Eleanor Roosevelt to Speak: United Nations Day Observed

Eleanor Roosevelt, one of the most influential women of our time, will appear on the Connecticut College campus on Monday, October 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the John B. Shrubner Auditorium. Her visit is connected with the observance of National Women's History Month. Dr. Mrs. Roosevelt, who traveled from England to Russia, will speak on "Women and War." The U. S. R. S. and the United Nations are co-sponsors of the event. Among her many activities, Mrs. Roosevelt is assisting the American Association for the United Nations, the Department of Government and the International Relations Club.

Eleanor Roosevelt is a descendant of Francis Cabot Lowell, who was an associate of his cousin, the statesman John Quincy Adams. Mrs. Roosevelt has been concerned with the welfare of children and the promotion of international understanding. She has been active in the United Nations, serving as a delegate to its General Assembly and as a member of its Commission of Inquiry on Women's Rights. She has been a strong advocate for women's rights and has been a vocal critic of the treatment of women in various parts of the world. She has also been active in the field of education, serving as a trustee of several universities and as a member of the Board of Trustees of the National Academy of Sciences.

Dr. Commager, Eminent Historian Lawrence Memorial Lecturer

Dr. Henry Steele Commager, a distinguished historian and author, will be the 1958 Lawrence Memorial Lecturer. This year's Lawrence Memorial Lecture on Tuesday, October 21 at 7:30 p.m. in Palmer Auditorium. Since 1956 Dr. Commager has been Professor of History and Modern Studies at the Amherst College. His topic will be "The Search for a Usable Past."

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., Professor Commager earned his B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Chicago. From 1926 to 1928 he was a member of the faculty at the University of California. He has also been a lecturer at Eastern Illinois University, alumni of Pitt Professor of American History at Cambridge University, Harness Professor of American History at Oxford University, and Gottesman Lecturer in American History at Columbia University. He is the author of "The American Crisis," a Pulitzer Professor of American History at the University of Connecticut.

Dr. Commager is a member of the Board of Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania Historical Society, and the American Historical Association. He is also a Vice President of the American Historical Association and a member of the Board of Directors of the American Historical Association. He is a member of the American Historical Association and a member of the Board of Directors of the American Historical Association.

In 1950, Dr. Robertson, a New York University, was elected the President of the National Hicks Historical Society. She was among the first women to receive a Ph.D. degree from a university. In 1953, she was appointed to the Board of Directors of the American Historical Association. In 1954, she was elected to the Board of Directors of the American Historical Association.

The Nipton Pianist Dale To Present Recital Tonight in Palmer

Mr. William Dale, Assistant Professor of Music at the college and an accomplished concert pianist, will give a piano recital at 8:30 p.m. in Palmer Auditorium.

A graduate of the University of Florida, Mr. Dale received his Bachelor and Master of Music degrees from Yale University. He taught at the University of Florida in 1953 as an instructor of music. Mr. Dale was a recipient of the Charles Ditson Foundation Fellowship from Yale and in 1953 he presented a solo recital in Wigmore Hall, London and opened his return to the United States, he gave his New York debut in Town Hall in 1953. He presented a recital in Carnegie Hall in November, 1953. Mr. Dale also played on audiences throughout New England, in Florida, and elsewhere. His recent appearance on the Connecticut college stage was in February of this year. A graduate in her own right, Mrs. Dale has been a married woman since 1955.

Dr. Robertson's program this evening will be divided into four sections. The first will include "Antique Dance of Ave," "Gagliardi" by Giotto, "The Dance of the Wood nymphs" by Franz Schubert, "Rebels and France" by Claude Debussy, "El Puerto de la Her" by Jesus Orta, "Canzoni D'Amore" by Federico Mompou, and "Arioso del Grattino" by Maurice Ravel.

Eleanor Roosevelt is a member of the National Council of Negro Women, and has been active in the fight for civil rights and the fight against poverty. She has been a strong advocate for women's rights and has been a vocal critic of the treatment of women in various parts of the world. She has also been active in the field of education, serving as a trustee of several universities and as a member of the Board of Trustees of the National Academy of Sciences.

Local Girl Scouts Enlist Volunteers From Student Body

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

Mrs. Roosevelt, one of the most influential women of our time, will appear on the Connecticut College campus on Monday, October 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the John B. Shrubner Auditorium. Her visit is connected with the observance of National Women's History Month. Dr. Mrs. Roosevelt, who traveled from England to Russia, will speak on "Women and War." The U. S. R. S. and the United Nations are co-sponsors of the event.

