Nearly seven years ago, Connecticut College adopted a widely accepted academic option, namely Pass-Fail. After a poll of most of the New England colleges that already had established Pass-Fail programs, the college initiated the option on a trial basis, subject to review. The advantages of the plan, as seen by its initiators and the faculty, were, 1) the anticipation of student interest in usually unexplored subject matter; 2) the alleviation of some academic pressure; 3) the limitation of the option in the major field would cause graduate schools and employers to examine more closely the quality of that major. A change that was recently instituted in the system was the change of same from Pass-Fail to Pass-Not Pass. To some, this might appear to be trivial, yet, according to Dr. Rhyne, the former title manifested technical difficulties. The "F" that appeared on a transcript would be confusing to the Registrar and graduate schools to mean flunk, not fail. However, when a student fails a course that he is taking Pass-Not Pass, his cumulative average is still computed on the basis of his other courses.

Refinements and Decreasing Participation

Statistics have shown, as of late, a decreasing interest in the Pass-Not Pass option. In its peak year, that of 1969-70, 36 per cent of the seniors and 57 per cent of the juniors enjoyed the advantages of the program. However, last fall, only 37 per cent of seniors and 27 per cent of the juniors elected to utilize it. In terms of the present academic semester, the percentage of seniors has remained the same, but the juniors represent only 24 per cent. According to Dr. Rhyne, the option may not look good on the record in professional schools and jobs, but that's only my impression. Although there are tentative approval for ConnPIRG

At its meeting last Thursday, College Council passed a unanimous resolution accepting "in principle" the establishment of a chapter of ConnPIRG, the Connecticut Public Interest Research Group, on campus. At the meeting, some members of the Council voiced concern over ConnPIRG effect upon the tax exempt status of the College, and its liability for the organizations actions. The Council also stressed its desire to "periodically review" the status of the ConnPIRG chapter, and to make any decision on future funding at an early and practicable date. Ted Hathaway, campus organizer for ConnPIRG, said his organization would comply with the wishes of the Council for further clarification "very quickly."

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to the article appearing in last week's Pundit regarding WCNI. First, I'd like to congratulate Ronnie Howard, alias Ralph Melish, on his generally successful portrayal of the present and future state of WCNI. Secondly, I'd like to respond to a statement where I was quoted as saying: 'We are students, after all,' First principle; then fact. I, as most people, do not like being quoted about something that was never said. WCNI would not have to consider the purchase of slander and liability insurance if misquoting or fictitious quoting never occurred, however, it does. I am bothered by the connotations of the statement supposedly quoted by me (taken in context) as well as the fact that I would not have put a similar thought in those words.

Lastly, things are not as bad as some inferred from the article. WCNI's application to the F.C.C. for our FM Broadcast License was mailed today, September 30th. We should be hearing from the F.C.C. shortly with the official go ahead to begin FM transmission.

letter to the editor

Changing the name of our dear paper from PUNDIT to COURIERT is a foolish idea. People, after a time, recognize a name as representing something, in this case the paper. People off campus will wonder what has become of the paper, and will wonder why they cannot get hold of PUNDIT any longer. Habit is a strong thing to break.

To say we must change the name at all is ridiculous. There is no stigma attached to the name PUNDIT around campus. The only stigma is in the minds of the board and student government. Students regard the paper as good, fair, or abominable; but as the paper, not as the people. If indeed people do not know what 'pundit' means, and fail to look it up in a dictionary, then they have no right to complain. Even "asympthagrabba" is in dictionaries.

If the name of the paper must be changed, for whatever reason, 'courier' is a rotten choice. No matter what we want to be, we are an 'intellectual elite.' If we were not, we would be getting an education at a state university for much less moolah, or we would be learning a trade at a technical school. Deceiving oneself as to one's identity is always bad of PUNDIT, next, to say we need a newspaper name because we are a newspaper is ridiculous. COURIER is not a newspaper, the content is composed of features, previews, and reviews. The name itself is disdatory. "Courier" is as plain and as bland as the major amount of prose in it and the views it expresses. In fact, in changing from a name with a cert aintair to one with none at all, the Editorial Board is taking dead aim on their apparent goal of absolute non-controversiality and boredom.

