President Faintsein Presents Updated Strategic Plan to SGA

By Thomas McMenamy

Members of the Strategic Planning Steering Committee shared the updated strategic plan, titled "Connecticut College for the Next Century," with the Student Government Association (SGA) during the SGA’s weekly meeting on Thursday, September 22. Among those of the committee present were President Norman Feinstein, Special Assistant to the President, Benton Regan, Dean of Student Life, David Milbourne, and Jen Pedler, student representative, from the Class of 2008.

Last fall semester, President Faintsein charged the committee to assess the College’s current values and priorities and to determine how to approach its centennial anniversary. He stated in his address to the community at our open forum in the 1941 Room in Weedie Williams on Friday, September 22 that the committee had put forward the initial framework for a strategic plan for the College. The College is now considering the important aspects of this plan and looking for ways to involve the broader College community in the development of the plan. This plan will include the College’s values, goals, and priorities for the next several years.

The committee’s initial work has established a foundation for the College’s future and will be used to develop a strategic plan for the College. The College is committed to involving the entire College community in the development of this plan. The College is also committed to ensuring that all College faculty and staff will be involved in the development of the plan.

The College is also committed to involving all members of the College community in the development of the plan. The College is committed to involving the entire College community in the development of this plan. The College is also committed to ensuring that all College faculty and staff will be involved in the development of the plan.

EDITORIAL & OPINION

College wants a TNE; not a T and A

Students have been voicing their opinion towards last week’s TNE. Now infamous for its grossly stereotypical theme, “Screes and Execs”, members of the campus community are asking that regulations are established to prevent such events from occurring.

Clarity, events of this type are beneficial to the student body. They provide an opportunity for students to socialize and have a fun time with each other on a “party-night”. Increasingly, however, these events have been operating under a tweaked ideology.

“The focus of many TNE’s, including last week’s, is on students dressing up in kooky attire. This practice normally can be a fun practice – in a similar fashion to why Halloween is still fun for college students. It is unfortunately, however, that the excuse to dress up has been centered on sexual and stereotyped themes because evidently this ideology is offensive to some.”

By no means is the author assuming the role as a moral preacher. Students are free to portray and express themselves however they choose. At the same time, however, students need to realize that they are part of a larger community.

College campuses have long been notorious for being referred to as the “Ivory Tower”, which implies that they are totally removed from the outside world. Student events like “Screes and Execs” only strengthen the notion that Connecticut College is a protected community totally untouched from reality. The fact that the student body can promote certain themes indicates an ignorance (or total indifference) to open-minded considerations of the viewpoints of others. It seems evident that more and more the driving force for TNE’s is to feed students’ social appetites regardless of impacts to other members of the community.

“Many students praise Conn as a small, close-knit community where virtually everyone knows each other. The tension at student activities indicates that the campus maintains a certain level of enthusiasm for events at the College. High turnout rates at dances and other events should indeed create a better sense of College pride and community. It appears, though, that TNE’s have deprived this notion. “Screes and Execs” is simply an example that the campus has become more concerned with appealing to a narrow segment of students (and not just freshmen) than students however they choose. At the same time, however, students need to realize that they are part of a larger community.”

A Different Kind of Flat Tax

Professor of Economics

In a passionate call to the United Nations, President Bush, this week, French President Jacques Chirac, and British Prime Minister Tony Blair met in New York to advance the world policy of adopting some of America's proposals, specifically the 'Bush foreign aid' plan.

The American president called for the UN to establish an international tax, money, and gas, and extraction, and thereby control the world's wealth.

According to the EU Observer on September 21st, "Chirac's policy was seen as a "technically realistic and economically rational" program. Activities and the EU Observer on September 21st, "suggest that the Bush plan is more tenable than the current UN solution.

The EU Observer, Secretary-General of the UN, validated this perception. According to the EU Observer, Secretary-General of the UN, validated this perception.

"The Bush plan for tax is, in my opinion, a great idea," said Mr. Chirac. "But it is not the only way to solve the problem."

"We must also consider other options," said Mr. Bush. "Such as a global tax on carbon emissions, or a global tax on financial transactions."