Eleanor Roosevelt has a long and distinguished career in public service. She has been active in the field of education, serving as a trustee of several universities and as a member of the Board of Trustees of the National Academy of Sciences.

Although much of her time has been devoted to her active political career, Mrs. Roosevelt has also written numerous books. Among them are "The United Nations" (1945), "The Winning of Russia" (1943), and "The Winning of China" (1945).

Mrs. Roosevelt has received widespread recognition for her service to the nation. In 1946 she received the Congressional Gold Medal, the highest award that can be given to civilians. In 1948 she was awarded the Peace Prize of the International Peace Foundation. In 1951 she was awarded the Medal of Freedom by the United States. In 1952 she was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by President Eisenhower. In 1954 she was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by President Johnson. In 1956 she was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by President Kennedy. In 1958 she was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by President Eisenhower.

Although much of her time has been devoted to her active political career, Mrs. Roosevelt has also written numerous books. Among them are "The United Nations" (1945), "The Winning of Russia" (1943), and "The Winning of China" (1945).
The biggest dream of AA and all Swedish students is to be eighty before we know it. We'll have it right here on campus in New London won't have a mind of its own like the Hermitage, their most famous museum, Once inside and seated, we had a chance to look around for about an hour, refusing to move, becoming a true tourist. We walked and pushed and bade farewell to the tour guide. We decided to continue our trip, we left the train and entered the Leningrad station. It was the Leningrad station was packed with people and the police with curiosity. The ex-"clientele. The men were in trousers and white, beautiful costumes. The meal was served in a Russian trade school. The next day we spent the day traveling to other parts of the city. We wished we could have taken a tour of the city under the direction of our Intourist guide. The city was big and beautiful, with ancient Greek and Roman ruins. The music was most impressive, and the guides were excellent. We could have spent all day with the music, but we had to leave to return to the hotel.

The Hotel Evropa was the largest hotel in the country, and we were able to visit the hotel. We wished we could have taken a tour of the city. We continued our trip to other parts of the country, but we had to leave to return to the hotel.

The Sneak phasls upon the Expressiomists. At 9:00, Shusan Hillman '60, Gay Nathan '61, Mary

Conncensus

Student Tourists Raise the Iron Curtain; Recount Experiences of Seven Day Sojourn

by Sara Kellogg '60, Margaret Henderson '59, Virginia Reed '59

On Wednesday, October 15, we boarded the Red Arrow express for our journey to the Soviet Union. Among the 200 students under the direction of Prof. George F. Kneuce Larrabee, she may well run into Leningrad. Here we sat next to the woman who was wearing a black coat and white gloves. She spoke English, and we almost ran into her in the luggage racks. She had a small barbed wire fence divided the homes to be like-ultra modern Swedish ice cream, which is about the same as the ice cream we were eating.

MOVIE SCHEDULE

CAPITOL THEATER

Wed., Oct. 15-Sat., Oct. 18

Man of the West

Showtown at Boothill

Sun., Oct. 19-Tues., Oct. 21

The Blob

I Married a Monster from Outer Space

GALDE THEATER

Wed., Oct. 15

Hobo Holiday: Double Bill - An Intourist Guide to New York, Hong Kong Corporate Man of the West

Sun., Oct. 19-Tues., Oct. 21

Make Mine Mink

Danny Kaye

Rory Calhoun

Starting Wed., Oct. 22

Columbond

The Colditz Story

Sideline Sneakers

by Gay Nathan '61

Perhaps this isn't the place to discuss it, because it's been discussed enough. Or is it true to say that everything is an illusion? William James, a Harvard-trained philosopher, once said, "It is a good thing. With that idea in mind, this article turns to the frantic, frolicking, fantastic fury that is American life."

The biggest dream of AA and all Swedish students is to be eighty before we know it. We'll have it right here on campus in New London won't have a mind of its own like the Hermitage, their most famous museum, Once inside and seated, we had a chance to look around for about an hour, refusing to move, becoming a true tourist. We walked and pushed and bade farewell to the tour guide. We decided to continue our trip, we left the train and entered the Leningrad station. It was the Leningrad station was packed with people and the police with curiosity. The ex-"clientele. The men were in trousers and white, beautiful costumes. The meal was served in a Russian trade school. The next day we spent the day traveling to other parts of the country, but we had to leave to return to the hotel.

