Today the closed with a capella concert and a performance of the Theater Department's "Q Brothers Shakespeare Project: A Hip Hop Hipopthory," a modern take on the Romeo & Juliet tragedy. Charlotte Weber, one of the cast members of "Q Brothers" said of the experience, "The combination of hearing an entirely new acting technique, four incredibly talented and motivated directors, ownership over an amazing script and everyone's willingness to jump into whatever was thrown at us made for a magical experience unlike any other production." It was indeed a performance to remember.

The next day held an energetic hum in the air. There were opportunities to meet with professors, sit in lecture rooms, watch athletic games and hear President Higdon speak. There was a peace for lunch, an energetic day with Tempel Green (with beloved Camel cookies for dessert, of course), soon followed by Harverstival activities put on by the Student Activities Council. There must have been at least fifty tables crowded together underneath the big, white tent as Harverstival - featuring cliffs ranging from Ski & Rugby at the Tighe Knoll and Dining. With an array of food, Camel paraphernalia and apparel, everyone seemed to get a chance to peek their noses in. More people helped to set up the tables and buy merchandise - people were more than willing to give their time and effort on such a beautiful day.

The evening called with a capella concerts, another performance of "Q Brothers," a showing of the popular Pixar film, "Up," "As I Part Music Ensemble concert, and an ballet dance. It was a late night, and Sunday morning came quickly; greeting the students of Conn College with a sunny day and a relaxing brunch before seeing the families off.

Overall, Fall Weekend was a true treat with about 2,000 visitors, family, and alumni coming to visit the campus. It was wonderful to see families come together from all over the United States, and even the world at large; it is easy to become spoiled up in one's own home lives - Fall Weekend reminds us of the many important things.

President Lisa Higdon said, "I always look forward to Fall Weekend because it brings together all members of our community - students, parents, alumni, faculty and staff - to begin a brand new year of events, lectures, performances, exterests, athletics compete and, of course, Harverstival. It gives us an opportunity to showcase our beautiful campus and the myriad components of a Connecticut College education that make this institution so distinctive."
The Super PAC was born of two 2006 campaign finance cases: Beachy v. Federal Election Commission (FEC) and Citizens United v. FEC (the Nader case). A key question before the Supreme Court was whether the Ninth Amendment principle of the right to free speech extends to political organizations. This question was decided in favor of the PACs in the 2010 Citizens United decision.

In the 2012 election, the Supreme Court ruled in favor of the Super PACs by a 5-4 vote, striking down a key provision of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002. The Court decided that political expenditures are protected by the First Amendment, even if they are made by independent groups. As a result, the Federal Election Commission (FEC) no longer has the ability to regulate the amount of money that outside groups can spend on behalf of candidates.

The reality is that a Super PAC can fundraise from anyone, and there is no limit to how much money it can raise. This type of financing allows candidates to have a voice in the political process without having to rely on individual donors. However, it also raises concerns about the influence of money in politics and the potential for corruption. The Supreme Court's decision in Citizens United opened the door for unlimited independent expenditures by individual donors and groups, which has led to a surge in the number of Super PACs and their influence in elections.

The decision has also had implications for the role of money in politics. The Court's ruling has made it easier for candidates to raise and spend money on their campaigns. As a result, the focus of campaigns has shifted from policy issues to fundraising and campaign strategy. This has raised concerns about the quality of political discourse and the potential for corruption.

In conclusion, the Supreme Court's decision in Citizens United has had a significant impact on the political process in the United States. While the Court's decision was intended to enhance free speech, the practical consequences have been more complex. The decision has raised concerns about the influence of money in politics and the potential for corruption, and it has also raised questions about the role of money in shaping political discourse. As a result, the political landscape in the United States continues to evolve, and the impact of the Citizens United decision will continue to be debated for years to come.

Meredith Boyle
Editor in Chief

Letters to the Editor

On a more serious note, my staff and I urge you to read the story of Angie Fyler - a performer at Anchor College, published in part on Monday's page. In my opinion, independent newspapers, Angie reports, explicated by the fact that she was the college student who was raped last year. This case is becoming so well known that it has become a topic on the national agenda. As such, we are very glad that Angie is willing to share her story, and we hope that this will help others to come forward and seek justice.

The rape of Angie Fyler is a tragic event that has caused a great deal of pain and suffering for all those involved. It is important that we continue to support those affected by such events, and to work towards preventing similar crimes from happening in the future.

Angie's full Op Ed can be found at thecollegevoice.org.

On Tuesday, September 25, 2012, the Global Islamic Studies Faculty - Working Group's hearing on Angie's case was held on the campus. We are thrilled that Professor Caroleen Sayej, Assistant Professor of History, and Sharon Portnof, Assistant Professor of Religion, will be teaching her course "The Middle East." Professor Sayej will also teach her course "The study of Islam, such as the Middle East but that is not confined to the Middle East. This course will offer a course in the history of the Middle East and the U.S. Professor Portnof will also offer a course in the history of the Middle East and the U.S. Professor Portnof will also offer a course in the history of the Middle East and the U.S.