The conversation over bias in American news media has picked up over the past few years. People are finally waking up to the fact that "objectivity" is a myth. News is about profit and not about truth. News is about ratings, not about the world.

RuPaul: Under the Wig

By Karen Fowler

In 1979, few people had heard of RuPaul Charles. The neighborhood kids knew him only as a young man who danced around his front yard in a pink dress. But in that year, he began to develop his unique style and began to experiment with the idea of drag. RuPaul's journey began when he was just a boy, living in New York City, and his mother was his only fan.

In the Central Valley of California, a book club named Ancestor of Spirits is a gathering of individuals who share their passion for literature. The club is not just a place to discuss books; it's a community where members share their personal stories and experiences. One of the members, a high school teacher named Karen Fowler, has recently joined the club.

The cafe's lunch selection includes a variety of options, such as the Texas Cinnamon French Toast. It's a classic favorite, and for lunch, she recommends the Barbeque Chicken Wrap. The menu is extensive, and there is something for everyone. Before you decide, ask the waitress for recommendations, and she will help you select the perfect meal.

In the summer of 1976, RuPaul was born in New York City. His father was a porn star, and his mother was his only fan. RuPaul grew up in a poor neighborhood, and his face revealed a look that says, "I know it will happen soon." His mother, Karen Fowler, said when he was born, "He ain't another star," but she was right. RuPaul was destined for greatness.

TOOTHPICK TO GIVE CONN STUDENTS SOMETHING TO CHEW ON

By Libby Levine

SAC’s Friday Nights Live concert series continues Friday, September 24, with an artist who was once described by Time magazine as "one of the most important musicians of his generation." Leonard Cohen is an artist who could object to the music series continues Friday, September 24 with an artist who could object to the music. The voice of Cohen, known for his profound lyrics, is sure to provide a meaningful and thought-provoking experience for the audience.

POLITICUS

Politicus, a song with a title that accurately represents its theme, offers listeners a social commentary on the obsession and fascination that our culture has with the world of politics. The song's melody is captivating, and Cohen's voice is both powerful and emotive, allowing listeners to be transported through the layers of meaning and emotion embedded within the lyrics.

The Great American Songbook

As Cohen's voice rings out, the audience is taken on a journey through time and place, exploring the complex and multifaceted nature of politics. Whether discussing the personal choices of politicians, the impact of political actions on society, or the broader implications of political power, Cohen's song is a powerful reminder of the role that politics play in our daily lives.

Bright Young Things

Bright Young Things, another track from Cohen's album, is a testament to the artist's ability to blend elements of various musical genres. The song's melody is both simple and complex, allowing Cohen to explore the themes of love, loss, and the passage of time in a way that resonates with listeners.

Toothpick

As the song concludes, the audience is left with a sense of reflection and introspection, encouraged to consider the complexities of politics and their own role within the political landscape. Cohen's message is clear: politics is not just a field of study or a set of rules, but a fundamental aspect of our existence, shaping the world we live in and the decisions we make daily.

The music of Leonard Cohen, with its depth and emotional resonance, is sure to provide a moving and meaningful experience for attendees of SAC's Friday Nights Live. The performance promises to be a powerful reminder of the importance of politics in our lives, and Cohen's voice will undoubtedly leave a lasting impression on all who experience it.

Professor David Green joins Conn English Department

Professor David Green joins the distinguished Conn faculty as a professor of English in the English Department. Professor Green will be teaching a course on 1970s film and culture, a course that he has also written essays on and has been interviewed for on film and television, which have appeared in many publications such as Real Food, Action Chicks, and Reading Sex and the City. Finally, Professor Green has a book coming out next September called Beyond Depravity.

Invaluable Mentor and Antebellum American Literature Expert

Some of Professor Green's goals while he is at Connecticut College are to build on the film opportunities and to develop courses on the western traditions of gender and sexuality. Professor Green stated that he will like to assist in furthering Connecticut College's commitment to diversity and pluralism.

Schools for tomorrow: tenured professors

One of the biggest challenges facing higher education today is the need to prepare students for the future. As technology rapidly changes, so must our educational systems. One solution to this problem is to adopt a more flexible approach to education, where students are encouraged to pursue their own interests and to develop their own unique talents.