Sincerely,
James McNeil Whistler

A Rose by any other Name

When the existing norms or principles that govern what is conceived as normal, right and good come into question, when established principles and standards are challenged when the existing norms are no longer applicable to a changing situation, the process known as change occurs. Change can be subtle and slow, as when Esso quietly switched to Exxon, or it can be direct and radical, as when Pundit suddenly becomes the Conn. College Courier.

Was the change necessary? We on the Editorial Board felt so. The attitude was that the paper had suffered long enough under the stigma of its former title. The word pundit comes from the Hindi word pandit, meaning a learned man or teacher, who gives authoritative opinions. We felt this name typified a kind of cute elitism, something more suitable to a William F. Buckley monthly than to the Conn. newspaper.

After much deliberation, the name Courier was selected. It is suggestive of a newspaper, although it is not of the common, bland variety, such as "The Times," or "The News." You don't have to look Courier up in a dictionary to determine its relevance to a newspaper, although, if one did, you'd discover that courier means "a messenger; an agent for transferring information." And that is basically what The Courier is.

The history of Pundit has been unstable, and, as a result, the quality of the paper suffered. We hope that The Courier will mark the beginning of consistent quality journalism.

WASHINGTON — The recent kidnap scare against the children of the late Senator Robert Kennedy nearly precipitated a rebellion within the ranks of the Secret Service. Some 60 agents were flown in from all over the country to cover the Kennedys — a move they regarded as illegal.

Indeed, Secret Service Director Stuart Knight himself recommended against extending protection, but he was overruled by his boss, Treasury Secretary William Simon.

Then the agents learned they were not responding to a "threat" at all. They had been ordered on emergency duty as a result of a third-hand tip from a police informant in the Boston area. The agents were furious.

Covering the Kennedys is a chore the Secret Service largely regards as abortive anyway. Much of the ill feeling results from the agency's experience with Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

The law requires the Secret Service to protect the late President Kennedy's children until they turn 16. Thus they are still looking after young John. But Mrs. Onassis is extremely particular about the way the agency does its job. One insider describes her as "persecutory. She doesn't want John to feel oppressed by his protectors, so she demands the agents stay out of sight as much as possible.

Nor does young John himself like the protective details following him around. A few months ago, he slipped out of Jackie's New York apartment, hopped on his bike, and sped into Central Park to play tennis. A drug addict assaulted him and made off with the expensive bike.

Through some extraordinary detective work, the police tracked down the assailant. But Mrs. Onassis refused to prosecute.

Secret Service insiders were flabbergasted. Now they are thinking of laying down the law to Jackie. Either she lets them do their job the way they want, or her protective detail will be lifted.

Economic Battle Plan: White House sources say President Ford has all but made up his mind on change in economic policy.

The President received a lot of free and conflicting advice at the recent economic summit conference. But in private meetings with his closest advisors, he had little trouble mapping out a battle plan.

First, the President plans to ask for a tax cut to ease the impact of inflation on the poor. He also is seriously considering giving industry some incentives to expand production.

Next, he plans a whopping 10-cent-per-gallon increase in the gasoline tax Ford plans to use for the money in a public jobs program. This will ease the unemployment caused by his continuing tight money policy.

The President also hopes that the increase in gasoline prices will help drive down consumption. This would give him a stronger bargaining position with the oil-rich Arab nations of the Middle East.

The Arabs were impressed, our sources say, by Ford's recent sword rattling. The President obligingly threatened economic sanctions against the oil-producing nations if prices continued to rise.

The Arabs know that they literally have us over the barrel. And they feel confident that the United States will not dare to take action against them.