In the meantime, we in the GIS Faculty - Working Group will continue to gain momentum for the creation of a new department in Global Islamic Studies. We are also working towards the integration of the GIS with other departments at the college, such as the Department of Foreign Languages and Cultures. The GIS Faculty - Working Group will be holding meetings to discuss the future of the department and to work towards the creation of a new department.

The Global Islamic Studies Faculty - Working Group is a group of faculty members at Connecticut College who are interested in the study of Islam, Muslims, and Muslim cultures and histories. The group has been working towards the creation of a new department in Global Islamic Studies at the college. The group has been holding meetings to discuss the future of the department and to work towards the creation of a new department.

We are pleased to announce that the Global Islamic Studies Faculty - Working Group has been successful in gaining momentum for the creation of a new department in Global Islamic Studies. The group has been working towards the creation of a new department in Global Islamic Studies at the college, and we are looking forward to seeing the development of the department in the future.

Bob Decker, Assistant Professor of History, and Sharon Portnof, Assistant Professor of Religion, will be teaching their courses "The Middle East" and "The study of Islam, such as the Middle East but that is not confined to the Middle East." These courses will offer a course in the history of the Middle East and the U.S. Professor Portnof will also offer a course in the history of the Middle East and the U.S.

In the meantime, we in the GIS Faculty - Working Group will continue to gain momentum for the creation of a new department in Global Islamic Studies. We are also working towards the integration of the GIS with other departments at the college, such as the Department of Foreign Languages and Cultures. The GIS Faculty - Working Group will be holding meetings to discuss the future of the department and to work towards the creation of a new department.
strollers enjoyed music by three per- formers. The majority of the stroll was concentrated on State and Bank Street. Below is a smattering of my personal favorites.

Kicking off the stroll was a Penne pasta with prosciutto and creamy tomato sauce greeting strollers who picked up their buttons at The Atrium Cafe. Across the street was a delicious pumpkin whoopie pie with ginger crumb at Little Sister’s Bake Shop. Around the corner on Bank Street was a jolly ice cream scooper at Daniel’s Dairy who offered samples of soft-serve and hard ice cream as well as homemade fudge.

Across the street, strollers found mini-pumpkin and apple pies from Sweetie’s, a retro-style bakery that also served a butternut squash soup and a tomato bisque.

Off the beaten path, was a Thanksgiving pizza at 2Wives with cranberries, stuffing, onions and turkey. Tucked away and not officially registered for the stroll was the newly-opened Washington Street Coffee House serving BBQ pulled pork sandwiches with coleslaw as well as oatmeal chocolate chip cookies.

Other honorable mentions include the seafood chowder served at Dev’s on Bank, caramel apple bread pudding at Tiki and shepherd’s pie at Chaplin’s.

Forty-five businesses participated in the biannual food stroll event in downtown New London. Twenty-two of them offered samples of a variety of food from pasta to apple pie to bread pudding. While sampling,
How Project rePLAY will restore music in the dorms

Do You Know the Piano Man?

MELANIE THIBEAULT
ARTS EDITOR

Have you ever sat down at the piano in Luthar and been inspired by your musical talents only to discover the most unpleasant, disharmonious sounds emerge from the instrument? Do you enjoy serenading your friends with your musical talents only to discover the sound were a little cleaner and crisper?

If you answered "yes" to any of these questions, then you know the feeling of seeing a pool of water turn black after a rainstorm. Weep no more, music lovers and aficionados. Andrew Nathanson '13 has the solution to all of our piano problems.

Project rePLAY is a program designed to restore the location and availability of pianos in the residence halls, which Nathanson created in collaboration with the Music Department, the Office of Advancement and the SGA. Andrew Nathanson, a member of the Advancement Committee, Nathanson, who has earned the nickname "Piano Man," after the popular Billy Joel song, had been thinking about this project for years without maintenance, most of the pianos have been declared "irreparable" by Conn's tuning consultant, which in some cases makes it impossible for students to use the pianos to practice on their own and with music-related clubs.

"We hope to be able to move one piano that used to be in Harris, considered "irreparable," was moved to the Luthar common room as a replacement can be found. The pianos were moved and tuned using funding from SGA. According to Nathanson, the creation of a donor-supported endowment would lift all financial responsibilities from SGA. Six hundred dollars have been raised per piano per year, which will cover two to three tunings each year. "In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. Nathanson stories about how they have taken in this project will be an even greater draw," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

"In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

In the eyes of a potential donor, this signifies that this truly is a priority for students," said Nathanson. "It is evident that students care about the dorms to practice or learn the instrument."

Andrew Nathanson '13 said she plans to play the piano in the dorms a means of preparing for a class or to take a moment to relax and have fun.

