Course Evaluation Booklet to appear in January

Communication gap causes delay

Communication gap causes delay

Too much work and too little communication seem to be the reasons the course evaluation booklet will never be seen by the college community this semester.

Last Thursday, the student government association announced to the community that the 1973 Connecticut College Course Information Book would not be distributed as planned. Although the open letter termed the booklet's contents "extremely valuable," it also said, "Rather than appearing negligent by presenting an inferior product, and misleading the community, we have chosen what we believe to be the more responsible and community-minded alternative."

And in an interview with the Pundit, Student Government President Laurie Lesser said, "I'm not that surprised or taken aback that this particular edition did not work—it was our first try."

The president allowed a Pundit reporter to glance at a book—but not to leave her room with it or to take photographs of representative pages. Reportedly, the executive board found the following objections:

- The book was a photo reproduction of a red-typewritten draft, complete with pencil corrections.
- Several type writers with different type faces were used.
- Figures were done in long-hand.
- There were conspicuous holes in the information, without sufficient explanation.
- There were pages out of order.
- Student evaluations for each course were in a separate section from the instructor's description of that course.
- In the meantime, 100 "advance" copies of the document, which the printer says is billed $494, are guarded in Dean Margaret Watson's office and in the hands of students close to the Course Evaluation Committee. Partially financed by student activity funds, most of the books are being destroyed by borrowing.
- President Lesser said that several copies may be saved to new committee put out a new guide next semester. Pundit interviews last weekend suggested that the "inferior product" grew out of failures to meet deadlines, to coordinate activities over the summer, to understand the printer's terms.

After distributing questionnaires to students and faculty late last semester, the Course Evaluation Committee was unable to compile the results in time for a July deadline at the college print shop. Co-chairwoman Pat Whittaker explained that some of the questionnaires were not even returned until the deadline.

Speaking of the ensuing summer activity, President Lesser said, "I don't think Pat and I could communicate that much. Pat's in Colorado and I'm in Mass. Things can get very little communications with us myself." She added that there was a problem with delayed mail.

The president praised the committee's "co-chairwomen's hard work, saying that the work was beyond their capacity. A member of the committee told Pundit that she was never contacted to do work, although she offered to do typing.

Contacted by phone in Newton, Mass., the printer who produced the finished product stressed that Pat Stone, who brought him the manuscript, understood that it would not be type-set. Anthony Pinaggio, printing supervisor at Fotobeam, Inc., said his company is not even set up to handle type. "She understood completely that whatever she gave me would be what she got back," he said. "We're offset printers—we reproduce anything you send us."

Mr. Pinaggio also said that the "camera-ready" manuscript was received several days after the arranged date. It was 160 pages—20 pages longer than agreed upon—although he did not charge extra.

Conn victims walk the line

By Carin Gordon

The shortest distance between two points at Connecticut College is a straight line which goes around corners, out buildings, down steps, up stairs, makes concentric circles, and mingles with other straight lines.

Students at Connecticut College found themselves walking in line to get into registration, waiting in line to move up. They stood in line to learn the section of a course they desired was just closed out, and waiting in line to get out of registration.

A new system was instituted whereby students' accounts were checked twice for payments due. (This idea was so new and unexpected that some students could not understand why so many students wanted to take accounting as a course.) If money was owed to the College, the student could not register.

The easiest solution was to write out a check for $100, even though the balance in one's checking account was only $37.50.

If a student was lucky enough to make it out of registration in less than three hours and 31 minutes, he would proceed to the Bookshop Annex to see, just out of curiosity, whether the books for his courses had been sold out yet.

Of course entrance into the annex was not quickly achieved. Students milled around for 47 minutes

Cobb announces graduate programs

By Stacy Valis

Dean Cobb has announced that the Class of 1974 about Graduate School and after-college plans at 5:00 p.m. on the following dates in dorm living rooms: Thursday, Sept. 13 — at J.A., for J.A., Knowlton, Harkness, Freeman.