It all boils down to higher gas prices for consumers, along with higher food prices. Only industry, and the very poor, can hope for some relief from inflation.

Cuban Thaw: Upon their return from a recent trip to Havana, Senators Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., predicted that relations between Cuba and the United States would soon improve. Already, say our sources, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is quietly guiding the United States toward a détente with Fidel Castro.

The probability that normal relations will be restored with Havana has outraged the million Cubans who fled to this country to escape Castro. Many of them lost their fortunes; others have friends and relatives in Castro's prisons.

For years, the Central Intelligence Agency has trained exiled Cubans to do battle with Castro. Many more risked their lives on commando raids. Now the government that encouraged them to fight is preparing to befriendif the Communist leader.

We have had detailed discussions with Cuban underground leaders. Although they have a tendency to exaggerate, there is no question about their boiling anger. They are threatening now to mount a terror campaign inside the United States against the politicians and businessmen who support Castro. These Cuban leaders have told us if they can't fight Castro in Cuba, they will fight him here.

Intelligence analysts are predicting, therefore, that at least a few extremists, in imitation of the Palestinian and Irish rebels, will carry out acts of terror in the United States.

Footnote: Castro's relations with the Soviet Union are not as rosy as the Communist press make them appear. According to reliable sources in the Cuban underground, two Russian sailors were jailed last year for stabbing to death a Cuban youth. The sailors had been selling the boy hard-to-get items for the Cuban blackmarket. They caught a glimpse of the youth's hefty bankroll, killed him for it, and tossed him into the sea. The Soviet sailors were thrown into El Morro prison and are now doing time at the Havana work camp for criminals near Havana.

Washington Whirl: Some people see Henry Kissinger as a steady Prussian, but in truth he's not above telling a joke on himself. Recently, he told friends that during the Kennedy Administration, he had dinner at the White House with JFK, Robert Kennedy and Secretary of State Dean Rusk. Kissinger was so nervous then that he cut his lamb chop so oiled all the way over to Rusk's plate. That's what Kasper was the last time he was invited to the White House for 12 years... At one time, according to our sources in the intelligence community, the CIA had a greater system for determining the money due its Laotian commando raids. Now the CIA has to mount a terrorist campaign inside the United States against the politicians and businessmen who support Castro. These Cuban leaders have told us if they can't fight Castro in Cuba, they will fight him here.

Intelligence analysts are predicting, therefore, that at least a few extremists, in imitation of the Palestinian and Irish rebels, will carry out acts of terror in the United States.

The law requires the Secret Service to protect...
With a few notable exceptions, JA moved en masse into Freeman last year. However, last Thursday's Freeman Talent Show served the function of a wedding (or funeral) in a big family - it brought everyone together again. In addition, the show displayed to the fullest the veritable cache of outrageous absurdity inherent in the South Campus personality. (And no matter what anyone says, the campus sports several different kinds of personalities, dictated by the points of the compass.)