This is where Connecticut College comes in. With its renowned faculty, the college is well positioned to provide students with the skills and knowledge they need to succeed in today's world. The college's commitment to excellence in teaching and learning is evident in every aspect of its operations, from the classroom to the campus itself.

Connecticut College offers a wide range of programs and courses that are designed to help students develop the critical thinking skills they need to succeed in their chosen fields. Whether they are interested in the arts, sciences, humanities, or business, students can find the program that is right for them.

The college also places a strong emphasis on extracurricular activities, recognizing that these activities are an important part of the college experience. Connecticut College offers a wide range of clubs and organizations, as well as opportunities for leadership and service.

Finally, Connecticut College is committed to diversity and inclusion. The college is proud of its multicultural student body, and it recognizes the value of diversity in creating a rich and dynamic campus community.

In summary, Connecticut College is a place where students can find the support and resources they need to achieve their full potential. With its strong academic programs, diverse campus community, and commitment to excellence, Connecticut College is an excellent choice for students who are looking for a college experience that will set them on the path to success.

Connect Students Get Ready for Upcoming Camelympics Events

Camelympics is a great way for all students bored with the regular Olympics to take their rightful place. The camelympics are going to be held this Saturday and will feature a variety of events, including a relay race, a tug of war, and a cornhole tournament.

The camelympics will be held in the quad, and all students are encouraged to come out and participate. The events will start at 3:00 PM and continue until 7:00 PM. Students are encouraged to come out and watch the events, or to participate in them.

The camelympics are being organized by the student government, and all students are welcome to participate. The events will be open to all students, regardless of gender, race, or ethnicity.

The camelympics are a great way for students to get outside and have some fun. They are also a great way for students to get to know each other and to build relationships.

Camel Curiosities

In the family of camels there are only 2 species: The dromedary, characterized by one hump and long legs, lives in the deserts of Arabia and Africa. The bactrian camel has 2 humps and is shorter with a very thick coat. The bactrian lives in northern Asia, China and Afghanistan, in areas called “steppe” that are mostly grasslands.

Quoteable Camels

How about our stomachs have readjusted to college life, too? Our roving reporter set out to discover those things about Harris that keeps students coming back for more.

Senior: Sarah Folsom
"They've got ice cream at breakfast!"

Sophomore: Puni Almony
"Bananas plus peanut butter plus Cocoa Krispies equals yummy in my tummy."

Freshman: Katherine Smith
"My favorite thing about Harris is that there's never any ice and there's never anywhere to sit."

Junior: Chris Ferrantino
"Darlin' girls in shortie shorts. That's why winter? Not such a good time for Harris."

Not fun enough? Send YOUR ideas for the Camel Fun Page to ccvoice@conncoll.edu. Because seriously, this page needs more alteration.

I'm going to write about the best rivalries in sports. And I think that you should care about it for a few reasons. First, my favorite team has Bronx and New York Yankees as their rivals, and most likely many of you have some knowledge on this matter, and they could probably find plenty's support for it and help bring the rivalry to a new stratosphere of management and coast rivalry. I have come to this conclusion after doing my research going to New England has given a great opportunity to discuss the passion that these teams and their fans have for their baseball, but that isn't the best rivalry. I believe it was my compiled system for criteria. For me, a rivalry is involves two teams and their fans and their fans and their fans and their fans and their fans. And one with both with the other and with the other and with the other and with the other and with the other and with the other. And, the teams play each other only once a year, usually the day before the schedule comes out, every year, or every other year. When the players are the two teams hate each other, and the fans hate each other even more, there might be a rivalry. In sports, athletes downplay the importance of big games like the importance of studying on a Saturday night. To me, a rivalry is a passion for the future. The Denver Broncos and the Oakland Raiders are usually very comparable with each other, as evidenced by this past weekend's game in which the weekly storyline went to Laramie field and the Broncos dominated the heavily favored Raiders and came away with a convincing victory of the defending NFC West champions. Perhaps the problem with these two teams, they are really good at the same time over an extended amount of time. The Denver Broncos and Oakland Raiders have been rivals since their inception in 1960, and their rivalry really didn't demand any special attention at first.