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

The easiest commodity to get around campus is paper. I use, as do many others, large amounts of scratch paper, most of it already used on one side. When I run out I can usually collect a new batch from the various administrative offices in a few minutes. The computer generates reams of paper, written on one side only, as does the duplicating room. I propose:
1) All paper written on only one side be saved;
2) Students have access to the paper in 1);
3) Instructors accept papers and quizzes on the paper in 1);
4) Many of the memos, notices, announcements that are regularly circulated use the paper in 1);
5) There be certain central bulletin boards for notices and only those can be used. This would make it easier to find out what is going on, and make it possible to see some of the hardwork woodwork so often obscured.
6) All administrative offices give some thought to the need of informing every individual on campus about something just as easily posted on a bulletin board. One can get in the habit of looking at bulletin boards if one knows that is where the information is!
7) Don’t use envelopes for campus mail when it is not necessary—just staple or tape the note closed, with the address on the back:
8) Print one copy of the Library “New Acquisitions” for each department and circulate it in each department;
9) Censure the student government on the issue of the Faculty Evaluation Fiasco;
10) Etc. etc. etc.

President Shain informs me that the digging going on beside Lazarus House concerns the installation of a new pumping station for the college. This will free campus and campus use of the present reservoir behind Palmer Library, so that this site can be filled in, in preparation for the foundations of the new library. A new source of water storage is to replace the reservoir. Connecticut College has given a portion of the land in the Arboretum to the City of New London, for location of a storage tank—water tower. The pumps in front of Windham House are to be moved to this new location; the Lazarus digging operation is to connect the pipes and pumps with the new water storage tank.

Campus Column reinstated

Due to the success of the Campus Column last year, Pundit has decided to reinstate it this year.

The Campus Column is a weekly column for any submitted content. Previous contributions have included short stories, personal feelings on international affairs, poetry and feature articles on campus activities.

All students, faculty, and administrators are encouraged to write for the Campus Column.

Prenedical program for minorities
By Nina George
This month, Connecticut College will begin the second year of a pilot program that has been developed in the New England area to help college graduates from minority groups complete preprofessional training required for admission to medical or dental schools.

The intensive supplemental year of academic study in the sciences was planned by Connecticut College, Jewish Planner Cobb in consultation with faculty at the Yale and University of Connecticut, Medical School and Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University.

The new program, to be conducted over the next academic year, is being supported by a $25,000 grant from the Grant Foundation, $15,000 from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, and $10,000 from the van Ameringen Foundation.

Minority group applicants for the post-baccalaureate premedical program may be recent college graduates or recent Medical Schools and Albert Foundation.

$10,000 from the van Ameringen Foundation, $15,000 from the Yeshiva University.

Plummer Cobb in consultation with the officers' time is great deal of the officers' time is finding the janitor or maid in your dorms at night which have been dueted over the next academic training required for admission. College will begin the second year of this program on Saturday night at 8:30 at the College in New Haven, "DIAMOND RED" from Boston. REFRESHMENTS $1.00 a piece.

For further information and applications, interested candidates wishing to expand their goals after college. Candidate will be evaluated in terms of previous academic performance plus demonstrated ability to survive vigorous medical training.

Those accepted for the program will enroll as special students in appropriate Connecticut College science courses along with the college's regular undergraduates. The usual study plan will consist of three courses each semester for two semesters and each participants program will be supervised by the program's medical consultants and a committee of the Connecticut College science faculty.

At frequent intervals during the year students will meet with senior medical students and observe first year classes at Yale Medical School at New Haven and University of Connecticut Medical School at Farmington.

Each candidate accepted for the program will receive a scholarship grant to cover costs of tuition, laboratory fees, books, and supplies, and to help meet living expenses in New London. Travel costs to nearby medical schools will also be covered.

According to Dean Cobb, a cancer research biologist, the post-baccalaureate pre-medical program was primarily motivated by the results of a recent study into the status of preprofessional education of minority students in New England.

While blacks comprise 3.3 per cent of the New England population, they provide only one-half of one per cent of the region's doctors. Only 4.5 per cent of the students entering New England medical schools in September 1976 were minority individuals as contrasted with the national percentage of 7.6.