I walked in late, in the middle of the second act, which consisted of Miriam Josephson and Roger Siegel combining their talents to produce the semblance of a talent show with hideously short legs, who talked a little and danced the charleston. Guy Morris, Dan Cohen, and Alan Kane (who does not live in either JA or Freeman, but then a lot of the participants didn't) then played the kazoo and sang the theme song of "Car 54". This is no small feat, since the show has been defunct for ages. John Lee and Dale Roberts performed a travesty of an emotional modern ballet, probably the most hilarious act of the evening. The rending of John's purple lights did nothing to induce sobriety. Dave Kelley appeared next, with an act dear to the hearts of former Jane Addamians; he (sokas, without his usual partner, Miriam Josephson) gagged up an entire plate of jelly mold with fruit bits, yet in one fell slurp. Lynn Cooley and Eva Fellows, hapily repeated their show opening act; they rendered a performance of what can only be termed a sleazy dance, "Bears" juggling in a pronouncedly uncorochic fashion. Guy, Dan, and Alan turned up again to sing the theme song from "The Patty Duke Show", which action took a great deal of fortitude. Encouraged by the audience's deceased visages, they forged ahead and sang bits of such masterpieces of the media as, "Rainbow", "The Jetsons" and "Dive Dan". This last was rather an esoteric conceit, since Bostonians have never heard of "Dive Dan". Kimberly Reynolds knocked off a few screamingly funny Elvis Presley tunes in her Grand Master himself. Peter Gattmacher offered us a gaggle folk song sung in German, and Eva Fellows and Tracy "Goobie" Gilday sang about two bars of a mysterious bailed out Cocaine Bill and Morphine Sue. We had been waiting for Paul Fulton since Dive Dan, he finally arrived and sang, with his own guitar accompaniment, a Corn College fight song, songs dedicated to Bardick and Freeman, and "The Crotier Williams Blues". The tunes were original and amusing; they also retained references to the nuances of life at Corn which continually haunt us. Paul closed the show with a lovely instrumenatl, which managed to obliterate the nasty taste left in our mouths by Peter Gattmacher's (with Michael Booth as JPK) imitation of Jackie Kennedy Onassis on November 22.

Nicholson in pieces

by Richard Halpern

Last Saturday night, Connecticut College was treated to a showing of "Five Easy Pieces," a film that has won several Academy Awards (including Best Picture), but is loved by all, and is perhaps one of the more overrated movies of the past five years.

Jack Nicholson stars as a man plagued by a problem common to many of us: whether to dig oil wells or become a concert pianist. He lives in a small Texan town with his girl friend (Karen Black), who looks and behaves like a shaved monkey, and with his best buddy, whose specialty is producing sapphire from his nose. Jack's job is drilling for oil, but he finds the petroleum business rather crude (he has, you see, the soul of an artist). In order to relieve his depression, he visits his paradedy father.

Real Cinematography

Dear old dad lives in a stately mansion on a island off the coast of Washington. He is the victim of a two strokes and now spends his time vegetating in a wheelchair. Caring for him are his effeminate violinist son, a surly better who pushes his wheelchair and shoves paddings down his throat, and his daughter. Jack's sensitive temperament is again offended, this time by his hypocrisy and intellectual pretentiousness of his family. To console himself, he spends his time drawing pernicious and seducing his brother's fiancee (Susan Anspach). Just to complicate matters, his girl friend drops by and embarrasses Jack with a display of table manners worse than his own.

The climactic scene of the film finds Jack wheeling his old father (to his verdant, vegetable act) out to a deserted field, and, amongst stormy winds, apologizing being such a lousy, hard hat. The camera gives us intermittent glimpses of his father's blank expression, which seems to say that he has just dropped a load in his pants. If anyone found the discord in this scene a bit oppressive, I salute you.

By the end of the film, Jack has become once again disgusted with his family and his imbecilic girl friend that he takes off for parts unknown. I, too, became disgusted, and took off for the bar.

More Poison Ink

Now, I would be unlikely to be screaming at this point about how sensitive and perceptive the film was, even if it were sensitive and imperative this reviewer must be to disparage it so. The problem with "Five Easy Pieces" is that it tries too hard to impress us. The film becomes self-conscious and erodes a type of internal sensitivity that exists only for its own sake. Its hero is at once too noble to remain tied to a rural squalor, too much of a "free spirit" to endure the rigorous disciplines required of a pianist, and a bit too egalitarian to tolerate his pseudo-aristocratic family. In short, he is not quite believable.

Furthermore, in order to enhance his moral magnificence, he is surrounded by a host of caricatured personalities. Notable in this respect are his brother and girl friend, not to mention the seedy hitchhikers he picks up on the way to Washington. And as long as the poison ink is flowing, it might be well to note that there is virtually no coherent development to the film. If the scenes were shown in reverse order, most of the audience would probably be none the wiser.

