy, who specially is producing napkins from his nose. Jack's job is drilling for oil, but he finds the petroleum business rather crude (he has, you see, the soul of an artist). In order to relieve his depression, he visits his paralysed father.

Deaf clean-up man

Dear old dad lives in a statey mansion on an island off the coast of Washington. He is the victim of two strokes and now spends his time vegetating in a wheelchair. Caring for him are his small feat, since the show has been defunct for ages. John Lee and Dale Roberts never heard of 'Diver Dan.' Kimberly Reynolds knocked off a few screamingly funny Elvis Presley tunes in a la the Grand Master himself. Peter Guttman offered us a garish folk song sung in German, and Eva Fellows and Tracy "Goobie" Gilday sang about two bars of mystical ballad about Cocaine Bill and Morphine Sue. We had been waiting for Paul Fulton since Diver Dan; he finally arrived and sang, with his own guitar accompaniment, a Corn College fight song, songs dedicated to Burdick and Freeman, and 'The Crotier Williams Blues'. The tunes were original and amusing; they also contained references to the nuances of life at Conn which continually haunt us. Paul closed the show with a lovely instrumental, which managed to obliterate the nasty taste left in our mouths by Peter Guttman's (with Michael Booth as JFK) imitation of Jackie Kennedy Onassis on November 22.

Poetry reading
MIDDLETOWN, Conn. Robert Siegel, award-winning poet and assistant professor of English at Dartmouth College, will read from his works on Thursday, October 16, in Wesleyan University's Russell House. The 8 p.m. program, sponsored by the Wesleyan Honors College, is open to the public without charge.

An Illinois native, Siegel received his B.A. from Wheaton College (Ill.), his M.A. from Johns Hopkins University, and his Ph.D. from Harvard. Since 1967 he has been a member of the English Department at Dartmouth. During the past year he was poet-in-residence.

Siegel's poems have been published in journals and magazines, including New York Times Magazine, Atlantic Monthly, Granite, Poetry Northwest, and other periodicals and anthologies.

BACH
Under the direction of Mr. Paul Althouse, Assistant Professor of Music the Cantata No. 8 of J.S. Bach, Leibster Gott, warr werd ich sterben, will be performed as part of the morning worship service in Harkness Chapel this coming Sunday, October 13 at 11:00 a.m.

The first in a series of three Bach Cantatas to be offered during the fall semester, the Cantata will be performed by the Harkness Chapel Choir and a student-faculty orchestral ensemble. As Bach originally composed his Cantatas for use in a liturgical setting, the morning worship service will recreate the original context of the music.

The Reverend Charles Gonzalez, S.J., will be the guest speaker for the service. Father Gonzalez, who once taught courses in Theology at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., is currently the Roman Catholic Chaplain at Wesleyan University in Middletown. The title of his sermon is "Thinking Beyond the Sacred Cattle."

Other participants in the service will include Beth Seager '76, a Connecticut College student attending Wesleyan this semester under the 12-college exchange, and David Robb, College Chaplain.

Women's group rising
This year, it hopes to show more movies, sponsor more trips and dances, invite women guest speakers, buy magazines relating to women and possibly explore into a car workshop.

Although the discussion sessions are comprised mainly of women, very often men attend them to either observe or express their views. Any activities sponsored by the group are open to all college students even if they are not official members of the group.

Survival meeting

Are you concerned about the increase use of Atomic Energy as a major source of power in this country? Carefree, for so was a leading safety person for the Atomic Energy Commission, who resigned in Sept. 29, 1974, in protest of the Commissions inadequate safety procedures. Did you know that an extensive atomic power plant complex is located just six miles from the Connecticut College Campus? Have you known this? A nuclear shut down since it began operation because of serious technical problems.

Are you concerned about the lack of public knowledge concerning atomic power plants? If so there will be a meeting on Oct. 18 in Smith-Burdick living room at 7:06 p.m. to discuss methods by which we may better inform ourselves and the community about the situation as well as ways in which we can help prevent further construction of atomic power plants. Call Dave Winkler at 442-6990, or Novo McDonald Box 1232 447-1555 for more information.

feel compelled to follow. "Twenty-five years ago, the Hutchins Commission, designed to provide the news media towards self-investigation, suggested a number of attributes any good newspaper should seek to attain. They included the following suggestions: to give a complete and accurate account of the day's events without bias, to be a forum for public expression, to provide a role model for a future generation of journalists, to give everyone full access to the day's intelligence, to stand for something." Bylan answered that "criticism alone is shallow; criticism can also imply a sense of what and how for improvement."

He concluded his presentation, with his own personal view on the role of the press in the Watergate scandal. "It proves the viability of print journalism as an important force in a visual age. The broadcast media spent most of the time catching up and summarizing what already appeared in print. Indeed, recent events prove that an informed citizenry, acting out of the interest of the media's vital role in society, is the only safeguard of democracy."

DON'T!

Blue and green cards advertising research papers and their availability were posted on the windshields of many cars on campus last week. To purchase a research paper either to use as the final draft or merely to incorporate parts of it into one's own paper without the proper documentation violates the Connecticut College Honor Code. According to Connecticut Public Act 73-841, passed in the 1973 legislature, it is illegal to sell research papers, any academic assignment, or any part of a written assignment.