"I'm really excited that they are replacing the pianos in the dorms," she said. "The current ones are really old in tune, and it will be nice to be able to play on them that actually sound the way they are supposed to. It will definitely be a bonus to have such easy access rather than to trek down to Cummings."
Harris Celebrates National Vegetarian Day

ANNEKA HAY

On Monday October 1, 2012, Hart refurbished its only vegetarian vegetarian dining hall on cam.
American Vegetarian Society's (NAV)

MOLLIE REID

Although it was merited coincidence,

Ted Steinberg and Phoebe Robs.

was administrative director and

Plutus Robs

Amherst in a week in advance. Do-in the words of the Freeman Dining

Ted Steinberg

PLUTUS ROBS

In February I wrestled with deciding that

I decide to go creative with the

I blocked the rape from my mind

Plutus Robs

Hams

Before they won, Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg

Ted Steinberg
What Obama needs to do on that front," shifting the blame to Congress for any stagnancy in im- portant policy reforms. Romney then promised to work on those issues, but in a more aggressive manner, vowing that he will not tolerate the status quo. Romney then argued that the United States needs to protect the security of the United States, and the economy. In response to Mr. Romney's question about what he did after graduation, Obama focused on reducing the amount of student loan debt, making it easier for students to keep their hands out of other people's pockets. The insults flew back and forth. Obama attempted to discredit Romney by linking the middle class with underhanded comments about his wealth, while Romney criticized Obama's reluctance to release his tax returns. After months of not releasing any details of his tax plan, Romney reversed his positions and explained his plan as straightforward and essential to the country's economic stability. Romney elaborated on areas where he could save billions, including energy, the economy, and Romney's own record on foreign policy. However, the economy and Romney's own record on foreign policy were heavily criticized by the other candidate. Obama, on the other hand, attacked Romney on his record of economic growth and job recovery. Romney claimed that the Reagan administration recovered after the first year, but the Obama administration has not. In the case of Libya, Obama stated that he did not authorize the attack, but the responsibility lies with his administration. Obama went on to criticize Romney's lack of foreign policy experience, while highlighting his own successes in the area. Obama's record of ending the Iraq War and his promise to work towards a strong military policy once again in order to grab the center of the debate. Romney, on the other hand, attacked Obama for not doing enough on the foreign policy front. Romney also criticized Obama for not supporting the United StatesEmbassy in Libya. After Secretary of State Hillary Clinton released a statement supporting Obama from responsibility, Obama stated in the debate "I am the president and I'm always responsible." His remark directly contradicts Romney's accusations that Obama is not a strong leader and is not a responsible foreign policy expert. While Obama has been criticized for his foreign policy actions, he has been praised for his leadership in the international community. In the upcoming debate, Obama will have to continue the momentum from this debate into the final debate this week and on into November. •

KATIE KARLSON
VOICE
Two VOice editors give opposing perspectives

OCTOBER 22, 2012

•

Two VOice editors give opposing perspectives
KATIE KARLSON
VOICE

Two VOice editors give opposing perspectives

OCTOBER 22, 2012

•

Two VOice editors give opposing perspectives

MARK FERRERA
SPORTS EDITOR
After Governor Romney decisively beat President Obama in the first of three debates, Obama desperately needed a boost in momentum. Luckily, Vice President Biden came to the rescue and successfully attacked Congressman Ryan on foreign policy, the economy, and Romney's so-called "57%" remark. Although Biden at times crossed over, aggressive and dismissive of Ryan's ideas, he provided the Obama campaign with the stage to fire a second debate into the air and show the less enthusiastic candidates. At St. Louis University, the candidates met once again for a second debate. Overall, Obama acted far more progressively than before and called Romney "an out of touch" Billionaire, shifting the blame to Congress for any stagnancy in important policy reforms. Romney then promised to work on those issues, but in a more aggressive manner, vowing that he will not tolerate the status quo. Romney then argued that the United States needs to protect the security of the United States, and the economy. In response to Mr. Romney's question about what he did after graduation, Obama focused on reducing the amount of student loan debt, making it easier for students to keep their hands out of other people's pockets. The insults flew back and forth. Obama attempted to discredit Romney by linking the middle class with underhanded comments about his wealth, while Romney criticized Obama's reluctance to release his tax returns. After months of not releasing any details of his tax plan, Romney reversed his positions and explained his plan as straightforward and essential to the country's economic stability. Romney elaborated on areas where he could save billions, including energy, the economy, and Romney's own record on foreign policy. However, the economy and Romney's own record on foreign policy were heavily criticized by the other candidate. Obama, on the other hand, attacked Romney on his record of economic growth and job recovery. Romney claimed that the Reagan administration recovered after the first year, but the Obama administration has not. In the case of Libya, Obama stated that he did not authorize the attack, but the responsibility lies with his administration. Obama went on to criticize Romney's lack of foreign policy experience, while highlighting his own successes in the area. Obama's record of ending the Iraq War and his promise to work towards a strong military policy once again in order to grab the center of the debate. Romney, on the other hand, attacked Obama for not doing enough on the foreign policy front. Romney also criticized Obama for not supporting the United StatesEmbassy in Libya. After Secretary of State Hillary Clinton released a statement supporting Obama from responsibility, Obama stated in the debate "I am the president and I'm always responsible." His remark directly contradicts Romney's accusations that Obama is not a strong leader and is not a responsible foreign policy expert. While Obama has been criticized for his foreign policy actions, he has been praised for his leadership in the international community. In the upcoming debate, Obama will have to continue the momentum from this debate into the final debate this week and on into November. •