To be fair, though, the acting is often superb, and almost makes the whole thing realistic. The photography, too, is occasionally breathtaking, in portrayals of the bleak Texan oil fields, and of the restrained fury of a stormy Washington wilderness. While I hesitate, therefore, to call the film "poor" it nevertheless escapes me how "Five Easy Pieces" could ever have been selected as Best Picture of the Year in 1970.

Workshop

The Women's group would like to hold car and bicycle workshops for anyone who has worked with either. If you would like to share your knowledge, please contact Cynthia Malthe, or Kate Tweedie - Jane Addams, or 442-238.
Connecticut College has again been invited to enter a poet candidate for the Connecticut Poetry Circuit in the current academic year. The College should submit five pages of verse to William Meredith, P.O. Box 1486, before October 16. Judges will include students, faculty and professionals outside the college.

Frances Giannopolous

The Women’s Group at Connecticut College consists of approximately twenty-five women united for the purpose of promoting women’s interests here on campus. The group was organized three or four years ago by a few women who, after many discussions on the role of women, concluded that the women on campus were completely unaware of themselves. Their accomplishments and interests.

Since then, the group has been working towards “sisterhood,” helping each other and sharing their feelings both personal and political.

Although the group does not have authorized officers, there are two members, Cynthia Malthe and Katet weddie, who may be considered the generators of the group for the reason of having maintained the group’s organization.

During the past year the group sponsored several trips and dances, and showed a few movies which included “Hachet, Rachel” and “How To Make A Woman.”

This year, it hopes to show more movies, sponsor more trips and dances, invite women guest speakers, buy magazines relating to women and possibly explore into a car workshop.

Although the discussion sessions are comprised mainly of women, very often men attend them to either observe or express their views. Any activities sponsored by the group are open to all college students even if they are not official members of the group.

Poetry contest

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. - Robert Siegel, award-winning poet and assistant professor of English at Dartmouth College, will read from his works on Thursday, October 16, in Wesleyan University’s Russell House. The 8 p.m. program, sponsored by the Wesleyan Honors College, is open to the public without charge.

An Illinois native, Siegel received his B.A. from Wheaton College (Ill.), his M.A. from Johns Hopkins University, and his Ph.D. from Harvard. Since 1967 he has been a member of the English Department at Dartmouth. During the past year he was poet-in-residence.

Siegel’s poems have been published in Poetry, Atlantic Monthly, Granta, Poetry North and other periodicals and anthologies.

BACH

Under the direction of Mr. Paul Allhouse, Assistant Professor of Music the Cantata No. 8 of J.S. Bach, Leibster Gott, was selected as the stokker for the morning worship service in Harkness Chapel this coming Sunday, October 13 at 11:00 a.m.

The first in a series of three Bach Cantatas to be offered during the fall semester, the Cantata will be performed by the Harkness Chapel Choir and a student-faculty orchestral ensemble. As Bach originally composed his Cantatas for use in a liturgical context, the morning worship service will recreate the original context of the music.

The Reverend Charles Gonzalez, S.J. will be the guest speaker for the service. Father Gonzalez, who once taught courses in Theology at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., is currently the Roman Catholic Chaplain at Wesleyan University in Middletown. The title of his sermon is “Seeing Beyond The Sacred Clutter.”

Other participants in the service will include Beth Sagar ‘76, a Connecticut College student attending Wesleyan this semester under the 13-college exchange, and David Robb, College Chaplain.

This machine can be your friend

By Nancie Moskin

Whether you are a freshman at the future needs of the world, want a higher paying job after graduation, or simply want to increase your general knowledge, the Computer Center has something to offer you.

As an IBM Disk Monitor System, Card Reader-Punch, Printer, Disk Drive and two Keypunch machines comprise the physical equipment of the Connecticut College Computer Center. These machines are all highly sophisticated and can handle up to 600 computations or operations per second.