"Research papers!..." the card says, "For Sale: For Descriptive or Statistical. Order Catalog... DON'T!"

Junior Internship Program

by Carol Bowman

The Connecticut College Alumni Association and Career Counseling and Placement Office in cooperation with the Junior Career Internship Program this year is again sponsoring the Junior Career Internship Program this year.

This type of program provides the student with an opportunity to experience the realities of the working world and to explore career fields. stated Ms. Burt, Assistant Director of Career Counseling and Placement in a recent Courier interview. The Internship Program, which commenced in the Spring of 1973 is based on the willingness of alumni to provide students positions related to their own careers.

Limited to the Boston-Washington corridor along the coast, there are coordinators in each of the six cities involved: Boston, Hartford, New Haven, New York, Philadelphia and Washington. These coordinators recruit alumni to provide positions for students during the Spring break. Juniors accepted into the program spend two to three weeks of their vacation with alumni who have volunteered to sponsor them. These fields such as publishing, Talent continued from p.4

1963, Mr. Guttmacher, although unable to provide a proper picture, has earned the title of "Crude of the Week."

Unlike last year's presentation, there was no balloting to determine a winner. This lack rather detracted from entertainment, but certainly a splendid time was had by all.

banking, merchandising, law, economic research, government, and special interest areas. This is done on a volunteer basis.

On Monday, October 14 at 4:15 p.m. there will be a meeting with the Junior Class to explain the program in greater depth. The presentation will be relatively simple. The student applies, indicating his or her particular interest. Afterwards, following a tour, the students will be hosted at the student facilities and meet the sponsors.

Due to space limitations Silverstein on Bridge will not appear this week.

Analysis of smoking poll

By Eva Jones

Connecticut College has proved to be a prime example of smoking habits, according to statistics determined by a recent Fundit smoking poll. Approximately 63 percent of the students surveyed do not smoke cigarettes compared to the 67 percent national average. Students answered affirmatively on 38 percent of the questionnaires, five percent higher than the national average figure. The American Cancer Society was responsible for compiling the number of smokers and non-smokers in America. United States.

Those who do not smoke far outweigh those who do, and their reasons were not very dissimilar. One individual stated, "I see how difficult it is for my mother, and I realize I don't ever want to put myself in that position." Another, commented that he himself has been encouraged not to smoke from visits by his mother and sister, and that made his hate smoking stronger. Connecticut College Junior, Mr. Jones, commented, "My husband smokes, and I try quite hard to dissuade him from continuing. My children, ages three and four, are very anti-smoking for all the right reasons."

The majority of smokers were agreeable in their responses, assuming a defiant front in many answers. The reply "I like it, damn it!" appeared on many papers, with the rest of the questionnaire left blank. One smoker, but non-smoker, that this psychiatrist told him to smoke if he wanted to because he is hooked and enjoys the taste of cigarettes, while another said the smell produced aerosol, and a sexy, glamorous atmosphere to cover up the smell. However, most smokers questioned regretted their habit, attempting to justify it, saying it's not that bad, and despite their reasons, they are not satisfied. Inhabit smoke(r) - don't.

Soccer team shines

by David M. Bohonnon

The Connecticut College men’s soccer team played to a 0-0 deadlock with Rhode Island College on September 28, in Providence. A powerful example of finely played, defensive soccer was displayed by the young Conn. booters. In their exciting game, co-captains, David Kelley and Dan Tucker, along with veterans John Moore and John Phillips exhibited tremendous skill and drive to lead the Conn Camels in their game.

On October 1, Conn traveled to Storrs, where they outplayed and overpowered the Eastern Connecticut State College junior varsity soccer team. In this game Coach William Lessig included six freshmen in his starting team: “Bear” Kobak, Charlie Scissle, John Perry, David Bohonnon, Keith Harney and Peter Reich. Also playing were veterans Mark Warren, David Kelley, Dan Tucker, John Moore and John Phillips. Together they crushed Eastern by the score of 5-0. Thrilling moments came in their game when “Bear” Kobak opened the scoring with a powerful shot. The consistent play of forwards Thomas Slaughter and Kenneth Tobler added to the scoring for the Conn. team, as both “stung” the Eastern nets for tallies. The game was really never out of Conn’s control, and was a good opportunity for Coach Lessig to play all of his regular players.

On Saturday, October 5, the Conn College booters lost a heartbreaking game to Western Connecticut State College by the score of 1-0. Play was extremely close throughout the game; however, Western scored late in the game to squeeze out Conn. Mark Warren, the unsung hero of the Conn. team, displayed unsurpassed skill and agility as goal tender. He deserved the praise he received from the crowd when he saved a penalty shot. Co-captains Kelley and Tucker, along with Moore and Reich all played commendable defensive soccer.

Coach Lessig anticipates a promising future for his team. Support is always appreciated, as the Conn. team approaches the midpoint of their fall schedule.

Men’s tennis 2-0

A strong Connecticut College men’s tennis team defeated Western New England College on October 3 by a staggering score of 9-0. The victory was the second for the men in as many outings, having defeated Eastern Connecticut 8-1.

Winning for Conn. in singles were: Robby Roberts, Larry Yesman, Dave Rosenfeld, Steve Banker, Alex Farley and Ken Abel. Teaming up to score doubles victories were the following duos: Roberts-Yesman, Banker-Farley, and Rosenfeld-Abel.