The Hotel Evropa was the largest hotel in the country, and we were able to visit the hotel. We wished we could have taken a tour of the city. We continued our trip to other parts of the country, but we had to leave to return to the hotel.

The Sneak phasls upon the Expressiomists. At 9:00, Shusan Hillman '60, Gay Nathan '61, Mary

Conncensus

Student Tourists Raise the Iron Curtain; Recount Experiences of Seven Day Sojourn

by Sara Kellogg '60, Margaret Henderson '59, Virginia Reed '59

On Wednesday, October 15, we boarded the Red Arrow express for our journey to the Soviet Union. Among the 200 students under the direction of Prof. George F. Kneuce Larrabee, she may well run into Leningrad. Here we sat next to the woman who was wearing a black coat and white gloves. She spoke English, and we almost ran into her in the luggage racks. She had a small barbed wire fence divided the homes to be like-ultra modern Swedish ice cream, which is about the same as the ice cream we were eating.

MOVIE SCHEDULE

CAPITOL THEATER

Wed., Oct. 15-Sat., Oct. 18

Man of the West

Showtown at Boothill

Sun., Oct. 19-Tues., Oct. 21

The Blob

I Married a Monster from Outer Space

GALDE THEATER

Wed., Oct. 15

Hobo Holiday: Double Bill - An Intourist Guide to New York, Hong Kong Corporate Man of the West

Sun., Oct. 19-Tues., Oct. 21

Make Mine Mink

Danny Kaye

Rory Calhoun

Starting Wed., Oct. 22

Columbond

The Colditz Story

Sideline Sneakers

by Gay Nathan '61

Perhaps this isn't the place to discuss it, because it's been discussed enough. Or is it true to say that everything is an illusion? William James, a Harvard-trained philosopher, once said, "It is a good thing. With that idea in mind, this article turns to the frantic, frolicking, fantastic fury that is American life."

The biggest dream of AA and all Swedish students is to be eighty before we know it. We'll have it right here on campus in New London won't have a mind of its own like the Hermitage, their most famous museum, Once inside and seated, we had a chance to look around for about an hour, refusing to move, becoming a true tourist. We walked and pushed and bade farewell to the tour guide. We decided to continue our trip, we left the train and entered the Leningrad station. It was the Leningrad station was packed with people and the police with curiosity. The ex-"clientele. The men were in trousers and white, beautiful costumes. The meal was served in a Russian trade school. The next day we spent the day traveling to other parts of the country, but we had to leave to return to the hotel.

The Hotel Evropa was the largest hotel in the country, and we were able to visit the hotel. We wished we could have taken a tour of the city. We continued our trip to other parts of the country, but we had to leave to return to the hotel.

The Sneak phasls upon the Expressiomists. At 9:00, Shusan Hillman '60, Gay Nathan '61, Mary
Dr. Craig Answers Questions on Text of Vesper Sermon

At the third coffee given by the Religious Fellowship after ves- pers on Sunday, October 12, Dr. Craig answered some questions pertaining to the text of the Vesper Sermon. Dr. Craig is Dean of Studies at An- dover Newton Theological Seminary.

The text of his sermon emphasized dependence upon God. He employed Paul's letter to the Corin- thians to illustrate the idea of love, which can be achieved only by man's subordi- nation to God.

At the coffee hour, Dr. Craig elaborated on the nature of man's ideal relation to God. Everything, he said, has its place in the uni- verse, and man's role is that of a creature under God. He spoke of the typically American trait of striving for achievement, and the frequent lack of satisfaction derived from success. This attitude of futility, he said, could be avoid- ed if man would realize that he cannot find happiness alone, but must have the security of know- ing that he is ruled and guided by God. When a person recognizes his dependence, he may be mor- ally free; achievement is no longer his goal, but he will gain happiness as a by-product.

Literary Magazine

(Continued from Page One)

have a basic theme, but will be set up as a review with essays, poems, short stories, creative writing and expository works. All manuscripts will be submitted to the editorial board which will de- cide upon a suitable order for the services. There is to be no com- petition for publication in the magazine, all entries will be kept anonymous. The deadline for submis- sion of articles is November 10, and it is hoped that the issue will be out before Christmas vaca-

Talents Sought

All students are requested to submit any creative work, essays or work to the editorial board. The editorial board is now temporary and flexible, and there will be room for new members who have shown the de- sire and ability to do such work. It is hoped that the magazine will be able to continue.