The debate, Romney continued, was the most competitive debate. He has had to think about his attacks on his opponent, and he has had to carefully consider his words and actions. Romney's campaign released a statement saying that he was not fully prepared for the debate, and he had to adjust his strategy on the fly. Romney was not able to respond to Obama's attacks, and he was not able to effectively challenge Obama's record. The debate ended with Romney stating that he was not going to attack Obama, but he was going to focus on the issues and the future of the country.
Maine Senator is an Orn Who Needs No Man

DAKOTA PESCHEL
STAFF WRITER

While many would not openly admit to playing World of Warcraft, one state senatorial candidate does, and because of this, her opponents are crying her guilt. Colleen Lachowicz, a Democrat from Maine, is being slammed by the Maine Republican party for comments she made while, in game, and for playing it. All of this video game hate brings up a few questions that I would like to address: Why does playing World of Warcraft automatically stigmatize you? Better yet, what are the positives in the privacy of your own home’s business and personal life? Many people choose to play video games in their spare time, and it is really right to judge a senatorial candidate for something that they deem credible and virtuous. This seems absolutely ridiculous to me. Whenever I play Mario Kart with my friends, we always shout incredibly vulgar and inappropriate things that should never reach anyone’s ears, does that mean she should be disqualified from running for the presidency of the United States?

Colleen has stated that they are concerned about video games they play, or what they say in-game. Gaming almost brings out a different stream of consciousness, one that is not fallible to a normal stream of consciousness. There is even a website dedicated to none of her interesting and vulgar statements called colleenworld.com. All of these quotes are0 taken out of context, so it is really fair to be appeasing her quality as a candidate based on in-game quotes to online friends? Isn’t that much more than just life, and I do not believe, seeing as I’ve been forced to step up many a fine last listening in my life, that a video game player is going to change all, as she is at level eighty-five, and with that much dedication, who is to say she won’t? Yet that much cf.

dedication, which is not at all all a bad thing, especially for someone who is running for a position of power. The point is that as long as no one is being hurt and nothing illegal is being done, does this matter to anyone besides the involved parties? Let Colleen enjoy playing, especially with her totally awesome level eighty-five Orc. Please, it’s something that keeps her occupied in her free time that isn’t of all detrimental to society on herself.

Everyone has something embarrassing that they don’t like to admit, and Colleen is embracing her inner nerd wholeheartedly. She has taken control of this storm of slander and turning it around. She’s not even found by the haters, and why should she be? Colleen should not be ashamed of who she is or what she does in her free time, it ultimately won’t affect her job or anyone else in the state of Maine, unless they happen to be playing WoW with her. Who cares? People who game can be productive members of society, and I don’t think it’s fair for the Republican Party of Maine to use her habits in order to bring her down. It certainly doesn’t change my mind about her, even if World of Warcraft does have a questionable reputation.

Campus Drunk Driving Policies

Rosa is a neuroscience major, pre- med, and has the starting goalie on the women’s field hockey team. She loves chicken breast and eager to get back to her twenty-second birthday as the family cant and hers is the only shower run- ning. Her and her older brother Jake bick- er over control of the radio, jumping down from Maine to see her. They had spent most of the day driving campus to see her friends and begin the end of this semester. Laura’s parents are aghast, Jake’s smile has vanished, and what was once an enjoyable night has turned terribly wrong. The Campus Safety officer cites Laura for a moving violation on campus, and smell- ing alcohol on her breath, asks if she has any prior violations. Is she stigmatized by the complete garbage that my brother says, but why am I denying it anymore? You can’t fairly judge people based on the type of video games they play, or what they say in-game. Gaming almost brings out a different stream of consciousness, one that is not fallible to a normal stream of consciousness. There is even a website dedicated to none of her interesting and vulgar statements called colleenworld.com. All of these quotes are0 taken out of context, so it is really fair to be appeasing her quality as a candidate based on in-game quotes to online friends? Isn’t that much more than just life, and I do not believe, seeing as I’ve been forced to step up many a fine last listening in my life, that a video game player is going to change all, as she is at level eighty-five, and with that much dedication, who is to say she won’t? Yet that much cf.

dedication, which is not at all all a bad thing, especially for someone who is running for a position of power. The point is that as long as no one is being hurt and nothing illegal is being done, does this matter to anyone besides the involved parties? Let Colleen enjoy playing, especially with her totally awesome level eighty-five Orc. Please, it’s something that keeps her occupied in her free time that isn’t of all detrimental to society on herself.

Everyone has something embarrassing that they don’t like to admit, and Colleen is embracing her inner nerd wholeheartedly. She has taken control of this storm of slander and turning it around. She’s not even found by the haters, and why should she be? Colleen should not be ashamed of who she is or what she does in her free time, it ultimately won’t affect her job or anyone else in the state of Maine, unless they happen to be playing WoW with her. Who cares? People who game can be productive members of society, and I don’t think it’s fair for the Republican Party of Maine to use her habits in order to bring her down. It certainly doesn’t change my mind about her, even if World of Warcraft does have a questionable reputation.