Three years ago the computer could work with four languages, now it can work with nine with a tenth currently being added. The languages in use are: Assembler, FORTRAN, COBOL (Common Business Oriented Language), used for problems in economics and business, RPG (Report Program Generator) used in marketing,帽C (Computer Language) used in high level mathematics, BASIC (Beginner's All-purpose Symbolic Instruction Code), APL (A Programming Language) used in high level mathematics, SNOBOL, CSMF, and (gasp!) GASP (General All-purpose Simulation Programs); ALGOL (Algorithmic Language) which is the latest addition and is still being worked on.

More services amenable to programming

These ten languages in conjunction with the computer make possible a great variety of services. The packets are systems which work around the clock and can feel certain statistics or data into the machine and have it sort the information in any order desired according to specifics. An example of this would be a packet for the college's alumni office.

The packets contain all the students enrolled at Conn. College, sex, date of birth, GPA, etc. Students could be asked to list in alphabetical order all male students who received an M.A. in May, and have a GPA of 2.5 or better. It could then print labels for the students saving administrative and secretarial time.

Personalized form letters can also be done by computer. Students in almost any major can find the computer center helpful. Chemistry, economic and math problems are all obvious examples, but there also exists "programming" in business management that allow the "players" to manage supermarinets, depress prices of service offered, and stock and so on. At the end of the week the "players" can see how well their companies have affected their businesses. Music and art majors can try their hand at composing or drawing by computer.

For the less intellectually inclined the computer will play Tic-Tac-Toe, Battleship, Black-jack, and several other games against any worthy opponent.

Work here

Wayne Ingersoll, Jr. is the Administrative Programmer-Analyst at the center and can answer any questions dealing with the computer. In charge of student use of the center is David W. Traylor, Director of Academic Computing. Lindsay Miller ’75 is the Head of Student Programming, and she will currently give a course in BASIC, Special Assistant and general troubleshooting is David W. Traylor, a 14-year-old whiz.

Anyone who would like to use the center, but does not know the languages may request a short course by getting together a group of at least ten interested students. Instruction manuals in the various languages are also available on loan from the center.

Students can use the computer all week from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m. Permission for use of the machine during the morning hours must be gotten from Mr. Ingersoll.

between jocks and brew boys.

Jocks are bums, brew boys are dereicts — rather placid. "I'm not buzzed yet, Walt."

9:22 p.m. — 27 pitchers

By this time it had picked up quite a bit. Some prime drinkers had joined the brew with their beer was really being put away. The bar was jammed, and I had to elbow my way to the table. My greasy glasses was littered with empty glasses, pits and a lot of spit-flies. I found it difficult to discern a coherent conversation. It was a very mobile group — every few minutes somebody would get up to order another pitcher, and, of course, there was a continuous flow to and from the men's room.

The chief concern now was the size of the crowd, and every few minutes somebody would stagger into the men's room and yell, "Hey, man!" There would be six different responses, each having a different figure. The official count was kept by Attilla, who, by this time, had gripped himself into. Despite the discrepancies, it looked as though the soccer team's record of 49 pitchers wouldn't last much longer.

By this time, it was apparent that the climax was little more than an hour away. The nucleus of the hard-core was surrounded by a periphery of spectators who cheered them on, occasionally helping themselves. Dana remained at the head of the table, taking it all in. She was=coming off the house, and the insanity began. The mob was now standing on its head, on the table, screaming, "We're No. 1!" Dana was toasted for his "dedication and motivation to our team... who was still conscious was offering each other congratulations. (1 saw somebody shaking 'hans' for the urinal in the men's room) and anybody with brains headed for the door.

Looking back on it all, I would say that most people had a good time, although a dangerous situation was created, and some ugly incidents did occur, which I choose not to elaborate on. Oh yeah, as I left the bar for the last time, I saw Mike standing in a corner, smirking rather placidly. "Hey, Mike. How's it going?"