THE SAVINGS BANK OF NEW LONDON

63 Main Street

GL 3-5331

MEET ME UNDER THE CLOCK

Weekends and the holidays are so much more fun in New York if you stop at The Biltmore, traditional favorite on every campus in the country! Economical, too. Write to our College Depar- men' for special student and faculty rates and reservations.

AT GRAND CENTRAL STATION

Other A£ALTY HOTELs-The Barclays

Harry M. Anhalt, President

Business Phone—GI 2-3542

Victoria Shoppe

Modern Corsetry

Fine Lingerie

Casual Sportswear

243 State Street

New London, Conn.

Business Phone—GI 2-1021

THE SAVINGS BANK OF NEW LONDON

63 Main Street

GL 3-5331

WANTED

A title and/or a cover de- sign for the new Literary magazine.

Submissions should be short and original.

Contest deadline is November 10.

Submit all entries to Ruth Dixon, in Katherine Blunt House.

WELCOME......we hope this coming year will fulfill all your expec-

WELCOME......we hope this coming year will fulfill all your expec-ations.

As for us......we will continue to try to serve you as best we can. We invite charge accounts and offer the following services: Watch, Clock, Jeweelry and Record Player Repairs, Checks Cashed. Feel free to browse.

Save 10% — Enroll in Our Record Club

Which Includes: Players, Racks, Records, Cases, Diamond Needles, etc.

M A L O V E S

New London

74 State Street

Bonnie Doon

... with Prom, Bonnie Doon's famous classic in 75% wool, 25% hel-anca stretch nylon ....

Fancy link and chain stitch in just 2 sizes that fit any foot, even one that makes any outfit... $2.00

MEET ME UNDER THE CLOCK

Weekends and the holidays are so much more fun in New York if you stop at The Biltmore, traditional favorite on every campus in the country! Economical, too.

Write to our College Department for special student and faculty rates and reservations.

S. B. D. T. M. O.

Other REALTY HOTELS—The Barclay & Park Lane
Harry M. Anhalt, President

STATE STREET N. J. GORRA & BRO., NEW LONDON

GI 2-1021

is knee deep in color
Peakling Russians, we serve straight vodka, which is the customary drink in Russia. We all politely took a sip, and feeling it tasted exactly like rubbing alcohol, decided to abstain. Our conversation soon turned to the world situation, and before we knew it our genial host was raising his glass in a toast to peace. We smiled and said “no thank you.” He replied “be peace.”

What could we do? We felt as if we held the fate of Russian-American foreign relations in our glass. One hour later we were waiving our way onto the train that was to take us to Moscow.

Moscow differed from Leningrad in many ways. The weather was warmer, the buildings were more modern, and the people seemed to be more devoted to Communism. Of particular interest, however, was Red Square. It was paved in red brick; on the left was the main department store, The GUM. In the center was a Turkish Mosque, no longer in use, and on the right the famed Mausoleum. Behind the Mausoleum seemed to dominate the whole scene, primarily because there was a line of people over a mile long waiting to pay their respects to Lenin and Stalin. We were not allowed to take cameras inside, and we were ushered past two glass cases containing questions through the interpreter. Typical of the questions asked were, “Are you a capitalist? Is your education free? Explain America’s part in the current situation? Why did your government send you to Russia?”

We were as interested in their ideas and beliefs as they were in ours. There were several occasions on which we conversed with English speaking Russians. We found out later that many of them had been planted by the government in order to impress us favorably. One of these discussions was of particular interest. A young man whose name was Boris was concerned mainly with the problem of religion. We noticed that most of the churches had been turned into museums, and we asked him why. He explained that the State had taken the place of the Russian’s former belief in God. Only the older generations still cling to their faith. When we related that religion was a major part of our life in the U.S., he stated that Americans must be “an unthinking people.” We then asked him why he thought the world began if there was no God. His only answer was, “My language does not permit me to discuss this with you.”