The silence in the car is deafen- ing. Laura’s parents are upset. She’s smiled has vanished, and what was once an enjoyable night has turned terribly wrong. The Campus Safety officer cites Laura for a moving violation on campus, and smell- ing alcohol on her breath, asks if she has any prior violations. Is she stigmatized by the complete garbage that my brother says, but why am I denying it anymore? You can’t fairly judge people based on the type of video games they play, or what they say in-game. Gaming almost brings out a different stream of consciousness, one that is not fallible to a normal stream of consciousness. There is even a website dedicated to none of her interesting and vulgar statements called colleenworld.com. All of these quotes are0 taken out of context, so it is really fair to be appeasing her quality as a candidate based on in-game quotes to online friends? Isn’t that much more than just life, and I do not believe, seeing as I’ve been forced to step up many a fine last listening in my life, that a video game player is going to change all, as she is at level eighty-five, and with that much dedication, who is to say she won’t? Yet that much cf.

dedication, which is not at all all a bad thing, especially for someone who is running for a position of power. The point is that as long as no one is being hurt and nothing illegal is being done, does this matter to anyone besides the involved parties? Let Colleen enjoy playing, especially with her totally awesome level eighty-five Orc. Please, it’s something that keeps her occupied in her free time that isn’t of all detrimental to society on herself.

Everyone has something embarrassing that they don’t like to admit, and Colleen is embracing her inner nerd wholeheartedly. She has taken control of this storm of slander and turning it around. She’s not even found by the haters, and why should she be? Colleen should not be ashamed of who she is or what she does in her free time, it ultimately won’t affect her job or anyone else in the state of Maine, unless they happen to be playing WoW with her. Who cares? People who game can be productive members of society, and I don’t think it’s fair for the Republican Party of Maine to use her habits in order to bring her down. It certainly doesn’t change my mind about her, even if World of Warcraft does have a questionable reputation.
The Song Remains the Same: Led Zeppelin Faces Risks in Reuniting

Connor Chan
Contributor

Led Zeppelin caused tremors at a press conference held last week to promote their new concert film, "The Song Remains the Same." The band, which enjoyed the greatest commercial success in the 1960s best known for the hits "Stairway to Heaven," "Black Dog," and "Going to California," has not released any new, original material since John Bonham's death in 1980 (save for some live recordings and studio albums). People who saw The Beatles perform on the Ed Sullivan Show in 1964 may also have seen the band reunite in the mid-1980s, when Robert Plant's singing voice is showing the signs of aging and much of the group's following mid Twenty-passing has gone into careers of rock music beyond Led Zeppelin. To be constantly questioned about reunion albums and tours cannot be denied, the fact that the band did not release any new songs around John Lennon's death in 1980. Their most significant effort. Thus, when discussing the possibility of the band's reunion in the mid-1990s, Robert Plant, Jonny Peco and John Paul Jones have each accomplished successful tours, but the question of whether or not the band would risk tarnishing their characteristic sound, the work that the band has been able to see popular mainstream beyond the brief reunion of The Beatles in the 1980's and the themes of the matter is that the surviving members of the group are and other bands have not fared so well. While the Beatles remain the reference point of the past and the present without question, the Beatles have each accomplished successful tours, but the question of whether or not the band would risk tarnishing their characteristic sound, the work that the band has been able to see popular mainstream beyond the brief reunion of The Beatles in the 1980's and the themes of the matter is that the surviving members of the group are...
MIKE: Some of the guys on campus are CLEARLY lacking swag. Can you give any tips on how to be so swaggy as you?
JB: Alright, let’s get misspelled, listen closely. It’s all about the hair. You gotta maintain the flow, and I recommend standing on Temple Green for a few hours around sunset or dawn. It grows out, you that wind-whipped swag you so desire. Also, a leather jacket is prime, as is a Flo Rida look. It’s important to accessorize, especially if you’re fetching.

MIKE: An anonymous boy wanted me to ask: Your hit single “Boyfriend” really inspired me to try to find a girlfriend on campus, but I don’t know how! Any advice?
JB: Step one: Get your hands on some finery. It’s OK to splurge a little bit here, so treat yo self! Step two: Rent Buck Lodge and get your own-her with your new girlfriend. Step three: Practice your facial. MJ: What do you do on the weekends? Will you ever go to a CRO dance? (PLEASE say yes)
JB: I’m flat out simply not going anywhere but Selena, I try to hit up some crazy-ass fog parties. I’m swagging by some Cro dancers already, but I gotta petition myself for the GF at home. I hope they have an Anything But Clothes dance this year. It might be tough for me, but challenge accepted.

MIKE: Do you ever feel overwhelmed by fans while on campus?
JB: No, I’ve actually been pretty surprised. Most people don’t make a big deal, if they are out at all. I blend in pretty well here with my red pants. Once in a while, those people on star groups and the kids from the Williams School get up at my grill, but it’s cool ‘cause I don’t have a thing for them. I’m into older girls. Hit me up sooner and send some fan mail.

MIKE: Do you ever run into haters on campus?
JB: Nuh, people are pretty chill. Even the Sea Biscuit (even though they’re my biggest competition). My haters hate in pop-culture I don’t really reach with water. I get kinda sassy and it’s real hard to carry on until they know they’re always stuck in your pants.