Are you concerned about the increase use of Atomic Energy as a major source of power in this country? Carl J. Hocevar is: Carl J. Hocevar is the leading safety person for the Atomic Energy Commission, who resigned on Sept. 29, 1974 in protest of the Commission's inadequate safety procedures. Did you know that an extensive nuclear power plant complex is located just six miles from the Connecticut College Campus? Have you ever been to the site? It's a humongous shut down since it began operation because of serious technical problems. Are you concerned about the lack of public knowledge concerning atomic power plants? If so there will be a meeting on Oct. 16 in Smith-Burdick living room at 7:00 p.m. to discuss methods by which we may better inform ourselves and the community about the situation as well as ways in which we can help prevent further construction of atomic power plants. Call Dave Winkler at 447-3888 or Navy McDonnell Box 1322 447-1555 for more information.

Junior Internship Program

by Carol Bowmans

The Connecticut College Alumni Association and the Career Counselling and Placement Office in cooperation with the Junior Class are once again sponsoring the Junior Career Internship Program this year. The program is designed to provide the graduating senior with an opportunity to experience the realities of the working world and to explore career fields. Ms. Burt, Assistant Director of Career Counselling and Placement in a recent Courier Interview. The Internship Program, which commenced in the Spring of 1973 is based on the willingness of alumni to provide training in the professions related to their own careers.

Limited to the Boston-Washington corridor along the coast, there are coordinators in each of the six cities involved: Boston, Hartford, New Haven, New York, Philadelphia and Washington. These coordinators recruit alumni to provide positions for students during the Spring break. Interns accepted into the program spend two to four weeks of their vacation with alumni who have volunteered to sponsor students in professional fields such as publishing, 1963. Mr. Guttmacher, although used to the press, has earned the title of "Crude of the Week."

Unlike last year's presentation, there was no balloting to determine a winner. This lack rather detracted from the entertainment, but certainly a splendid time was had by all.

Pass/Fail

no statistics available from other schools, not to mention graduate schools and employers, advisors and deans have discouraged its usage.

One of the refinements of the system is that professors do not know who is taking their course(s) Pass/Not Pass until after classes end. This alleviates any kind of prejudice on their part, Dr. Rhyne commented, that "In my classes, those students who elect the Pass-Not Pass option, in general, do not do as well as the others."

Depending on what professor teaches which course, the most frequently taken courses, for no reason, are: Art: History, Dance, English, History, and Psychology. Unfortunately, this trend seems to disprove the theory that Pass-Not Pass would encourage students to explore new areas of study. The above mentioned departments are hardly obscure and little frequented subjects.

The future of Pass-Not Pass is a shaky one. If statistics continue to drop as steadily as they have been, a major concern concerning its validity might be in

Analysis of smoking poll

The majority of smokers were accurate in their responses, assuming a defensive front in many answers. The reply "I like it, damn it" appeared on many papers, with the rest of the questionnaire left blank. One smoker, but non-smoker, commented that his psychiatrist told him to smoke if he wanted to be kept and enjoys the taste of cigarettes, while another said the smell produced ailsiness, and a sexy, glamorous atmosphere to overcome the effect.

However, most smokers questioned regretted their habit, attempting to give reasons as to why they should be allowed to continue. The American Cancer Society was responsible for compiling the number of smokers and anti-smoker. Although these reasons were not very dissimilar.

One individual stated, "I see how difficult it is for my mother and I realize I don't ever want to put myself in that position." Another commented, "I smoked and I am a smoker from visits by her mother and sister, and that made her hate smoking."

My husband smokes, and I try quite hard to dissuade him from continuing. My children, ages three and four, are very anti-smoking for all the right reasons.

banking, merchandising, law, economic research, government, and special education; all this is done on a volunteer basis.

On Monday, October 14 at 4:15 p.m. there will be a meeting with the Junior Class to explain the program in greater depth. The program is relatively simple. The student applies, indicating his or her particular field of interest. Following Christmas vacation, the available internships will be posted. Preferences will be matched with opportunities as best available, taking also into consideration the responsibility of the student, but often it is provided by the sponsoring alumni or another student in the same area. The Internship Program, at the present, is limited to Juniors. Perhaps in the future the program will be expanded to include other classes. Any Junior at interested in this program should attend the upcoming meeting on October 14.