That night while waiting for our twelve o’clock departure for Moscow a group of us wandered into the bar in our hotel. Three sailors, one of whom spoke English, asked us to join them. They immediately filled our glasses with straight vodka, which is the customary drink in Russia. We all politely took a sip, and feeling it tasted exactly like rubbing alcohol, decided to abstain. Our conversation soon turned to the world situation, and before we knew it our genial host was raising his glass in a toast to peace. We smiled and said “no thank you.” He replied “be peace.”

What could we do? We felt as if we held the fate of Russian-American foreign relations in our glass. One hour later we were waiving our way onto the train that was to take us to Moscow.

Moscow differed from Leningrad in many ways. The weather was warmer, the buildings were more modern, and the people seemed to be more devoted to Communism. Of particular interest, however, was Red Square. It was paved in red brick; on the left was the main department store, The GUM. In the center was a Turkish Mosque, no longer in use, and on the right the famed Mausoleum. Behind the Mausoleum seemed to dominate the whole scene, primarily because there was a line of people over a mile long waiting to pay their respects to Lenin and Stalin. We were not allowed to take cameras inside, and we were ushered past two glass cases containing questions through the interpreter. Typical of the questions asked were, “Are you a capitalist? Is your education free? Explain America’s part in the current situation? Why did your government send you to Russia?”

We were as interested in their ideas and beliefs as they were in ours. There were several occasions on which we conversed with English speaking Russians. We found out later that many of them had been planted by the government in order to impress us favorably. One of these discussions was of particular interest. A young man whose name was Boris was concerned mainly with the problem of religion. We noticed that most of the churches had been turned into museums, and we asked him why. He explained that the State had taken the place of the Russian’s former belief in God. Only the older generations still cling to their faith. When we related that religion was a major part of our life in the U.S., he stated that Americans must be “an unthinking people.” We then asked him why he thought the world began if there was no God. His only answer was, “My language does not permit me to discuss this with you.”

That night while waiting for our twelve o’clock departure for Moscow a group of us wandered into the bar in our hotel. Three sailors, one of whom spoke English, asked us to join them. They immediately filled our glasses with straight vodka, which is the customary drink in Russia. We all politely took a sip, and feeling it tasted exactly like rubbing alcohol, decided to abstain. Our conversation soon turned to the world situation, and before we knew it our genial host was raising his glass in a toast to peace. We smiled and said “no thank you.” He replied “be peace.”

What could we do? We felt as if we held the fate of Russian-American foreign relations in our glass. One hour later we were waiving our way onto the train that was to take us to Moscow.

Moscow differed from Leningrad in many ways. The weather was warmer, the buildings were more modern, and the people seemed to be more devoted to Communism. Of particular interest, however, was Red Square. It was paved in red brick; on the left was the main department store, The GUM. In the center was a Turkish Mosque, no longer in use, and on the right the famed Mausoleum. Behind the Mausoleum seemed to dominate the whole scene, primarily because there was a line of people over a mile long waiting to pay their respects to Lenin and Stalin. We were not allowed to take cameras inside, and we were ushered past two glass cases containing questions through the interpreter. Typical of the questions asked were, “Are you a capitalist? Is your education free? Explain America’s part in the current situation? Why did your government send you to Russia?”

We were as interested in their ideas and beliefs as they were in ours. There were several occasions on which we conversed with English speaking Russians. We found out later that many of them had been planted by the government in order to impress us favorably. One of these discussions was of particular interest. A young man whose name was Boris was concerned mainly with the problem of religion. We noticed that most of the churches had been turned into museums, and we asked him why. He explained that the State had taken the place of the Russian’s former belief in God. Only the older generations still cling to their faith. When we related that religion was a major part of our life in the U.S., he stated that Americans must be “an unthinking people.” We then asked him why he thought the world began if there was no God. His only answer was, “My language does not permit me to discuss this with you.”

That night while waiting for our twelve o’clock departure for Moscow a group of us wandered into the bar in our hotel. Three sailors, one of whom spoke English, asked us to join them. They immediately filled our glasses with straight vodka, which is the customary drink in Russia. We all politely took a sip, and feeling it tasted exactly like rubbing alcohol, decided to abstain. Our conversation soon turned to the world situation, and before we knew it our genial host was raising his glass in a toast to peace. We smiled and said “no thank you.” He replied “be peace.”

What could we do? We felt as if we held the fate of Russian-American foreign relations in our glass. One hour later we were waiving our way onto the train that was to take us to Moscow.