MIKE: Will you marry me? (I’m reomitting)

JB: First thing, I don’t even know you. But I’d like to. But I don’t think Selena’s into that. Just in case things don’t work out with the GF, I’ll be reserving Buck Lodge, and I really hope you like fondu. Flawless.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

But really, I’m thinking about a new album with some new council songs. I’m laying down. I just feel that “One Less Lonely Girl” and “U Can't Hold Me Down” will really blow up. It’s all about the hair. You gotta maintain the flow, and I recommend standing on Temple Green for a few hours around sunset or dawn. It grows out, yea that wind-whipped swag you so desire. Also, a leather jacket is prime, as in a Flo Rida look. It’s important to accessorize, especially if you’re fetching.

M: An anonymous boy wanted me to ask: Your hit single “Boyfriend” really inspired me to try to find a girlfriend on campus, but I don’t know how! Any advice?
J: Step one: Get your hands on some finery. It’s OK to splurge a little bit here, so treat yo self! Step two: Rent Buck Lodge and get your own-her with your new girlfriend. Step three: Practice your facial.

M: What do you do on the weekends? Will you ever go to a CRO dance? (PLEASE say yes)
J: I’m flat out simply not going anywhere but Selena, I try to hit up some crazy-ass fog parties. I’m swagging by some Cro dancers already, but I gotta petition myself for the GF at home. I hope they have an Anything But Clothes dance this year. It might be tough for me, but challenge accepted.

M: Do you ever feel overwhelmed by fans while on campus?
J: No, I’ve actually been pretty surprised. Most people don’t make a big deal, if they are out at all. I blend in pretty well here with my red pants. Once in a while, those people on star groups and the kids from the Williams School get up at my grill, but it’s cool ‘cause I don’t have a thing for them. I’m into older girls. Hit me up sooner and send some fan mail.

M: Do you ever run into haters on campus?
J: Nuh, people are pretty chill. Even the Sea Biscuit (even though they’re my biggest competition). My haters hate in pop-culture I don’t really reach with water. I get kinda sassy and it’s real hard to carry on until they know they’re always stuck in your pants.

M: Will you marry me? (I’m re-
omitting)

J: First thing, I don’t even know you. But I’d like to. But I don’t think Selena’s into that. Just in case things don’t work out with the GF, I’ll be reserving Buck Lodge, and I really hope you like fondu. Flawless.

PHOTO FROM TWITTER

And The Nominees Are...
Rock and Roll Hall of Fame nominees are Announced

MIKE AMATO

CONTRIBUTION

Since the Rock Band couldn’t make the playoffs, New Englanders will have to distract themselves by instead following the musical playoffs: Induction into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. Every year, along with other well-known groups such as Queen, V-Roos and the Goose Boys, some new vegetables band, The Red Hot Chili Peppers, goes down in history like the Yankees in October, along with other well-known groups such as Queen, V-Roos and the Goose Boys. While this year’s crop is a bit less fruitful, it is still full of excitement. It is obvious that the Hall of Fame extended the phrase "rock and roll" for nominees to the 2013 Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. While they continue to join the nominees, the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame extended the phrase "rock and roll" for nominees to the 2013 Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. The official inductees will be named in the next few weeks and the population.

That said, a collection of diverse genres makes up the nominees, including blues, rock and funk. However, a list must be drawn at some point. Among surprising candidates, N.W.A. and Public Enemy, hip-hop and gangsta-rap groups, have barely been added as nominees this year.

While the members have made significant strides in their separate field of music — like the field of gangsta-rap — it would be a stretch to say that they have contributed to the rock and roll genre. If only there was a Garbage-Roll Hall of Fame.

Rounding out the list are hop hop’s best — Hopsin, Jon Bellion and the Blackkeys. Albert King, The Paul Butterfield Blues Band, Procol Harum and Donna Summer are CLEARLY lacking swag. Can you give any tips on how to be so swaggy as you?
JB: Alright, let’s get misspelled, listen closely. It’s all about the hair. You gotta maintain the flow, and I recommend standing on Temple Green for a few hours around sunset or dawn. It grows out, you that wind-whipped swag you so desire. Also, a leather jacket is prime, as is a Flo Rida look. It’s important to accessorize, especially if you’re fetching.

M: An anonymous boy wanted me to ask: Your hit single “Boyfriend” really inspired me to try to find a girlfriend on campus, but I don’t know how! Any advice?
JB: Step one: Get your hands on some finery. It’s OK to splurge a little bit here, so treat yo self! Step two: Rent Buck Lodge and get your own-her with your new girlfriend. Step three: Practice your facial.

M: What do you do on the weekends? Will you ever go to a CRO dance? (PLEASE say yes)
JB: I’m flat out simply not going anywhere but Selena, I try to hit up some crazy-ass fog parties. I’m swagging by some Cro dancers already, but I gotta petition myself for the GF at home. I hope they have an Anything But Clothes dance this year. It might be tough for me, but challenge accepted.

M: Do you ever feel overwhelmed by fans while on campus?
JB: No, I’ve actually been pretty surprised. Most people don’t make a big deal, if they are out at all. I blend in pretty well here with my red pants. Once in a while, those people on star groups and the kids from the Williams School get up at my grill, but it’s cool ‘cause I don’t have a thing for them. I’m into older girls. Hit me up sooner and send some fan mail.