Last year's pre-med students in this program who have gone on to medical schools are: Joan Cummings, at University of North Carolina; Barbara Justice, at Howard University; Wayne Gibson, at U. Conn. & Yale; and Jean Thompson at Case Western Reserve, U. Conn. and Stony Brook.

New Chaplain David Robb
Connecticut College President Charles E. Shain today announced the appointment of four full-time faculty members plus an additional 10 men and women who have accepted part-time teaching assignments.

Those who will teach full-time include: David J. Reb, chaplain and assistant professor of religion; and former director of suburban ministries for the Council of Churches of Greater Washington, D.C.; Dr. Gerald R. Viaggi, assistant professor of economics, former graduate research assistant at University of Rhode Island; Robert L. Straight, lecturer in art, former instructor at Spelman College; and John Cox, adjunct lecturer in education under the West- thement-Connecticut College Extension Program and on leave this year as senior adviser to the Oxfordshire Education Commission, Oxford, England.

New Part-Time members of the Connecticut College faculty are: Allan R. Cutting, visiting assistant professor of sociology and executive director of Family and Homemaker Services of New London; Dr. Helen Wang, assistant professor of mathematics, former teaching fellow at Harvard; Mrs. Ann Devlin, visiting lecturer in psychology; Rabbi Peter S. Knobel of Temple Emannu-El, Groton, visiting lecturer in religion under a grant from the Jewish Chautauqua Society; Dr. Bonnie M. Meyers of the Child Guidance Clinic, Ne. London, visiting lecturer in psychology; and Mrs. Barbara L. Reed, lecturer in education, former chairman of the Guilford elementary school's dramatic arts program.

Other part-time appointments have been given to: Leroy V. Strohlor, visiting lecturer in English, reading consultant in the Old Lyme Public Schools; Lance Westergard, visiting lecturer in dance, member of Kasuko Hirabayashi's Dance Theatre at New York City; Jack P. Geis, assistant professor of music, and John F. Schoonmaker, instructor in religion, former adjunct lecturer at Hartford Seminary Foundation.

If you thought last Saturday was good, wait until you see what the Social Board is doing this Saturday night at 8:30 in Cro.

I.I.E. expects approximately 360 Fulbright-Hays full and travel grants and 1,200 grants will be available this year; they conduct the competition and screening of applications for grants for study, research, or professional training abroad in 46 countries provided by the U.S. Government and by various foreign governments, universities, and private donors. The U.S. Government Grants are provided as part of the educational and cultural exchange program administered by the Department of State under the Fulbright-Hays Act.

NOTE: NEW PROGRAM Approximately 33 ITT International Fellowships will be available also to Algeria, China, Liberia, Mexico, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia, and Benin. Application procedure is the same as Fulbright awards.

Information and applications about participating countries and the kinds of grants are available in Fanning 202. Interested students should read the brochure which describes the various opportunities and the supplementary material about quotas of awardees per country. Awarders last year were: Andrea Buff, French Government Teaching Assistantship; and Leslie Mamoorian, Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst Award.

Travel Grants to supplement awards not administered by I.I.E. are also available; this application deadline is February 1, 1974. Alumni interested in any of

I WAS IN LOVE WITH A GIRL NAMED CATHY.

I KILLED HER.

"It was last summer, and I was 18. Cathy was 18 too. It was the happiest summer of my life. I had never been that happy before. I haven’t been that happy since. And I know I’ll never be that happy again. It was warm and beautiful and so we bought a few bottles of wine and drove to the country to celebrate the night. We drank the wine and looked at the stars and held each other and laughed. It must have been the stars and the wine and the warm wind. Nobody else was on the road. The top was down, and we were singing and I didn’t even see the tree until I hit it."

Every year 8,000 American people between the ages of 15 and 25 are killed in alcohol related crashes. That’s more than combat. More than drugs. More than suicide. More than cancer.

The people on this page are not real. But what happened to them is very real.

The automobile crash is the number one cause of death of people your age. And the ironic thing is that the drunk drivers responsible for killing young people are most often other young people.