Due to space limitations Silverstein on Bridge will not appear this week.

Connecticut College has proved to be a prime smoking habit, according to statistics derived from a recent Purdue smoking poll. Approximately 63 per cent of the students surveyed do not smoke cigarettes compared to the 67 per cent national average. Students answered affirmatively on 38 per cent of the questionnaires, five per cent claimed to be non-smokers, five per cent were termed "other." The American Cancer Society was responsible for compiling the number of smokers and anti-smoker. Although these reasons were not very dissimilar.

One individual stated, "I see how difficult it is for my mother and I realize I don't ever want to put myself in that position." Another commented, "I smoked and I am a smoker from visits by her mother and sister, and that made her hate smoking."

My husband smokes, and I try quite hard to dissuade him from continuing. My children, ages three and four, are very anti-smoking for all the right reasons.

the new campaign that reminds smokers to put out their cigarettes and that we do not go anywhere near non-smokers. A smoker said, "If someone gets annoyed from my smoke, I will absolutely not smoke around them. I think it is very discourteous for smokers to annoy others with their smoke."

One student summed up the smoking controversy with her comment, "I think it's quite true that smoking is offensive to non-smokers and that we have a right to have clean air. However, there is no one I think that the campaign gets anywhere with smokers. What should be stressed is the danger of smoking to smokers' health. As can be seen by the statistics, with 75,000 victims of lung cancer to be diagnosed this year, smokers should be paying attention to death."

The Connecticut College men’s soccer team played to a 1-1 deadlock with Rhode Island College on September 28, in Providence. A powerful example of finely played, defensive soccer was displayed by the young Conn. booters. In their exciting game, co-captains, David Kelley and Dan Tucker, along with veterans John Moore and John Phillips exhibited tremendous skill and drive to lead the Conn Camels in their game.

On October 1, Conn traveled to Storrs, where they outplayed and overpowered the Eastern Connecticut State College junior varsity soccer team. In this game Coach William Lessig included six freshman in his starting team: “Bear” Kobak, Charlie Scissle, John Perry, David Bohonnon, Keith Herney and Peter Reich. Also playing were veterans Mark Warren, David Kelley, Dan Tucker, John Moore and John Phillips. Together they crushed Eastern by the score of 5-0. Thrilling moments came in their game when “Bear” Kobak opened the scoring with a powerful shot. The consistent play of forwards Thomas Slaughter and Kenneth Tobler added to the scoring for the Conn. team, as both “stung” the Eastern nets for tallys. The game was really never out of Conn’s control, and was a good opportunity for Coach Lessig to play all of his regular players.

On Saturday, October 5, the Conn College booters lost a heartbreaking game to Western Connecticut State College by the score of 1-0. Play was extremely close throughout the game; however, Western scored late in the game to squeeze out Conn. Mark Warren, the unsung hero of the Conn. team, displayed unsurpassed skill and agility as goal tender. He deserved the praise he received from the crowd when he saved a penalty shot. Co-captains Kelley and Tucker, along with Moore and Reich all played commendable defensive soccer. Coach Lessig anticipates a promising future for his team. Support is always appreciated, as the Conn. team approaches the midpoint of their fall schedule.

Men’s tennis 2-0

A strong Connecticut College men’s tennis team defeated Western New England College on October 3 by a staggering score of 9-0. The victory was the second for the men in as many outings, having defeated Eastern Connecticut 8-1. Winning for Conn. in singles were: Robby Roberts, Larry Yesman, Steve Rosenfeld, Steve Banker, Alex Farley and Ken Abel. Teaming up to score doubles victories were the following duos: Roberts-Yesman, Banker-Farley, and Rosenfeld-Abel.