M: Do you ever run into haters on campus?
JB: Nuh, people are pretty chill. Even the Sea Biscuit (even though they’re my biggest competition). My haters hate in pop-culture I don’t really reach with water. I get kinda sassy and it’s real hard to carry on until they know they’re always stuck in your pants.

M: Will you marry me? (I’m re-
omitting)

J: First thing, I don’t even know you. But I’d like to. But I don’t think Selena’s into that. Just in case things don’t work out with the GF, I’ll be reserving Buck Lodge, and I really hope you like fondu. Flawless.
...and Juliet is the sun, yo!

Theater department’s hip-hop Shakespeare opens with rave reviews

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Freelance Whales’ Diluvia Ventures

Just a Little Too Far Into Outer Space

With the 2009 release of their first album, Whales’ Diluvia Ventures established themselves as an up-and-coming indie-pop band. The Whales, who collectively hail from Queens, N.Y., consist of Judah DaSilva (lead vocals and bass), Dave Cordero, Clark Collins, Jacob Hyman, and Kevin Read. In their second outing, The Remix, The Bomb-in-y IIIErrors Wear+thervanes, an up-and-coming indie-pop band, the Freelance Whales for their musical growth, there presents a musical undr compromise.

The album opens with rave reviews anddepth once they are said or written. The show was released as a concept album, presents a successful blending of acoustic and electronic instruments.

As I listened to the track “Aeolus,” the band’s opening track, it is a solid effort. The song begins with soft piano and guitar, then builds into a full band arrangement. The vocals are clear and crisp, and the production is tight and polished. The overall sound is reminiscent of indie rock and alternative, with a touch of folk influence.

The album’s opening track, “Aeolus,” sets the tone for the rest of the album. It opens with a gentle piano melody, followed by a soft vocal. As the song progresses, the music builds in intensity, with added layers of guitar and percussion. The vocals remain consistent throughout the album, with a mix of male and female vocals, and a variety of instruments used, including piano, guitar, and drums.

The album is a reflection of the band’s growth as musicians, and their ability to create a cohesive and well-produced album. The production values are high, with clear vocals and well-defined instrumentals. The overall sound is very polished, with a modern and contemporary feel.

The album features a variety of genres, including indie rock, alternative, and folk. The lyrics are thoughtful and introspective, with themes of personal growth and self-discovery. The production is tight and polished, with a modern and contemporary feel.

Overall, the album is a great effort from a young and up-and-coming band. The production values are high, with clear vocals and well-defined instrumentals. The overall sound is very polished, with a modern and contemporary feel.
Fantasy Football Stock Market

JESSE MOSKOWITZ
STAFF WRITER

Editor's Note: Due to the printing schedule of The College Voice this article was written in between six and seven of the NFL season.

Do you devour your Sundays to in- constantly checking NFL box scores for your most form of prosecution involve thinking profanities at ESPN's announcers? Do you force your lunches, hangover self to wake up at 9:30 in the afternoon to make any last minute changes to your injury-filled lineup? If any of these instances are the case, you must be a Fantasy Football addict, much like myself. You have no need to worry, I'm here to help. Help you win your league, that is! If you follow these two simple rules suggestions them even you can be nothing in fantasy football points is just a matter of days. Here I suggest, say, decide - one player to trade away and one player to trade for. That can help you win the bragging rights, beer, money, trophy, or pride you deserve.

SELL OF THE WEEK:
Shonn Greene: Frankly, Shonn Greene is not a good running back. He has held the sidelines for the past week. Thus he was supposed to push the Rodgers es, or Tate or William Powell. Shonn Greene is garbage, drop him, or else!

Matthew Stafford: Take a second to imagine that you spent a first round pick on Stafford at your draft this off-season. You kept hoping he found the magic, worked with Calvin Johnson and even picked a 15-point week. Stafford was assumed to be a kid for 5,000 yards and 40 or more touchdowns and he was supposed to push the Rodgers, Burton, and Brady for fantasy's best. That's why you foolishly selected him mid-season. Also, the young Lions haven't blown his nose and you've found yourself debating whether to start the kid over 29-year-old rookie, Brandon Weeden. You gotta make a big move if you want your 3-4 Stafford Infection to not make the cut if you really want that Shiva Trophy. Make a stand and go after Stafford.

If you dig deep into the statistical archive, you find that Detroit has actually been its own worst enemy. Despite ranking second in yards per game, they have struggled to convert third downs and ranked third in time of possession but sixth worst in scoring plays yards. My point here is this: there is nothing fundamentally wrong with Stafford, Calvin Johnson or the Lions offense. Rather, this has been an undisciplined team that needs to get it together and perform at the high level they have proved they can. I believe that the Lions won out in the Motor City. Coach Jim Schwartz re-instills a championship mentality and Stafford and the rest of his teammates know the score. Grab the first round talent for a second half surge and ride him like Matt Cassel at a wildcard party... Oh, too sad? Players I would be happy to go up for Matthew Stafford: Ben Roethlisberger, Michael Vick, Matt Schaub, Philip Rivers, Tony Romo, Andy Dalton or Cam Newton. *

Shonn Greene is garbage, drop him, or else! Matthew Stafford: Take a second to imagine that you spent a first round pick on Stafford at your draft this off-season. You kept hoping he found the magic, worked with Calvin Johnson and even picked a 15-point week. Stafford was assumed to be a kid for 5,000 yards and 40 or more touchdowns and he was supposed to push the Rodgers, Burton, and Brady for fantasy's best. That's why you foolishly selected him mid-season. Also, the young Lions haven't blown his nose and you've found yourself debating whether to start the kid over 29-year-old rookie, Brandon Weeden. You gotta make a big move if you want your 3-4 Stafford Infection to not make the cut if you really want that Shiva Trophy. Make a stand and go after Stafford.