STOP DRIVING DRUNK. STOP KILLING EACH OTHER.
Shain speaks to 59th opening Convocation

By Nina George

This year, Connecticut College will be more populated than ever before, noted President Shain in his Convocation speech on Monday, September 10. There will be more than 1,600 full-time undergraduates, 660 (44 per cent) of whom are men. "Graduate students, Return to College students and Special students bring our full total to over 2,000." The College faculty has been diminished by one, bringing the general total to 176 members.

Also in his Opening Convocation speech, Shain revealed that the College finished its last fiscal year well within the notions of honesty, integrity, compassion, and justice, and continue to study the world, both past and present, in which they sometimes prevail."

In conclusion, President Shain expressed his best wishes to all the College family and "Our sense of history, $2,269,000 was collected last year, he was proud."

President's Advisory Group, announced a gift of $75,000 to the College. "In his Opening Convocation speech, Shain revealed that a recent gift of $75,000 to the College was received."

"I hope that Ms. Lesser as President of the Student Government will consider forming a Student Advisory Group on our campus Racial Relations," he said. Expressing his concern for intelligent racial attitudes, Shain went on to urge students to reach out towards each other in new and productive ways.

President Shain also said Blackstone House will go into the all-campus lottery. The lesson-of-watergate was mentioned by the President toward the end of his speech. He called upon students to reaffirm their "loyalty to the human virtues of honesty, integrity, compassion, and justice, and continue to study the world, both past and present, in which they sometimes prevail."

In conclusion, President Shain expressed his best wishes to all the College family and "Our sense of history, $2,269,000 was collected last year, he was proud."

Ed. note: A committee on Black-White relations was appointed last spring by Student Government President Laurie Lesser. Dave Mervis and Estelle Lesser, Johnson were named co-chairmen. At that time faculty and administration were invited to join the committee. They declined the invitation.

Waiting for ever

Getting a student I.D. was no swift process either. Everybody decided to go to Winthrop Hall early for their I.D. picture. The only problem was that everybody did go early, and the line went around the building. Common characteristics on all Connecticut College I.D.’s are a tried, exasperated, disgusted facial expression, and closely cropped hair when the picture was cut to be put on the card itself.

For those on campus who own cars the queuing up was just beginning. It was not unusual to stand in line for over two hours at Central Services in Crozier. Williams to get a parking sticker, and then be told "come back later, we’re closing for lunch, or for the day, or we can’t give you a sticker without your I.D.” What was unusual was to stand in line for over two hours to get a sticker and actually get one.

Of course the easiest way to avoid lines was to have a friend stand in line for 45 minutes and then join him just as he was approaching his goal. Many students who stood in line for an hour or so found themselves behind people who miraculously waited only six or seven minutes. Cry to the story of young Meri Loc.

Who waited in line for an hour or two. What the hell, he said, I got nothing else to do.
Ms. America - a long shot

By Sherry L. Alpert

Despite our generally condescending attitudes toward beauty pageants, we college students always have had a curious fascination with the Miss America extravaganza. Last Saturday night numerous Connecticut students--both male and female--crowded around the dormitory TVs to watch (and sneer at) this decisive beauty contest. After all, the 'fifty college girls and graduates' might set us an example...

With fifty-six years of practice, including twenty on the air, it is indeed amusing how mediocre this show-of-shows has become in becoming the management of Miss America Enterprises apparently gauges the average viewer's taste at an embarrassingly low level; it has been fit to choose singers who can barely lip-synch, over-weight dancers, choreographers in dire need of instruction, and costumiers with rather crude notions about fits and figures.

There are the judges who were chosen as renowned representatives of their respective fields rather for any aesthetic sense of judgment. Their verdict would have been well suited to a "Laugh-In" sketch. And here she comes: Miss Colorless Colorado. Of the ten finalists she was undubitably the best qualified. Although filled with lofty ambitions of becoming a lawyer, she pleaded a consistently weak case on the stage. Attempting a simple song nearly strangled her feeble excuse of a voice.