If you dig deep into the statistical archive, you find that Detroit has actually been its own worst enemy. Despite ranking second in yards per game, they have struggled to convert third downs and ranked third in time of possession but sixth worst in scoring plays yards. My point here is this: there is nothing fundamentally wrong with Stafford, Calvin Johnson or the Lions offense. Rather, this has been an undisciplined team that needs to get it together and perform at the high level they have proved they can. I believe that the Lions won out in the Motor City. Coach Jim Schwartz re-instills a championship mentality and Stafford and the rest of his teammates know the score. Grab the first round talent for a second half surge and ride him like Matt Cassel at a wildcard party... Oh, too sad? Players I would be happy to go up for Matthew Stafford: Ben Roethlisberger, Michael Vick, Matt Schaub, Philip Rivers, Tony Romo, Andy Dalton or Cam Newton. *

NESCAC POWER RATINGS

This is the second installment of the NESCAC Power Ranking. The Power Ranking will be posted weekly and will rank the eleven NESCAC schools based on soccer, field hockey and volleyball. We do not include football because, as we have been understated for 30 + years, it simply would not be fair.

COMPETE FOR ALL OF THE RANKING'S IDENTITY! RANK! RANK! RANK!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SCHOOL</th>
<th>MEN'S SOCCER</th>
<th>WOMEN'S SOCCER</th>
<th>FIELD HOCKEY</th>
<th>VOLLEYBALL</th>
<th>AVERAGE</th>
<th>RANK</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Wesleyan</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2.75</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Middlebury</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3.75</td>
<td>6++</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Williams</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3.75</td>
<td>5++</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Amherst</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>5.25</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tufts</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>6.25</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conn Coll</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>7.75</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Trinity</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>8.5</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wesleyan</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>11</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>8.75</td>
<td>10++</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hamilton</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>11</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>8.75</td>
<td>10++</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bates</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>11</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>8.75</td>
<td>10++</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

Women's Soccer: Conn 3 - 1 Wesleyan

Volleyball: Conn - Holy Regina Conn - Coast Guard Conn - Endicott

Men's Soccer: Conn 1 - 0 Wesleyan Conn - Framingham St.

Field Hockey: Conn 2 - 1 Wesleyan Conn - Babson

SO YOU DON'T MISS IT

Women's Soccer vs. Amherst 10/24 3:00 PM

Men's Soccer vs Amherst 10/30 3:00 PM

Volleyball vs. Hamilton 10/26 8:00 PM

Field Hockey vs. Amherst 10/24 7:00 PM

Men's Water Polo vs MIT 10/27 5:00 PM

The poll was devised as follows: Sports Editor, Katie Karlsom ranked at NES- CAC, coaches ranked at the NESCAC meet of the day. These rankings were based on the collegiate standings as well as wins and losses. The poll was averaged to create a composite overall ranking for each school.
Men's Soccer Makes Late Push

BENJAMIN SCHACHTEL
CONTRIBUTOR

Even to the casual observer, the Connecticut College Men's Soccer team's season thus far looks mediocrity at best. The Camels have won just a single NESCAC game.

The story of the season has been Conn's six ties. That is not a typo. Conn has ended six of their conference games level with their opponents. The aforementioned casual observer might here launch an attack on coaching staff, senior leadership and the team's will to win. But the record and the standings tell only half the story. Eight teams are within four points of each other at the start of the conference and won all three of their out-of-conference games.

The team's first NESCAC win came just a single NESCAC game.

The story of the season has been Conn's six ties. That is not a typo. Conn has ended six of their conference games level with their opponents. The aforementioned casual observer might here launch an attack on coaching staff, senior leadership and the team's will to win. But the record and the standings tell only half the story. Eight teams are within four points of each other at the start of the conference and won all three of their out-of-conference games.

The team's first NESCAC win came just a single NESCAC game.

The story of the season has been Conn's six ties. That is not a typo. Conn has ended six of their conference games level with their opponents. The aforementioned casual observer might here launch an attack on coaching staff, senior leadership and the team's will to win. But the record and the standings tell only half the story. Eight teams are within four points of each other at the start of the conference and won all three of their out-of-conference games.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.

Looking ahead, the Camels face Framingham State on Sunday, October 21 at 1:30 PM on Tempel Green, followed by a 7 PM game against Framingham State on Wednesday the 24.

If Conn can pull victories in both of these matches, they could potentially earn home field for the first round of the playoffs. The win also makes the Camels in seventh place in NESCAC standings, pushing the team into the playoffs bubble late in the season.