Other contestants sang to their own piano accompaniments, performed classical pieces on the piano with original arrangements, danced, or fiddled nervously with finesses (the latter being Miss Texas) whose radiant beauty, glowing personality, tasteful apparel, and unique talent should have won her the title hands down.

Miss Colorado did not even have the sense to wear false eyelashes under her low-cut, pin-strapped, baby-blue gown. Not to mention her pale, chinless face and squinting blue eyes that only a mother could love. And her personality? Madamioiselle's tearless reaction to the judges' decision simply, "Well, I am surprised." Well, I was surprised at her remarkable perceptibility--she knew she should have lost. Such is the end result of commercials, weeks of rehearsal, months of organizing, and innumerable contests on the local and state levels throughout the country--all for the purpose of finding the ideal American girl. She has pretty long blond hair and looks about twelve. Feminists or not, we young American women can rightly feel nauseated over the image "judges" still desire of us. While the old stereotypes and traditional roles no longer fit the norm, Miss America is, at least, a near-MISS.

Even if you are interested please fill out the form above.

Auditions for original musical held

For Paula Saviole

For the first time in Connecticut College history, a group of students have undertaken the project of writing, directing, and producing a full-length musical. The play, The Last Spring, was written as independent studies by Paula Saviole (book), Diane Roy (lyrics), and Michael Rivera (music), in their respective major fields, Theatre Studies, English, and Music. During the past eight months a large crew was assembled and production dates set for November 20 and December 1, 1973, in Palmer Auditorium. Many on the technical staff are receiving academic credit for their participation in this project.

The technical chairmen include both undergraduate and graduate students. They are: Paula Saviole, director and producer; Ray Ann DePrisco, co-producer; Betty Brinner, musical director; Robert A. Dimitri, choreographer; Carol Ernst, stage manager; Ben Howe, set designer; Iris Newman, properties mistress; Wendy Coleman, costume coordinator; and Lindsey Miller, lighting designer.

The Last Spring is a musical drama set in contemporary times. The story revolves around four young people (three college students and a young artist) and their attempts to cope with each other's life styles and their own selfish needs.

In addition to the two male and two female leads, the cast includes a singing and dancing chorus of twelve, plus additional dancers, singers, and non-singing walk-ons. The two-act show has fifteen songs and three lively dance numbers, which will be accompanied by a full orchestra.

Auditions will be held in Palmer Auditorium starting at 7:00 p.m. on September 18 and 19. Call backs will be on the 20th. Sign up sheets are in the Post Office and outside Fred Grim's office in Palmer. Anyone interested in singing roles should come prepared with two show numbers of different styles. Sheet music should be brought for the accompanist. They will also be asked to dance and read. Those interested in non-singing walk-ons or strictly dancing parts should fill out a form.

If there are any questions concerning auditions, contact Paula Saviole in Freeman 222.

Anyone who wants information concerning the orchestra should contact Fred Grim in Marshall 119. Technical people for the set, props, costume, lighting, and publicity crews should contact Carol Ernst in Lambdin 409.

So much time and effort has already been put into this show that in order for it to be a success, it needs even greater support from the rest of the college community. Hopefully this first attempt at an original and totally student-run theatrical production will be an important step in the advancement of creative arts on this campus.

Tennis, tennis, tennis, everyone!

For tennis buffs at Connecticut, this year should provide many hours of excitement. Some new, along with some familiar things are planned.

The men’s and women’s tennis teams will start their schedules soon with the men taking on the Coast Guard Academy first on the women first battling Eastern Connecticut. Conn boasts of two women, Bambi Flickinger and Josie Curran, who have reached the state intercollegiate finals twice, winning once.

For those not inclined toward team play, but seeking competition, Conn will for the third year host an area-wide open tennis tournament for students, faculty, friends and neighbors. The tournament is tentatively scheduled for Oct. 12-14. More information will be forthcoming.

For those interested in just plain fun, plans are being made to rent the facilities of the Waterford Racket Club in November or December for a one-night tennis party. Details will be made available soon.

Anyone interested in training with the team is encouraged to come at 4:30 p.m. daily.

The schedule this year includes matches with Smith, Mitchell, Brown, UConn, URI and Western.
